8. We have a legend, that when all gods ran away, only Maruts were left to assist Indra. This verse refers to this conflict. Here devas or gods are the five sense organs and Maruts are vital breaths. Indra is the self. [See Ait. Br. III.16 (XII.5). See our Introduction, vol.I. p. 190].

11. Pacat satam mahisan, dress for thee one hundred buffaloes or male animals (Sayana) ; पचत् पचेत् शतं शतसंख्याकान् महिषान् महतः—Daya.; महिष्=महन्नाम, great ones—Nigh. III. 3), ripens hundred of great things for the benefit of peopie—Daya.

Trini Saransi, the three streams ; the three cups or vessels called ahavanis for holding Soma, which has been purified or filtered into the pitcher, the dronakalasas (Sayana).

The three streams flow towards the three regions, terrestrial, midspace and the celestial, or in our physical, vital and mental complexes.

14. Vajaya sravase, ise raye, for mobility or strength, for sustenance, for food and for wealth. The first three are more or less synonymous (sravase = sravanaya, for reputation—Daya.).

Hymn-18

1. Carsaninam, pertaining to people (चर्षणीनां प्रजानां सम्बन्धिनं—Sayana).

2. Manusinam, of men, of people ; मनु: = Lord, who knows His entire creation (मन्यते चराचरं जगज्जानातीति मनु: ईश्वर:, and also one learned in disciplines of knowledge (मनुतेऽवबुध्यते शास्त्रमिति मनु: विद्वान् राजर्षि:—Daya.; or Unadi I.10).

In the Veda, one who knows is manuh, manusi (बाहुलकात्—'मन' धातोरपि । मन्यते जानातीति मनु:, मनुषी—Unadi II.119). Also pertaining to Manu (मानुषीणां मनो: सम्बन्धिनीनाम्—Sayana).

Kṛstinam, of the cultured, of men (Daya.); of people, of the institutor of sacrifice (कृष्टीनां मनुष्याणां—Sayana).

3. Dasyun, of the vicious, like thieves and teasers, those who deal in wicked actions (दस्यून् दुष्टान् चोरान्—Daya.) ; कर्महीनान् जनान्—Sayana); impious foes, See I.117.21 for arya and dasyu.

Kṛstih, persons like sons and slaves (कृष्टी: पुत्रदासादीन्—Sayana).

Aryaya, आर्याय for the son of arya, अर्य, or Lord, or the person holding property (Nigh. II.22, Nir. VI.26); अर्य ईश्वरपुत्र: ; also a dvija, the twice-born (आर्याय द्विजाय—Daya.; कर्मकृते जनाय, the one engaged in a sacrificial act—Sayana).

In this verse, the devotee begins to question the attributes and powers of Indra ; in the succeeding verse he expresses his belief in their existence. (Wilson).

8. For cumuri, dhuni, pipru, sambara and susna, see earlier notes. According to Sayana, these are Asuras or demons. (asura=clouds also).

Cumurim, the eater; one who indulges in rich food (चुमुरिं भत्तारं—Daya.).

8. Dvayan rathinoh vimsatim gah vadhumantah—two damsels riding in cars and twenty cows ; (being in pairs, having women together with cars : twenty animals, (वधूमतः स्त्रीयुक्तान् द्वयान् मिथुनभूतान् विंशतिं विंशति-संख्याकान् गाः पशून्—Sayana).

Also the pair of people and army (द्वयान् प्रजासेनाजनान् ; वधूमन्तः प्रशस्तावध्वो विद्यन्ते येषान्ते—Daya.). Also the gift consisted of twenty pairs of oxen, yoked two and two in chariots (Wilson).

Parthavanam, of the descendants of Pṛthu, related to Abhyavartin (Sayana) ; of the king, with widely spreading dominion (पार्थवानां पृथौ विस्तीर्णायां विद्यायां भवानां राज्ञां—Daya.).

Abhyvartti, the victor surrounding from all sides (अभ्यावर्त्ती यो विजेतुमभ्यावर्त्तते सः—Daya.).

The entire hymn is a praise of cows and their reverence.

2. Abhinne khilye, in an inaccessible fortress, not to be breached by enemies; (अभिन्ने शत्रुभिरभेद्ये खिल्यो खिलमप्रतिहतं स्थानम् । तदेव खिल्यम् । स्वार्थिको यत् । अन्यैर्गन्तुमशक्ये स्थले, a place inaccessible to others—Sayana ; अभिन्ने एकीभूते व्यवहारे खिल्ये खण्डेषु भवे—Daya.).

4. Arva, like the horse, indulging in enjoyments (अर्वा अश्व इव बुद्धिहीनो विषयासक्तः—Daya.).

Renu-kakatah, a well or water source full of sand ; the dust-spurning (रेणुककाटः रेणुकस्य रेणोः पार्थिवस्य रजस उद्भेदकः । कटिर्भेदनकर्मा—Sayana) ; a heart full of ignorance like a well full of sand—रेणुका कूप इवान्धकार हृदयः —Daya.).

Sanskṛta-tram, to one who protects the one who treads on the path of virtue and improves (संस्कृतत्रं यः संस्कृतं त्रायते रक्षति तम्—Daya.) ; going on the way of sacrificial consecration (विशसनादि संस्कारं—Sayana).

Martasya gavah, the cattle of the man.

Gavah = cattle, and also milk and milk products. (gauh = milk products, Nir. II.5-6).

5. In the verse, we have a strong and charming personation of cows. Dayananda interprets the term gavah as cows, as rays, as words of wisdom (धेनवः, सुशिक्षितां वाचः, and किरणाः इव). The cow finally becomes synonymous with Indra,—such a cow to be cherished with heart and mind (हृदा and मनसा).

7. Rudrasya, of Rudra, the Supreme Lord, identical with Time (रुद्रस्य कालात्मकस्य परमेश्वरस्य—Sayana) ; also of the rudra who works with terrors, the terrible Lord (रौद्रकर्म कर्त्तुः—Daya.).

8. Ṛsabhasya retasi, with the vigour of the bull, the impregnator (ऋषभस्य गवामादधानस्य वृषभस्य—Sayana). The milk and butter which are required as nutrition are dependent upon the cows bearing calves.

Also with the vigour of the excellent one (ऋषभस्य श्रेष्ठस्य रेतसि वीर्ये —Daya.).

1. Mahah yantah su-mataye cakanah, offering great praise and desirous of his favour. (महः महान्ति स्तोत्राणि—Sayana ; महः महद् विज्ञानं—Daya.; यन्तः उपयन्तः, प्राप्नुवन्तः ; सुमतये शोभनानुग्रहात्मिका तदीया बुद्धिः ; उत्तम प्रज्ञायै; alternatively, महोमहृत्कर्मयन्तः अनुतिष्ठन्तः ; performing great worship ; सुमतये सुमतिं शोभनां स्तुतिं चकानां शब्दयन्तः, sounding of uttering praise—Sayana).

2. Yasmin-haste, in whose hand ; alternatively, haste (hand) is derived from the root han (√हन्), to strike : it is quick to strike (हस्तो हन्तेः, प्राशुर्हनने Nir. I.7) ; thus "in whom the slayer of foes", (हस्ते हन्तर्यस्मिन्निन्द्र इत्यर्थः—Sayana).

3. Vasanah atkam surabhim, wearing a graceful and ever-moving form.

Atkam, ever moving form (अत्कं सततगमनशीलमात्मीयं रूपं—Sayana ; all covering clothes (व्याप्तशीलं वस्त्रं—Daya.).

Surabhim, graceful (सुरभि प्रशस्तं—Sayana) ; well perfumed (सुगन्धं —Daya.).

5. Uti, with the offerings (ऊती ऊत्या तर्पकेण हविषा with satisfying oblation—Sayana) ; with means of protection (रक्षणाद्यया क्रियया—Daya.).

6. Hiri-siprah, one with green or azure coloured chin, or nose (हिरिशिप्रः हिरीहरिते शिप्रे हनुनासिके यस्य सः—Daya.). This refers to the tint of sky.

एवा = एव (निपातस्य चेति दीर्घः—Panini VI.3.135).

For verse 3, see Nir. IV.17.

1. Ardham it-asya, the sun brightens only the half of the globe of the earth—Daya.; alternatively, a mere portion of Him is equal to both earth and heaven (अस्य इन्द्रस्य उभे रोदसी द्यावापृथिव्यौ अर्धमित् अर्धमेव प्रति। अस्येन्द्रस्यार्धभागो द्यावापृथिव्योः प्रतिनिधिर्भवति—Sayana).

2. Dive dive suryah darsatah, the sun was made daily visible (दिवेदिवे प्रतिदिनं वृत्रेणावृतः सूर्यो दर्शतः दर्शनीयः भूत भवति—Sayana), i.e. by Indra's breaking asunder the clouds.

3. Adyacit nu cit tat apah nadinam, and today the function of the rivers is the same as it was in ancient times.

In this line, the words nu cit (नू चित्) is a particle, and is used in the sense of ancient and modern; nu ca (नू च) is also used in the similar sense. (Nir. IV.7).

Hymn-31

3. For kutsa and susna see earlier notes.

Kutsena, by thunderbolt (कुत्सेन वज्रेण—Daya. ; Nigh. II.20).

Susnam, strength or power (शुष्णं बलं—Daya.). Nigh.II.9; also the one who dries or exploits ; the name of an asura also (प्रशुषं शोषयितुम-शक्यं प्रबलं शुष्णं सर्वस्य शोषकमेतत्संज्ञमसुरं—Sayana).

For Suryasya cakram, chariots or wheels of the sun ; see सूरश्चक्रं प्र वृहज्जात ओजसा (I.130.9) and सप्त युञ्जन्ति रथमेकं चक्रं (I.164.2).

4. For dasyu, sambara, divodasa and bharadvaja, see earlier notes.

Sambarasya, of the clouds ; of the enemies hostile like clouds (शम्बरस्य मेघस्येव शत्रोः—Daya.; Nigh. I.10).

Divodasaya, for the giver of enlightenment (दिवोदासाय विज्ञानस्य दात्रे —Daya.).

Bharadvajaya, for the possessor, or the acquirer or seeker of knowledge (भरद्वाजाय विज्ञान धर्त्रे—Daya.). Wilson comments on this verse thus : Sambara is more usually styled as an asura, and hence it would appear that dasyu, and asura are synonymous,. so that the latter is equally applied to the unbelieving or anti-Hindu mortal inhabitant of India.

1. Tavase, for the strength ; for the strong or powerful (तवसे बलाय—Daya.; तवसे तवस्विने बलवते—Sayana).

Turaya, for the quick accomplisher ; for the rapid (तुराय क्षिप्रंकारिणे —Daya.; त्वरमाणाय—Sayana). Also see Sv. I.322, where the verse occurs with slight variations.

4. Nivyabhih, with young ones (नीव्याभि: नवतराभि:—Sayana ; this refers to mares according to Sayana). Also those who can provide everything worth having—(नीविषु प्रापणीयेषु भवाभि:—Daya.).

Puruvirabhih, with numerous colts or young male horses (पुरुवीराभि: पुरूणां बहूनां वीरमित्रीभि: बडवाभि: —Sayana) ; also with the armies which include a large number of brave young men (पुरवो बहवो वीरा यासु सेनासु ताभि:—Daya.). (With very new or young mares bearing male progeny of many—Wilson).

Girvanah (vocative), O, the one adored by praise-bestowing words or speech (गिर्वण: य उत्तमाभिर्वाग्भि: सेव्यते तत्सम्बुद्धौ—Daya.; गिरा स्तुत्या संभजनीयेन्द्र—Sayana).

5. Apah daksinatah, the waters at the southern declination (दक्षिणत: दक्षिणायने अप: उदकानि—Sayana) ; i.e. at the commencement of the rainy season, when the sun has moved to the south .of tropics) ; or on the southern or the right side in general (दक्षिणपार्श्वात् अप: जलानि—Daya.).

2. Vivacah, men of various speech ; they, of whom the speech has the form of many kinds of praise (विवाच: विविधा: स्तुतिरूपा वाचो येषां तादृशा: —Sayana) ; they who possess speech full of various disciplines of knowledge—विविध विद्यायुक्ता वाचो येषान्ते—Daya.).

3. Ubhayan amitran dasa vṛtrani arya ca, you have destroyed both classes of enemies, both dasa and arya adversaries ; i.e. destroyed the dasas, who are opposed to the prescribed conduct of duties, and the aryas, who are seriously following the rightful duties (Sayana) ; but according to Dayananda, having divided people into two classes, non-friendly (अमित्रान्) and arya (आर्या), you destroy the non-friendly (अमित्रान् दुष्टान्त्सर्वपीडकान्) and provide to the arya (आर्या धर्मिष्ठानुत्तमान् जनान्) with the appropriate wealth (दासा दातव्यानि वृत्राणि धनानि) ।

Vrtrani, the wealth (वृत्राणि धनानि—Daya. ; Nigh. II.10).

4. Nemadhita, that which reduces the number to half (नेमधिता नेम शब्दोऽर्धवाची-त्वोनेम इत्यर्धस्य—Nir. III.20 अर्धा: कतिपया: पुरुषा धीयन्त एष्विति नेमधितय: संग्रामा:—Sayana).

Alternatively, the one who gives recognition to the virtuous in the group vicious and virtuous both (नेमधिता धार्मिकाऽधार्मिकयोर्मध्ये धार्मिकाणां महीतारः—Daya.).

Pṛtsu, in the battle, i.e. in the armies (पृत्सु संग्रामेषु सेनासु वा—Daya.).

Svarsata, very precious wealth for the sake of enjoying it (often the wealth, the spoils, of enemy—(स्वर्षाता स्वः सुष्टु अरणीयं धनं तस्य संभजनार्थम् —Sayana) ; the giver of pleasure (सुखस्य दाता—Daya.).

5. Gosatamah, from go = speech ; gosa, the one who enjoy the benefits of speech (गोषतमाः ये गा वाचः सनन्ति सेवन्ते ततोऽतिशयिताः—Daya.; Sayana is not clear—गवां संभक्ततमाः सन्तः)

Gosa, (गोष) is also dawn (Wilson).

Hymn-34

2. Puruhutah, invoked of many (पुरुहूतः बहुभिः सत्कृतः—Daya.).

Purugurtah, tried and tested for his efforts by many (पुरुगूर्त्तः बहुभिरुद्यमितः कृतपुरुषार्थकः—Daya.).

Purupraśastah, honoured by many ; superior to many (पुरुप्रशस्तः बहुषूत्तमः—Daya.).

4. Divi arca iva, adorable for all worthy accomplishment (दिवि कमनीये शुद्धे व्यवहारे अर्चेव सत्क्रियेव—Daya.) ; with reverence like adoration (Wilson).

Masa, with measure (मासा मानेन—Sayana) ; months (मासा चैत्राद्याः —Daya.).

Dhanvan, in the desert place, the dry sandy place (धन्वन् धन्वनि मरुदेशे—Sayana ; बालुकायुक्ते स्थले—Daya.).

Hymn-35

2. Tridhatu gah, earth which furnishes three noble metals, copper, silver and gold (त्रिधातु सुवर्णरजतताम्राणि त्रयोधातवो विद्यन्ते यस्मिंस्तत् गाः पृथिवी—Daya.) ; or the three milk products furnished by cow,—milk, curds and butter (त्रिधातु त्रिधातूः क्षीरदधिघृतानां त्रयाणां धारयित्रीः गाः—Sayana).

5. Anyatha, a different (course), i.e. consign him to death ; a course different from that of living being ; or do not do to the contrary (कदाचिदन्यथा मा कुर्याः—अन्वय,—Daya.).

Durah, door (दुरः द्वाराणि—Daya.) ; Sayana gives two meanings: doors and difficulty destroying enemies (दुरः विशेषेण दारयिता शत्रूणां। यद्वा दुरो द्वाराणि शत्रुसम्बन्धीनि विघटयंस्त्वं)।

Dhenoh, of the cow ; or the speech or praise (धेनोः वाचः—Daya. ; Sayana gives both the meanings and hence alternative interpretations also).

Sukradughasya, giver of pure gifts (शुक्रदुघस्य शुक्राणां निर्मलानां दोग्धुरिन्द्रस्य; and also शुक्रस्य पयसो दोग्ध्र्या धेनोस्त्वया दत्ताया गोः सकाशात् मा निर्गच्छेयम्—Sayana).

Angirasan, supermost amongst the vital breaths (आङ्गिरसान् अङ्गिरःसु प्राणेषु साधून्—Daya.).

Hymn-36

2. Syuma-gṛbhe dudhaye arvate, seizer of an uninterrupted series of foes (syuma from sew, स्यूमगृभे स्यूम्नः स्यूतान् अविच्छेदेन वर्त्तमानान्, i.e. uninterruptedly present, शत्रूनगृह्णते, to whom he seizes enemies; दुधये। दुधिर्हिंसाकर्मा, तेषां हिंसकाय, for their destruction (being lines or threads without interruption—Sayana ; स्यूमाननुस्यूनान्गृह्णाति तस्मै दुधये हिंसकाय अर्वते प्राप्ताय —Daya.).

5. The prefix abhi put for the compound verb abhibhu (अभि अभिभू)।

Bhuma abhi, you prevail, or may we become from all sides, (भूम बहुतराणि अभि भवसि—Sayana, अभि भवेम—Daya.).

Dyauh na, like the illumination, like the sun (द्यौः प्रकाशः न इव —Daya.; द्यौर्न सूर्य इव—Sayana).

Aryah, belonging to our enemy (अर्यः अरेः संबंधीनि—Sayana; master, the controller (अर्यः स्वामी—Daya.).

Aso yatha nah, be to us no other; not be as to us (literal); may you become our own; in what manner, thou art especially or exclusively ours, so mayest thou be that, our property or friend (Sayana).

For verse 3, see Nir. X. 3.

3. May the ever-running steeds, the chariot horses, who move in a straight line, bring the vigorous Indra, in a car of beautiful wheels, towards the old and the new food; lest the nectar of vayu be wasted (चित् नु वायोः अमृतं वि दस्येत्)।

Vayu is the deity of the middle region; the Nirukta quotes this verse in that context (X.3).

The constantly running (आऽसस्राणासः आससृवांसः) steeds, the chariot-horses, i.e. the horses which draw the chariot (रथ्या अश्वा रथस्य वोढारः) who move in a straight line (ऋज्यन्तः ऋजुगामिनः), i.e. whose course is straight. May (they) bring Indra, who is becoming very powerful (शवसानं अभिवलायमानमिन्द्रम्) in a car of blessed wheels (सुचक्रे कल्याणचक्रे रथे योगाय) in order to join the old and the new food ((नवं च पुराणं च) The word sravas is a synonym of food (so called) because it is heard (√ श्रु). So that the Soma-draught of this vayu may mot be wasted.

According to some, the verse is primarily addressed to Indra, the function of vayu being subordinate; according to others, it is primarilv addressed to both. (Nir. X.3).

Hymn-38

1. Mahim, the great speech (महीं महतीवाचं—Daya.; Nigh. I.11); the great (महीं महतीं—Sayana).

Indrahutim, invocation of Indra, the resplendent Lord.

2. Devahutih, invoked by devas, the enlightened ones (देवहूतिः देवैर्विद्वद्भिः प्रशंसिता—Daya.).

4. Masah, saradah, dyavah, months, seasons (or years) and days (अक्तोः रात्रेः मासाः शरदः ऋतवः द्यावः प्रकाशयुक्तादिवसाः प्रकाशा वा; शरदः संवत्सराश्च—Sayana).

Hymn-39

1. The epithets used for Soma are :

Mandrasya, of the exhilarating (मन्द्रस्य मोदकस्य मदकरस्य वा—Sayana ; आनन्दत आनन्दयत: —Daya.).

Kaveh, of the learned ; of the heroic (कवे: विदुष: विक्रान्तस्य —Sayana).

Divyasya, of the shining one, of the noble intentions, the divine (दिव्यस्य कमनीयास्विच्छासु साधो:—Daya.; दिवि भवस्य—Sayana).

Vahneh, of the fruit-bearer ; the bearer of all knowledge like fire (वह्ने: सकलविद्यानां वोढुरग्नेरिव—Daya.; वोढु:—Sayana).

Vipramanmanah, of the one praised by sages (विप्रमन्मन: विप्रस्यमन्म विज्ञानं यस्मिँस्तस्य—Daya.; विप्रामेधाविनो मन्मान: स्तोतारो यस्य—Sayana).

Vacanasya, of the laudable (वचनस्य वचनीयस्य स्तुत्यस्य—Sayana).

Sacanasya, of the one gathered ; of the one to be served, honoured (सचनस्य समवेतस्य—Daya.; सेव्यस्य—Sayana).

All these attributes could hardly be of the beverage, came to be known under the name of Soma (very inapplicable to a beverage —Wilson).

Isah, food or desire.

Go-agrah, of which the chief is speech (or cattle).

(गो अग्रा: गौर्वागग्रा उत्तमा यासु ता:—Daya.; गावोऽग्रे प्रमुखे या सा तादृशा:—Sayana). In no way, cow or cattle is desired for food as such. Cattle is demanded for milk, butter and the like.

3. Aktun, the nights ; i.e. fortnights, half-months etc. (अक्तुरिति रात्रिनाम, Nigh. I.7 ; अत्र च तत्संबन्धात् पक्षमासादयो लक्ष्यन्ते—Sayana ; रात्री:—Daya.).

Dosa, nights, the early morning (दोषा रात्रि, Nigh. I.7;—Sayana; प्रभातवेला:—Daya.).

Vastoh, the day (वस्तो: दिवसं, दिनं—Sayana and Daya.).

Saradah, the year (शरद: सम्वत्सरांश्च—Sayana) ; the seasons like autumn etc. (शरद: शरदादीन् ऋतून्—Daya.).

Induh, moon (a synonym of Soma too) ; this moon is the emblem present in the sky, इमं केतुं, in the text (इमं सोम चन्द्रात्मना नभसि वर्त्तमानं —Sayana).

Evidently the verse appropriately refers to Soma, the moon, and not the beverage (on the same lines, the verse 1 may be interpreted).

1 Gane, in the assembly of enlightened ones (गणे गणनीये विद्वत्सवे —D [illegible] in this prayer—assembly (ग्रस्तत् [illegible]— Sayana).

Ut pra gaya [illegible]ne a ni-sadya, sitting in the assembly of the enlightened ones, offer prayers (गाय स्तुहि—Daya.) ; or respond, i.e. listen to our hymns of prayer ([illegible] तान् [illegible]—Sayana).

5. Niyutvan, the one, possessing the yoked steeds (नियुत्वान् [illegible], तद्वान्—Sayana) ; the resplendent Lord, the prime mover of the creation (नियुत्वान् नियन्तेश्वर इव, नियुत्वानिति ईश्वर नाम, a synonym of Lord or master—Daya.) ; राष्ट्री = अर्य: = नियुत्वान् = इन: these four are synonyms of Lord or isvara,—Nigh. II.21 For [illegible], see 1.164.21 (इनोविश्वस्य)

2. Kakut, the well-disciplined, i.e. accurately spoken speech (काकुत् सुशिक्षिता वाक् । काकु = वाक् Nigh. I.11) ; tongue (जिह्वा—Sayana).

5. Pra asman ava prtanasu pra viksu, defend us in combats, and against all people (विक्षु) i.e. not only in foreign aggressions, but also in the internal [illegible] (Curiously, on this basis Wilson concludes that "the religious part, had opponents amongst the people in general").

Satakrato, O the accomplisher of numerous sorts of actions ([illegible]—Sayana) ; the [illegible] endowed with innumerable faculties and [illegible] actions (शतक्रतो असंख्यप्रज्ञ [illegible]—Daya.) [illegible] who is [illegible] in cent per cent actions.

3. Tam-tam it a isate, whatever, it may be, he gets it.

Isate, gets it (ईषते प्राप्नोति, ईषतीति गतिकर्मा, Nigh.II.14—Daya.; आ + ईषते = एषते प्रापयति—Sayana).

For the hymn, see Aitareya Aranyaka V.2.5.

1. Divodasa, the servants of a divine order ; (in later mythology a king) ; for Sambara, see earlier notes.

Yasya tyat Sambaram made,—here tyat = तत् प्रसिद्धं यथा भवति तथा, such as that which usually happens ; i.e. it is so well known.

4. Maghonam savah, the extraordinary strength of Indra, the magnanimous, (माघोनं एन्द्रं शवः असाधारणं बलं—Sayana ; maghonam is also the one who possesses immense wealth (माघोनं बहुधनवन्तं, शवः बलहेतुं—Daya.).

For verse 21, see Nir. VI.17.

1. Svadhapate, lord of the offering ; cherisher or protector of Soma libation (स्वधापते स्वधाया अन्नस्य सोमलक्षणस्य पालक—Sayana ; स्वधा = अन्न or food, Nigh. II.7) ; lord of food (अन्न स्वामिन्—Daya.).

2. Sagmah, one with peace, happiness, enjoyment (शग्मः शग्मं सुखं विद्यते यस्य सः । अर्श आदिभ्योऽच्—Panini 5.2.127) ; one who provides happiness to others (शग्मः सुखकरः—Sayana).

Tuvi-Sagma, the lord with plenty of happiness (तुविशग्म बहुसुखेन्द्र —Sayana).

6. Vipah na, like the wise persons (विपो विप्रस्य मेधाविनः न इव, सर्वकार्य-कुशला इत्यर्थः, like the persons efficient in several works—Sayana ; विपः मेधावी —Daya., Nigh. III.15).

7. Staulabhih dhautaribhih, by his robust agitators (स्तौलाभि: स्थूलाभि: प्रवृद्धाभि: धौतरीभि: कम्पनकारिणीभिर्वडवाभिरीदृशैर्मरुद्भिर्वा युक्त: सन्, with his stout causers of trembling; Sayana supplies the words, joined with such mares—वडवाभि:—the epithets may be applicable to Maruts also). स्तौलाभि: = स्थूले भवाभि: = स्थूलाभि: (in place of थ्, we have त् — वर्णव्यत्यय: —Daya.).

8. Vapuh, the nice form of body (वपु: सुरूपं शरीरं—Daya.; वपु: = form, रूपनाम, Nigh. III.7.

9. सेधा = सेध (द्वयचोतस्तिङ् इति दीर्घ:—Panini VI.33.134).

11. Jasvane, for the wicked ruler, who unjudiciously transfers the property from one hand to another (जस्वने अन्यायेन परस्वप्रापकाय दुष्टाय राज्ञे —Daya.; जसतीति गतिकर्मा—Nigh.II.14).

13. वावृधे = ववृधे (तुजादीनां दीर्घोऽभ्यासस्य—Panini.VI.1.7).

14. अत्रा = अत्र (संहितायामिति दीर्घ:—Panini VI.1.70).

15. Dhinam, of the doer of virtuous actions ; of the offerer of prayers (धीनां उत्तमानां कर्मणां—Daya. ; ध्यातॄणां स्तोतॄणां कर्मणां वा—Sayana ; धीरिति कर्मनाम—Nigh. II.1.

Karudhayah, the upholder of the institutor of rites (कारुधाया: कारूणां कर्तॄणां यजमानानां धारयिता—Sayana) ; the upholder of technicians (कारूणां शिल्पीनां धारक:—Daya.).

17. जही = जहि, leave, forsake, abandon. (अत्रापि पूर्ववत् दीर्घ:—Daya.)

19. Harayah, the trained horses (like), हरय: सुशिक्षिता अश्वा इव (Daya.) ; हरय: अश्वा:—Sayana.

Vrsa-rathasah, those equipped with strong chariot army (of charioteers) (वृषरथास: वृषा बलयुक्ता रथा: सेनाङ्गानि येषां ते—Daya.).

Vrsa-resmayah, equipped with shower-yielding reins (rasmi = ray or rein both) ; reins of horses strong enough for all successful operations. (वृष-रश्मय: रश्मय इव विजयसुखवर्षकास्तेजस्विन: —Daya.; वर्षितारोरश्मय: प्रग्रहा येषां तादृशा:—Sayana).

20. Dronam, the fast moving car or vehicle including airways (द्रोण द्रवन्ति येन विमानादि यानेन तत्—Daya.; द्रुममयं रथं—Sayana).

Na urmayah, like the sea-waves (नोर्मयः समुद्रादि जल तरङ्गा इव—Daya.).

21. Madhupeyeh, a drink to be taken along with honey, or a drink to be taken like honey (मधुपेयः मधुनासह पातयोग्यः—Daya. ; मधुवत् पातव्यः —Sayana).

Vrsa sindhunam vrsabhah stiyanam

Stiyah, (स्तियाः) means waters, so called from being collected (स्तिया आपो भवन्ति । स्त्यायनात्). The sprinklers of rivers and the rainers of waters (Nir. VI.17).

Similarly, stipah means guardians of waters or one who guards them who approaches him for his protection. (स्तिपा स्तियापालनः उपस्थितान् पालयतीति वा, as in स न स्तिपा उत भवा तनूपाः—Rv. X.69.4).

Contrary to the usage of Stiya as in the Nirukta, the scholiasts interpret the word as "of the aggregated" (स्तियानां संहतानां स्थावरजङ्गमानां प्राण्यप्राणिनां, of the movable or immovable, living or non-living—Daya.; स्तियानां सर्वीभूतानां स्थावरजङ्गमात्मनां प्राणिनां—Sayana).

In this and the two preceding verses, we have a fascinating use of the derivatives of वृष, vrsa, to sprinkle, to rain; Indra's horses are vrsana (वृषणः); they draw a vrsa-ratha (वृषरथ), and are guided by vrsarasmayah (वृषरश्मयः); again the steeds are vrsana (वृषण) who are always young (नित्य तरुणौ), and India is vrsan (वृषन्), vrs (वृष्) and vrsabha (वृषभ), the showerer of rain or of benefits.

22. Panim, the dealer, the businessman or trader, the stealer or trader of cows ; an asura of the nama vala (वल) ; the head of panis and hence also the pani (पणिं वणिजं गवामादातारं वलाख्यमसुरं—Sayana; स्तुत्यं व्यवहार, the commendable business—Daya.).

23. Ayam tridhatu divi rocanesu tritesu vindat amrtam nigulham —the Soma becomes ambrosia (अमृतं) when received or concealed (निगूलहं) in vessels at the three diurnal ceremonies (त्रिधातु सवनत्रय रूपेण त्रिप्रकार), which ambrosia is properly deposited with the gods abiding in the third bright spheres or in heaven (त्रितेषु दिवि रोचनेषु)—Sayana.

Tridhatu. the world made up of three gunas, sattva, rajas and tamas (त्रिधातु सत्वरजस्तमोमय जगत्—Daya.).

Tritesu, in the well known fire, lightning and the sun, the three forms of energy, the terrestrial, (frictional) : the mid-spatial (electrical) and the solar (nuclear)—(त्रितेषु प्रसिद्ध (अग्नि) विद्युत् सूर्येषु—Daya.).

24. The Soma (सोम) has been shown to be the source of the energies of Indra, who, when exhilarated with this Soma makes the dawn etc. (verses 23 and 24).

Dasayantram utsam, deeply-organized secretion: a well (source of water) with ten machines.

Utsam, water or milk having the property of flowing (उत्सं उत्सरणशीलं पयः—Sayana) ; well and the like, ever-streaming with water (उत्सं कूपमिव जलेन क्लिन्नं—Daya.).

Dasayantram, body with the ten machines, that is, the physical body complex with five sense organs and five organs of actions (organs and functions of the body which are the result of the nutriment furnished to the child by the matured milk. (Sayana). For ten yantras, we have : (i) चक्षुश्च श्रोत्रं च मनश्च वाक्च प्राणापानौ देह इद शरीरम् । द्वौ प्रत्यञ्चावनुलोमौ विसर्गावेतं तं मन्ये दशयन्त्रमुत्सम्,—the eye, the ear, the mind, the speech, two vital airs, the form, the body, the two creations inverted and direct—these are tenfold utsas or state of being (unknown supplementary quotations, the khila) ; (ii) नव प्रातर्ग्रहा गृह्यन्ते नवभिर्बहिष्पवमाने स्तुवते स्तुते स्तोमे दशमं गृह्णाति (Ait.Br. III.1) —the Soma is offered with nine texts to Indra and then this tenth) ; (iii) दशैतानध्वर्युः प्रातः सवने ग्रहान् गृह्णाति San.Br. XIV.2.

To Dayanada, the ten yantras are the five tanmatras or the sublile elements, and the five gross elements (रूप, रस, गन्ध, स्पर्श, शब्द, पृथिवी, जल, अग्नि, वायु and आकाश).

1. Turvasam, one who readily gets control on those who injure others (तुर्वशं हिंसकानां वशकरं—Daya.) ; also see I.36.18, our notes.

Yadum, the man who exerts (यदुं प्रयतमानं नर—Daya.) ; the one who exerts to deprive others of their property ; a robber ; an exploiter (इतरधनाय यततेऽसौ यदुर्मनुष्यस्तं—Daya.; see I.36.18) ; the names of two kings, who were in exile or captivity in the land of enemies (तुर्वशं यदुं चैतत्संज्ञौ राजानौ शत्रुभिर्दूरदेशे प्रक्षिप्तौ—Sayana).

5. Ekasya, of the one ; of the needy (एकस्य असहायस्य—Daya.) ; of the adorer or devotee (स्तोतु:—Sayana).

6. Nrbhih suvirah ucyase, you are glorified by men, O the bestower of male descendents.

Suvirah, endowed with or possessed of sons, grandsons and the like to be given (सुवीर: शोभनैर्वीरै: पुत्रपौत्रादिभि: स्तोतृभ्यो दातव्यैरूपेत इति—Sayana) ; the one who has the finest group of young and brave (शोभनावीरा यस्य स: —Daya.).

7. Brahmanam, the great and mighty (ब्रह्माणं परिवृढं—Sayana) ; the one who knows all the Vedas (चतुर्वेदविदं—Daya.).

Brahmavahasam, the one attracted by prayers (ब्रह्मवाहसं ब्रह्मभि: स्तुतिरूपैर्मन्त्रैर्वहनीयं—Sayana) ; the one attracted by, or the one who teaches the Vedic verses along with their meanings and accents (वेदानां शब्दार्थ सम्बन्ध स्वराणां प्रापकं—Daya.).

8. Pṛtanasahah, subduer of hostile armies (पृतनाषह: ये पृतनां शत्रुसेनां सहन्ते ते—Daya.; पृतना: शत्रुसेना: । तासामभि भवितु:—Sayana.).

9. Adrivah, O wielder of thunderbolt, like that (हे अद्रिव:, आदृणात्यनेने त्यद्रिर्वज्र:—Sayana) ; like the sun, the producer of clouds (मेघकर सूर्यवद् वर्त्तमान—Daya.).

Dṛhlani, the strongholds, cities or forces (दृलहानिचित् दृढानि स्थिराण्यपि पुराणि बलानि वा—Sayana) ; definite and certain armies (दृढ्लानि निश्चलानि सैन्यानि —Daya.).

Mayah, delusions ; snares ; enemy-devices (माया: च शत्रुभिर्निर्मिता —Sayana ; कपटादि—Daya.).

Ananata, O the unbending (used as an epithet of Indra) (हे अनानत, अप्रह्वीभूत सर्वोच्छ्रितेन्द्र—Sayana ; शत्रूणां समीपे नम्रतारहित i.e. non-reconciling towards enemies and unyielding in war—Daya.).

10. Ahumahi, we invoke, honour or praise (अहूमहि आह्वयाम: स्तुम इत्यर्थ:—Sayana ; प्रशंसेम—Daya.).

Tam um tva, (तम् ॐ त्वा), such as thou art; to you as you are.

11. श्रुधी = श्रुधि (द्व्यचोऽतस्तिङः इति दीर्घः—Panini VI.3.134.)

12. Wilson gives the literal translation thus :

With praises, by our horses (अर्वद्भिः) horses (अर्वतः), food (वाजान्), excellent (श्रवाय्यांन् श्रवणीयान् प्रशस्यान्) Indra by thee, we conquer deposited (हितं) wealth (धनं).

13. Bhare, in the battle (भरे सङ्ग्रामे — Daya., Sayana ; Nigh. II.17).

14. हिनुही = हिनुहि (संहितायामिति दीर्घः—Panini (VI.1.17).

16. Vṛsakratuh, the one with dominating learning or wisdom (वृषक्रतुः वृषा बलवती क्रतुः प्रज्ञा यस्य सः—Daya.) or the giver of rain (वर्षं कर्मा —Sayana).

17. Sivah, insurer or giver of happiness (शिवः सुखकरोऽतएव सखा मित्रभूतश्च सन्—Sayana) ; auspicious, benevolent. (शिवः मंगलकारी, सखा सुहृद् —Daya.).

21. Vajebhih, one equipped with food, learning etc. (वाजेभिः विज्ञानान्नादि कारिभिः—Daya.).

Asvibhih, by the moving bodies, like the sun and moon (अश्विभिः सूर्यचन्द्रम आदिभिः—Daya.).

Gomadbhi, with cow, extensive land, or speech (गोमद्भिः प्रशस्तभूमि-धेनुवाग्युक्तैः—Daya.).

Niyudbhih, by mares (नियुद्भिः वडवाभिः—Sayana) ; by the definite reasons (निश्चितहेतुभिः—Daya.).

24. Kuvitsasya, a certain person who does much (kuvit) harm (syati). (कुवित्सस्य कुविद्वहु शः स्यति हिनस्तीति कुवित्सो नाम कश्चित्—Sayana); butcher or slaughterer of many ; the slicer (यः कुविन्महत्सनति विभजति तस्य —Daya.).

25. Matarah, mothers, worthy of reverence (मातरः मान्यप्रदाः —Daya.).

Vatsam na matarah, as parent (mothers) cows to their young ; just as cows low and proceed fondingly towards their calf without delay (यथा मातरो गावो गृहे वर्त्तमानं वत्सं शीघ्रमभिगच्छन्ति, तद्वत्—Sayana). Alternatively, our prayers are being recited to you, in the same way fondingly, as the cows utter their bellow when they look at their calf (अस्मदीया वाचस्त्वाम् अभिनोनुवुः अभितः शब्दयन्ति स्तुवन्ति । यथा गावो वत्समभिलक्ष्य हम्भारवं कुर्वन्ति तद्वत् —Sayana).

26. Duh-nasam, one who is lost or destroyed with difficulty ; not easily lost.

Asva-yate, behaving as a horse ; or one who desires horses.

Gavyate, behaving as a cow ; or one who desires cows.
You are (the provider of) cow to one who wants a cow and horse to one who desires a horse.

28. Gavahna dhenavah, milch-cows (dhenavah giver of milk—धेनवः दुग्धदात्र्यः—Daya., धेनवः दोग्ध्र्यः—Sayana).

29. Vivaci, the function, the yajna or sacrifice, in which various praises and prayers are repeated (विवाचि विविधाः स्तुत शस्त्रात्मिका वाचो यस्मिन् यज्ञे तस्मिन्—Sayana ; विविधार्थसत्यार्थं प्रकाशिका वाचो यस्मिन् व्यवहारे—Daya.).

30. Stomah vahisthah, most elevating praise (वाहिष्ठः वोढृतमः स्तोमः स्तोत्रं—Sayana ; वाहिष्ठः अतिशयेन वोढा स्तोमः प्रशंसामयो व्यवहारः, the most praiseworthy function—Daya.).

31. Bṛbuh, the architect (बृबुः छेत्ता—Daya.); the technician in the service of Panis (बृबुर्नाम पणीनां तक्षा—Sayana).

Brbuh paninam varsisthe murdhan adhi asthat, Bṛbu or the technician stood over upon the high place, as if it were on the forehead of the Panis. Panis are traders or merchants.

Uruhkakso na gangyah, like the elevated bank of the Ganga (गाङ्ग्यः गंगायाः कूले उन्नते भवः कक्षो न कक्ष इव उरुः विस्तीर्णः सन्—Sayana).

Gangyah, Dayananda derives the word from गां (gam), the earth, the one who goes to the earth is ganga; and approaching that is gangyah (i.e. also ganga is so called from going (√ गम्, गंगा गमनात्—Nir. IX.26). 31-33. These three verses form a trica (त्रिच) in the praise of the liberality of Bṛbu to Bhardvaja, the ṛsi or seer of the hymn (Sayana). Sayana calls Bṛbu as a taksa (तक्ष), the carpenter or artificer of the Panis. See Manu X.107 for the legend :

भरद्वाज: क्षुधार्तस्तु सपुत्रो विजने वने ।
बह्वीर्गा: प्रतिजग्राह वृबेस्तक्ष्णो महायशा: ।।

The illustrious Bharadvaja, with his son, distressed by hunger in a lonely forest, accepted many cows from the carpenter Bṛbu. This story or legend has been concocted much later in history to show that whilst in distress, one can accept assistance from persons of a low caste even. (See Nitimanjari also for a similar legend). There is another way of looking at the legend : even a person, low born, can rise to high statures by liberality. Sayana says : a person inferior by caste becomes everywhere distinguished by generosity (जातितो हीनोऽपि दातृत्वात् सर्वत्र श्रेष्ठो भवति).

1. See Yv. XXVII 37 also.

Kasthasu arvatah, places where horses encounter (Wilson) ; (काष्ठासु, in the cardinal directions; काष्ठासु दिक्षु—Daya.); in the quarters or regions of the horse, where horses are engaged; or according to Sayana, the battlefields ; काष्ठासु यत्राश्वा क्रान्त्वा तिष्ठति तासु काष्ठासु संग्रामेषु युद्धकामश्च—Sayana). Mahidhara separates the two words and explains them as men invoke thee for victory.

Jast as a charioteer to horses, so may we invoke you alone in all directions (सारथिरिव त्वां काष्ठासु दिक्षु इत् हवामहे—Daya.).

2. Adrivah, the wielder of thunderbolt;—the same as vajra—hasta (अद्रिव: वज्रवन् । वज्रहस्त वज्रबाहो । यद्वा आदृणात्यनेनेत्यद्रि रशनि:, तद्वन्—Sayana); like the sun, shrouded with cloud (मेघयुक्तसूर्यवद् वर्त्तमान—Daya.); (चित्र वज्रहस्त अद्रिव: इन्द्र, all the terms are vocative).

Satra vajam na jigyuse, abundant food to him who is victorious (सत्रा महत्प्रभूतं वाजं न अन्नमिव, जिग्युषे जितवते पुरुषाय भोगार्थं—Sayana).

Satra, by truth (सत्रा सत्येन—Daya.), abundant (महत् प्रभूतं—Sayana); together with protection (स+त्राणम्, Mahidhara, Yv.XXVII.38).

Mahidhara gives a peculiar explanation to jiguse (जिग्युषे), valarous, not as applicable to a man but to a horse or elephant (अश्वाय हस्तिने).

3. Satraha, the destroyer of mighty foes (सत्राहा महतां शत्रूणां हन्ता —Sayana); days of truth (सत्य दिनानि—Daya.).

4. Ṛcisama : such form as the Re exhibits; such in form is Indra ; a vocative for addressing Indra (हे ऋचीषम ऋचा सम ऋग्यादृशं रूपं प्रतिपादयति तादृग् रूपेन्द्र—Sayana) ; venerable and to be honoured like Ṛca (ऋचातुल्य प्रशंसनीय—Daya.).

Tanusu, apsu, surye, in the bodies (posterity), in waters, and in the sun; i.e. protect us in the battles of life so that we get abundant of posterity or descendents, waters and sunlight for our life. (descendents to work on our agriculture fields, water for irrigation and solar light for a good harvest).

6. Vithura, the painful ; accompanied with pains (विथुरा व्यथायुक्तानि—Daya.) ; carsani-saham, the subduer of men or of enemies (चर्षणीसहं चर्षणीनां शत्रूभूतानां प्रजानामभिभवितारं—Sayana, शत्रुसेनाया: सोढारं—Daya.).

Pibdana, the raksasas, from their uttering the inarticulate sound, Pip-Pip. (पिब्दना पिब्दनानि रक्षांसि । पिहितमव्यक्तं शब्दयन्त इति पिब्दनानि —Sayana); the armies of enemies worth being crushed (पेष्टुमर्हाणि शत्रुसैन्यानि —Daya.).

9. Tridhatu saranam trivarutham, —Saranam, a dwelling, a place of shelter (शरणं आश्रयितुं योग्यं—Daya. ; शरणं गृहं —Sayana).

Tridhatu, made of three materials, wood, brick and stone (usually the three metals are copper, silver and gold, त्रय सुवर्णरजतताम्रा धातवो यस्मिंस्तत् —Daya.).

The following groups of three have also been considered: (i)three kinds of beings; gods, men and spirits, देव, मनुज, पितृ (ii) three precious articles: gold, silver and diamond, (iii) the three states of being: इच्छा, द्वेष and प्रयत्न, desire, avarice and action.

Trivarutham, a dwelling offering shelter or protection against three atmospheric conditions, heat, cold and rains (त्रिवरूथं शीतोष्णवर्षासूत्तमं —Daya.; त्रयाणां शीतातप वर्षाणां वारकं —Sayana).

10.11 स्मा=स्म ; (निपातस्य चेति दीर्घ: Panini VI. 3.135);

12. Priya Sarma pitrnam, pleasant abode of their progenitors ; the beloved places in relation with progenitors (प्रिया प्रियाणि शर्म शर्माणि स्थानानि पितॄणां जनकानां संबन्धीनि । तैरर्जितानीति यावत् । एतानि च वितन्वते शत्रूणां पुरस्तात् विस्तारयन्ति । परित्यजन्तीति यावत्) ; they spread out or rest their persons ; or they spread out before the enemy the sites won by their forefathers until they abandon them ; perhaps it should be, as Wilson says, until they, the enemy, desist from the attack—Sayana).

Chardih acittam, the unsuspected defence (छर्दिः गृहं अचित्तं चेतनरहितं —Daya) ; or armour unknown by enemies (छर्दिः छादनं आयुधानां निवारकं कवचम्, अचित्तं शत्रुभिरज्ञातं यथा भवति तथा—Sayana).

(The unknown armour is solicited when a charge of horse takes place ; it may allude to the superiority of the arms of the Aryas, the mail worn by them being unknown to the Dasyus or barbarians, like steel helmets or cuirasses of the Spaniards to the Mexicans and Peruvians—Wilson).

For verses 8, 13, 16, 26 and 29, the Nirukta references are : 8 (VII.6) ; 13 (VI.7) ; 16 (VI.22) ; 26 (IX.12) ; and 29 (IX.13).

This is a hymn with numerous devatas (deities) :

For 1-5, Soma; for the first quarter of 20th, gods (lingokta devatah) ; of the second quarter, the earth; of the third, Bṛhaspati, and of the fourth Indra, of 22-25, Prastoka, the son of Sṛnjaya (danastuti, praise for liberality) ; of 26-28, a tṛca, ratha or chariot ; of 29-30, dundabhi or drum , Indra is the deity of the rest.

1. Ahavesu, in the battles (Daya. आहवेषु संग्रामेषु ; Nigh. II.17).

Rasavan = Saravan, full of flavour ; juicy (रसवान् सादवांश्च भवति —Sayana ; महौषधि प्रशस्तरस प्रचुरः—Daya.).

Svaduh, tasty (स्वादुः सुस्वादयुक्तः—Daya.).

2. Sambarasya, of Sambara (an asura, Sayana) ; of cloud (शम्बरस्य मेघस्य—Daya. ; Nigh. I.10).

Vṛtrahatye = Vrtra-turye, in the battle (Nigh. II.17 ; वृत्रहत्ये संग्रामे —Daya.) ; during the time of killing of Vṛtra (वृत्रहत्ये वृत्रहननकाले—Sayana).

Cyautna, strength (च्यौत्ना च्यौत्नानि बलानि—Sayana ; Daya. ; Nigh. II.9).

Navatim-nava, ninety-nine cities or forts.

Dehyah, smeared or plastered (देह्यः दिग्धाः—Sayana, as if the cities consisted of stuccoed or plastered houses. Ninety-nine cities of Sambara have been frequently described.)

3. Sat urvih, षट् उर्वीः, six vast conditions ; lust (काम) ; anger (क्रोध) ; greed (लोभ) ; attachment (मोह) ; pride (मद) and jealousy (ईर्ष्या) ; also the six : heaven (द्यौः), earth (पृथिवी) ; day (अहः) ; night (रात्रि) ; water (आपः) and plants (ओषधयः)—Sayana. [षट् उर्वीः षड्विधा भूमीः, the six types of grounds, —Daya.].

4. Tisrsu, three principal receptacles, plants, waters and cows (तिसृषु ओषधीष्वप्सु गोषु च—Sayana ; earth, water and fire (भूम्यादिषु—Daya.) ; also safety, light and happiness (अभयं, ज्योतिः and स्वः).

Soma as moon should not be confused with Soma as a plant. Also compare with त्वमिमा ओषधीः सोम विश्वास्त्वमपो अजनयस्त्वं गाः । त्वमा ततन्थोर्वन्तरिक्षं त्वं ज्योतिषा वि तमो ववर्थ--I.91.22.

5. Skambhanena, by the support (स्कम्भनेन धारणेन—Daya. ; also by the midspace (स्कम्भनेन स्तम्भन साधनेन मध्यवर्तिनान्तरिक्षेण—Sayana).

6. Madhyandine savane, in the midday (or noonday) rite —Sayana ; in the functional activity of the midday (माध्यन्दिने मध्यं दिने भवे सवने प्रेरणे—Daya.).

7. Vasyah, excellent riches (वस्यः वसीयोतिशयेन सुष्ठु धनं—Daya. ; वसीयः श्रेष्ठं धनं—Sayana).

Vamanitih, the one whose policy or strategy is appreciated (वामनीतिः वामा प्रशंसिता नीतिर्यस्य सः—Daya.) ; a careful guide to desirable affluence (वामानां वननीयानां धनानां नेता भवा अस्मदर्थं श्रेष्ठप्रापणो भव—Sayana).

8. Ṛsva ta indra sthavirasya bahu, O Indra, the two arms of the mighty one are stable. The phrase has been cited in Nir. VII.6 to show that sometimes gods are so described as if they are anthropomorphic, and they are praised in reference to their limbs (ऋष्वा त इन्द्र स्थविरस्य बाहू).

13. Asme arat cit dvesah sanutah yuyotu, may he secretly separate the enemy even when far from us ; i.e. from us in the oblative (asme used in the sense of asmad, see Nir. VI.7, for the critical usage of asme (अस्मे) in different connotations. Dayananda uses asme for asmakam—अस्मे अस्माकम्).

14. Apah gah yuvase sam indun, here apah are waters. Sayana interprets in the sense of vasativari (अप: वसती वर्यिख्या:) waters: the portions of waters taken from a running stream on the evening previous to the ceremony, and kept in jars in different parts of the sacrificial chamber, to be mixed with Soma—see Katyayana, Sutras 8, 9, 7-10, Yv. VI.23, and the Taittiriya Yajus, Prapathaka III, Anuvaka 12 (Wilson).

15. Im, ईं, the supreme Lord, attainable (ईं प्राप्तव्यं परमात्मानं —Daya. ; ईमिति पदनाम Nigh. IV.2 ; ईं एनमिन्द्रं—Sayana).

Kṛnoti purvam aparam, makes first the last and vice versa (कृणोति पूर्वं प्रथमं अपरं पश्चिमं—Daya.) ; the principal singer becomes ordinary, and the ordinary one becomes the principal (य: प्रथम भावी मुख्य: स्तोता तं जघन्यं करोति, यश्च जघन्य: स्तोता तं मुख्यं करोति—Sayana).

16. Edhamana-dvit ubhayasya raja coskuyate visah indrah manusyan—hating the impious, king of both, Indra offers to tribes and men. He scatters the impious, and hates them always who do not press the Soma juice. He distributes wealth among the Soma-pressers. King of both (उभयस्य राजा), i.e. the king of celestial and terrestrial wealth. The two words coskuyamana (चोष्कूयमाण, Ṛv. I.33.3) and coskuyate (चोष्कूयते) are reduplicated forms. (एधमाना नहृद्वेष्टयसुन्वत: । सुन्वतो ऽभ्यादधाति । उभयस्य राजा । दिव्यस्य च पार्थिवस्य च । चोष्कूयमाण इति चोष्कूयतेश्चर्करीतवृत्तम् —Nir. VI.22).

18. Rupam rupam—pratirupo babhuva, Indra has assumed various forms (compare, अग्निर्यथैको भुवनं प्रविष्टो रूपं रूपं प्रतिरूपो बभूव, Katha Up. V.9)—Indra (the resplendent soul), then becomes the same as Agni, the Lord adorable, or Visnu, the all-pervading, Rudra, Lord of supreme vitality, or any deity to be adored. While interpreting the Vedic verses, this point is very significant ; Indra, Varuna, Agni, Mitra, Bhaga, Visnu, Rudra, Aryaman, whether taken as singles, or in pairs or in groups of three represent different phases of one and the same Lord,—a pure form of monotheism, neither atheism nor pantheism ; cf. ekam sad vipra bahudha vadanti—एकं सद् विप्रा बहुधा वदन्ति—I.164.46).

The phrase is applicable to the lower self as much as for the highest supreme. The lower self, the soul, transmigrates into the bodies of different species, and there it functions according to the new environments, essentially remaining the same. The physical body of man has ten thousands and more nerves, whereby the soul receives the impulses and communicates with the outside world. (हे मनुष्या य इन्द्रो मायाभि: प्रति चक्षणाय रूपं रूपं प्रति रूपो बभूव पुरुरूप ईयते तदस्य रूपमिति । यस्याऽस्य हि दशशता हरयो युक्ताः शरीरं वहन्ति तदस्य सामर्थ्यं वर्तते—Daya.).

Indra, is also identified with the Supreme Lord, paramesvara, the first cause in creation, ('इदि परमैश्वर्ये' इत्यस्य धातोरर्थानुगमात् इन्द्र: परमात्मा —Sayana).

19. Harita, pair of horses (हरिता हरणशीलावश्वौ—Daya.), yoked to the chariot of body—the five sense organs—a wise charioteer is one who keeps control over his horses ; that person alone enjoys who has a control over his senses and sense-lingerings.

Tvasta, an appellation for Indra, who is either the supreme Lord or the lower self (त्वष्टा तत्कर्त्ता जीव:—Daya.) ; the enlightened Indra (त्वष्टा दीप्त इन्द्र:—Sayana).

20. चिकित्सा = चिकित्स, अत्र संहितायामिति दीर्घ:—Panini VI.1.70).

There is a myth attached to this verse ; Garga, who is the seer of this hymn, it is said, lost his way in a desert ; thereon, he recited this hymn, invoked Bṛhaspati and Indra, as a result of which he regained his road. —A mere conjecture without a basis.

Agavyuti Ksetram, a place devoid of the pasture for grazing cattle (अग व्यूति अगोचरं गोसंचार रहितं निर्जनं क्षेत्रं देशं—Sayana ; gavyuti is also a measure equivalent to two kosas or four miles = 6.4 kilometers (अगव्यूति क्रोशद्वय परिमाण रहितं—Daya.).

21. Uda-vraje, a country into which waters flow ; or a country of this name (उद व्रजे । उदकानि व्रजन्त्यस्मिन्नित्युद व्रजो देशविशेषः—Sayana ; उदकानि व्रजन्ति यस्मिँस्तस्मिन्—Daya.).

Sambaram, to the cloud (Nigh. I.10) ; see pervious notes on it.

22. Prastokah, one who present (प्रस्तोकः यः प्रस्तौति—Daya.).

Divodasat, the giver of light (दिवोदासात् प्रकाशदातुः—Daya.).

Atithi-gvasya, the care-taker of guests ; one who comes to guests for helping them (अतिथिग्वस्य योऽतिथीनागच्छति तस्य —Daya.).

Dasa-kosayih, lands pertaining to gold of ten treasuries or of ten boxes (दशकोशयीः सुवर्णपूर्णान् दशसंख्याकान् कोशान्—Sayana ; कोशयीः याः कोशन्यान्ति ता भूमीः—Daya.).

23. The verse refers to the liberality of a rich king who gives away a large number of horses, and big quantities of gold, clothes and food.

Hiranyapindan, gold slabs.

Dasa kosan, ten bags, purses, or chests full of gold (दशकोशान् दशसंख्याकान् हिरण्यपूर्णान्—Sayana ; दशगुणधन पूर्णान्—Daya.).

Adhibhojana,—here bhojanam means wealth or riches .(भोजनमिति धननाम—Nigh. II.10 ; अधिकं धनं येषां मूल्यम्—Sayana).

According to traditionalists, Prastoka (प्रस्तोकः). Divodasa (दिवोदास), and Atithigvan (अतिथिग्वन्) are the names of one and the same person.

24. Atharvabhyah, the preceptors, the non-injurers (अथर्वभ्यः अहिंसकेभ्यः—Daya. ; the seers of the family of Atharva—Sayana).

Payave, for the civic guard (पायवे पालनाय—Daya.) ; Payu is a brother of Garga (Sayana).

Asvathah, the chief of a trust (अश्वथः योऽश्नुते सः—Daya.) ; the one with horses (अश्वथः अश्ववानेतत्संज्ञः प्रस्तोकः ; the same as Prastoka—Sayana).

26. Suvirah, with good children, or with brave soldiers (सुवीरः शोभनैर्वीरैः शूरभटैः पुत्रादिभिर्वायुक्तश्च भव—Sayana).

Gobhih, with cow products like hide etc. (गोभिः गोविकारैश्चर्मभिः —Sayana) ; one full of learning and knowledge (गोभिः सुशिक्षिताभिर्वाग्भिः —Daya.).

For this verse, see Yv. XXIX.52 ; Av.VI.125.1 and Nir. IX.12.

O lord of forests, our friend, promoter and a noble hero, indeed be firm in body. Thou art girt with cowhide, be strong. May Thy rider win what is to be won. —a noble hero, i.e. a blessed hero (सुवीरः कल्याणवीरः) ; be strong, i.e. be very firm (वीलयस्वेति सस्तभस्व) ; win what is to be won, i.e. what is worthy of winning (ग्रास्थाता ते जयतु जेतव्यानि)—Nir. IX.12.

27. Gobhih pari-avrtam, all round surrounded by cowhide or rays (गोभिः किरणैः ग्रावृतं ग्राच्छादितं परि सर्वतः—Daya. ; encompassed by the cowhide, गोभिः गोविकारैश्चर्मभिः परि परितः ग्रावृतं ग्रावेष्टितं—Sayana).

28. Marutam anikam, army of people (Daya.) ; precursor of Maruts (Wilson ; मरुतां एतत्संज्ञानां देवगणानां ग्रनीकं ग्रग्रभूतं तद्वच्छीघ्रगामी—outstripping in speed—Sayana) ; principal or leader (मुख्यं—Mahidhara).

Mitrasya garbhah, in the midst of the activity of vital breaths (मित्रस्य प्राणस्य गर्भः मध्यस्थः—Daya.). Sayana endeavours to make sense of, by saying, the car is to be considered as contained by Mitra, the ruler of the day, as moving by day, whilst by nabhi of varuna, it is intimated to be a fixed point or centre for the deity ruling over the night, when the car of Indra or surya stands still.

Mahidhara derives garbha from √ गृ, gr to praise, and considers mitrasya garbhah, equivalent to suryena stuyamana, सूर्येण स्तूयमान, to be praised by the sun. Nabhi, he derives from √ नभ्, nabh, to injure. and translates it as the weapon of Varuna

On these interpretations, Wilson comments : both Scholiasts labour superfluously to attach meaning to what was never intended to have any.

29. Fill earth and heaven also with thy roar. Let the immovable and the movable think of thee everywhere. Besides, O drum, together with Indra and the gods, keep off the enemy farther than afar.

This is quoted in Nir. IX.13 (उपश्वासय, पृथिवीं च दिवं च। बहुधा ते घोषं मन्यताम् । विष्ठितं स्थावरं जङ्गमं च यत् । स दुन्दुभे सहजोषण इन्द्रेण च देवैश्च। दूराद्दूरतरमपसेध शत्रून्, i.e. stationary and जगत्, that are non-stationary ; think highly of thy loud call, O drum, associated with Indra and the gods, disperse the enemy farther than what is very far).

30-31. The two verses and also verse 29, refer to drum and its sounding as a signal. They have wider meanings than merely war signals. The war, the battle, the conflict, they refer to is not the conflict against political powers. This conflict refers to the inner struggle against vices of our own, the evil forces which overpower us in our weak moments. The conflict eternally continues in our subconsciousness and at various levels of our awareness. It is in the recovery of our lost or stolen cattle, Indra, the super-consciousness, ultimately becomes victorious. The horses, the chariots, maruts, sambara, vṛtra and other terms should be taken in this context. How desparate and critical becomes the situation when one has to say, "We have wandered into a desert where there is no track of cattle : the vast extant earth has become the protectress of murderers." (20).

The verses 29-31 recur in Yv. XXIX. 55-57.

2. Napatam, the one who does not destroy or cause the decline (नपातं अपातयि तारमनाशकं—Daya.) : a son (नपातं पुत्रं प्रशंसिषमित्यनुषङ्गात् प्रशंसामेत्यर्थः —Sayana) ; (urjah napatam, the son of strength ; the one who does not cause the decline of strength or power—Daya.).

5. Apah, adri[illegible], and similar terms like mathitah according to traditionalists refer to the water prepared to mix with the Soma, known as vasativari, the stones for grinding the Soma, and churning or attrition for the production of sacrificial fire. (आपः वसतीवर्याख्याः) ।

Apah, water (Nigh.I.12).

Adrayah, stones ; also clouds (अद्रयः ग्रावाणः—Sayana ; अद्रयः मेघाः —Daya. ; Nigh. I.10).

Vanah, woods, or woodsticks for fire ; also rays of the sun (वना वनानि काष्ठानि च—Sayana ; वना किरणाः—Daya., Nigh. I.5).

Ṛtasya, of water, (Nigh.I.12) (ऋतस्य यज्ञस्योदकस्य वा—Sayana).

6. Urmyasu, in the nights (ऊर्म्यासु रात्रिषु—Daya.; Nigh.I.7 ; रात्रि नामैतत्—Sayana).

The smoke (धूम:) or the dense water vapours proceed to midspace in the form of clouds, and as smoke goes to heights, its generator, agni, as if also goes along with it. (धूमो हि मेघात्मना परिणत: सन् अन्तरिक्षे गच्छति। कार्यकारणयोरभेद विवक्षया तद् गमनमग्नावुपचर्यते—Sayana).

8. Satam himah, a hundred winters or a hundred years (शतंहिमा: शतं हेमन्तान् संवत्सरान्—Sayana ; शतं हिमा: वृद्धीर्हेमन्तानृतून् वा—Daya.).

Purbhih, by protections (पूर्भि: पालनै:—Sayana) ; by cities (पूर्भि: नगरै: —Daya.).

10. Tokam-tanayam, the infant (तोकं सद्योजातमपत्यं, the newly born child—Daya.) and the tender (तनयं सुकुमारं—Daya.) ; both the words mean usually the son, but in the Veda, usually they occur in pairs, often interpreted as sons and grandsons (तोकं पुत्रं तनयं पौत्रं च—Sayana). But both are synonyms (तुक्, तोकं, तनय:, तोक्म, तक्म as अपत्यनामानि—Nigh.II.2).

For the use in pairs, see :

तोकं-तनयम्, tokam-tanayam—
I.64.14 ; 92.13 ; II.25.2 ; VI.13.6 ; 48.10 ;

11. Sabah-dugham dhenum, the milk yielding cow (सबर्दुघाम् । सबरिति पयसो नाम ; sabah = milk ; श्रमरणहेतुभूतस्य पयसो दोग्ध्रीं धेनुं गाम्—Sayana).

The milch cow, dhenu, is here introduced since the milk is the appropriate offering to the Maruts, the deities of a series of verses (11-15 etc.) in this hymn, or as an offering to Pṛsni, the mythological mother of the Maruts, in the form of a cow, (पृश्निः = गौः = नभः, the sky, Nigh. I.4).

Dhenum, is also speech (धेनुरितिवाङ्नाम—Nigh. I.11 ; सबर्दुघां सर्व-कामना प्रपूरिकां, the fulfiller of all aspirations—Daya.).

12. Sumnaih eva-yavari, traversing the sky shedding delight (सुम्नैः सुखैः एवयावरी दुःखनिवारिका—dispeller of troubles by giving delights. —Daya.).

Sumnaih, with the means of happiness (सुम्नैः सुखैर्हेतुभूतैः—Sayana).

Evayavari, from eva, एव, who or what goes, as a horse, or the water of midair, the rain ; and yavari, who goes with, i.e. who proceeds with rains, giving pleasures to others (एवयावरी एवैर्गन्तृभिरश्वैर्मध्यमस्थानै-रुदकैर्वा सह यान्ती अन्येषामपि सुखार्थं वृष्टिजलैः सहागच्छन्ती तां धेनुमुपाजध्वम्—Sayana).

13. Bharadvajaya, for Bharadvaja, for the possessor of enlightenment (भरद्वाजाय धृतविज्ञानाय—Daya.). Milk for him ; a twofold blessing (द्विता) ; the cow which gives milk to universe, and food to sustain every one.

15. Marutam, like the band of men (मारुतं मनुष्याणामिदम्—Daya. ; मरुत्संघरूपमीदृशं—Sayana).

Sardhah, strength (शर्धः = बलम्—Nigh.II.9).

16. Samsisam nu te apikarne, close to your ears I speak your praise (lit. I celebrate thy praise quickly at thine ear) (शंसिषं प्रशंसेयं नु सद्यः ते तव अपिकर्णे आच्छादित श्रोत्रे—Daya.).

17. Kakambiram, the progeny of crows (Wilson) ; the protector of crows (काकम्बीरं काकानां भर्तारं—Sayana ; काकानां गोपकं—Daya.).

Vanaspatim, trees, banyan and the like (वनस्पतिं वृक्षं—Sayana ; वनस्पतिं वटादिकं—Daya.).

एवा = एव (निपातस्य चेति दीर्घः—Panini VI.3.135).

Kakambarim vanaspatim ma ut vṛhah, may you not uproot the trees sustaining crows (मा काकानां गोपकं उत् उच्छेदयेः वटादिकम्—Daya.) ; uproot not. Pusan, the forest lord with its progeny of crows. By metaphor, it alludes to the Ṛsi and his family, children and dependents (ऋषिः पुत्रपौत्रसहितमात्मानं बहुपक्ष्याश्रय वनस्पतित्वेन रूपयन् तस्यानुद्धारयाशास्ते—Sayana).

Eva cana grivah a-dadhate veh, as fowlers set snares to birds.

Sayana translates grivah, as snares (दामानि), of the nature of net, an unusual interpretation (ग्रीवाः । गिरन्त्यन्तरवस्थापयन्ति बध्नन्तीति ग्रीवा दामानि । यथा व्याधाः वेः पक्षिणो ग्रहणार्थं ग्रीवा दामानि जालरूपाणि आदधते भूम्यां निदधते तैश्च निहितैः पक्षिणो हरन्ति एवमस्मान् बन्धनोपायैः शत्रुर्मा हार्षीत्—Sayana).

18. Dṛteh-iva, as that of cloud (दृतेःऽइव मेघस्येव—Daya. दृतिः = मेघनाम, Nigh. I.10) ; dṛti is also a leatherbag ; a container made of skin.

Dadhanvatah, containing curd (दधन्वतः दधिमतः—Sayana) ; of the one which holds with grip (दधन्वतः दृढत्वेन धर्तुः—Daya.) ; also, of the one who possesses noble characteristics as love for learning etc.—दधन्वतः विद्याशुभगुण धर्तणां धारकस्य—Daya.).

Sayana maintains, according to tradition, that a skin of curds is always carried in Pusan's chariot.

22. Sayana's interpretation that heaven, earth and milk of Pṛsni having been once generated stay on for ever, and are not generated again is against the Vedic concept of succession of worldly existences.

Prsnyah dugdham, milk of Pṛsni, mother of the Maruts, i.e. the cow-divine ; from whose milk, the Maruts were born. (पृश्न्यै वै पयसो मरुतो जाताः—Tait. S.II.2.11.4.)

Tat anyah na anu jayate, not born again like that (तत् ततः परम् अन्यः पदार्थः तानु जायते तत्सदृशो नोत्पद्यते—Sayana).

According to Dayananda, the entire universe (which includes the sun (द्यौः), earth (पृथिवी) and midspace steller bodies' (पृश्न्याः) is created by the Supreme Lord, who stays aloof and is not born along with the creation (तत् अन्यः, He remains aloof ; न अनु जायते and is not born in the same way ; येनेश्वरेण सूर्यादिकं जगद् युगपदुत्पाद्यते स एतया सृष्टया सह न जायतेऽस्या भिन्नः सन् सर्वं सद्यो जनयति—Daya.).

For verse 8, see Nir. XII.18.

1. Mitra-Varuna, मित्रावरुणा—When used in pair may mean (i) the pair of prana and udana, the two vital breaths, (ii) the pair of preceptor and teacher ; (iii) the pair of the sun-divine and ocean-divine ; (iv) Lord of protection and of venerability,—one Lord but with a pair of attributive characteristics ; (v) pair of energy and plasma, and (vi) Lord, the source of light and the source bliss (I.17) ; see notes on I.2.7, whilst Varuna is the excellent or chosen one, Mitra is friend also. These terms are the names of the Sun also.

Mitrah, (मित्रः) is so called because he protects (त्रायते) from destruction, or because he runs (द्रवति), measuring things together (√मी) ; in this sense, the sun also ; or the word is derived from the causal of mid (√ मिद्), to be fat, (Nir. X.21 ; see Ṛv.III.59.1, मित्रो जनान्यातयति). Also see notes on I.1.7.

Varuna, along with Vayu is known to be the deity of the middle region (Nir.X.I) ; he is so called because he covers (√ वृ). Varuna sends forth the cloud, whose door opens downwards. He is the sovereign king of entire universe (भुवनस्य राजा), who moistens earth as rain does barley (Ṛv.V.85.3). Varuna is atmospheric or celestial deity is a controversial question ; usually rain is mentioned as a function of the sun. The controversy is clarified by the verse [illegible], where he is regarded as belonging to the middle region (मध्यमो वरुणः). See notes on I.1.7.

According to Sayana, we have also the same (मित्रावरुणा। मित्रः प्रमीतेस्त्रायको वरुणः पापान्निवारयिता, i.e., Mitra is one who measures out and Varuna the one who protects against sins and ills).

Agni, for this see earlier notes, (I. 1. 1.); Lord or a person, shining or glorious like fire is also agni (अग्निः अग्निरिव तेजस्वी—Daya.).

2. Visah-visah, between people and people, i.e. belonging to every man (विशः ऽविशः प्रजाया प्रजाया मध्ये—Daya. ; सर्वस्या प्रजायाः—Sayana).

Yuvatyoh, of the two young (man and woman); i.e. bride and bridegroom; here earth and heaven (युवत्योः द्यावापृथिव्योः—Sayana ; युवावस्था प्राप्तयोः स्त्री-पुरुषयोः—Daya.).

Divah sisum, the child of the celestial region (दिवः शिशुं द्युलोकस्य पुत्रं —Sayana); child of a cherishing one, कमनीयस्य बालकं—Daya.

Agni or fire is born of the celestial region (see दिवस्परि प्रथमं जज्ञे अग्निः—Ṛv. X. 45. 1.). Also see त्वं पुत्रो भवसि यस्तेऽविधत् Ṛv.II.1.9).

Strbhih, with stars (स्तृभि नक्षत्रादिभिः—Daya). The word star is derived from this word, which has been used only in plural.

Duhitara; the two daughters, night and day, since they are directly or indirectly associated with the rise and the setting of the sun (दुहितरा दुहितरौ । सूर्येण हि अहोरात्रयोर्विभागः क्रियते—Sayana).

Kavim iyaksasi prayajyo, show favour to the sage. Here prayajayo (प्रयज्यो) is vocative ; addresses to Vayu (wind) ; Kavim, the intelligent adorer (कविः क्रान्तदर्शी ; कविं मेधाविनं स्तोतारं—Sayana ; कविं विद्वांसमिव क्रान्तप्रज्ञं—Daya.).

Iyaksasi, worship or adore with riches (इयक्षसि धनेन पूजय—Sayana) ; meet or attain (इयक्षसि संगच्छसे प्राप्नोषि वा, इयक्षतीति गतिकर्म्मा—Nigh.II.14—Daya.).

6. Jagad a Kṛnudhvam, multiply the moveable (wealth). It may mean moveable, and immoveable, both types of organic kingdom (vegetable and animal life). (जगत् स्थावर जंगमात्मकं सर्व प्राणिजातं—Sayana).

Purisani, the widespread waters (पुरीषाणि पूरकान्युदकानि—Sayana; उदकानि ; पुरीषमित्युदक नाम—Daya.) Nigh. I.12

7. Kanye ; daughter ; the one to be cherished or loved (कन्या कमनीया).

Sarasvati, one possessing divine knowledge (सरस्वती विज्ञानाढ्या—Daya.).

Dhiyam, the sanctioned deities ; the intelligence or wisdom ; a noble act (धियं शास्त्रोत्थां प्रज्ञामुत्तमं कर्म वा—Daya. ; अस्मदीयं यज्ञाख्यं कर्म—Sayana).

Gnabhih, by the well-disciplined speeches or words (ग्नाभिः सुशिक्षिताभिर्वाग्भिः—Daya. ; Nigh. I.11).

Gna is also wife of god (see Nir. XII.46) ; or deva-patni. See Ṛv.V.46.8; उत ग्ना व्यन्तु देवपत्नीः), such as Indrani (of Indra) ; Agnayi (of Agni) ; Asvini (of Asvins), Rodasi (of Rudra) ; Varunani (of Varuna).

Gayatri and other Vedic meters are also known as gna (छन्दांसि वैग्नाः Tait.S.V.I.7.2).

8. Pathah-pathah, of every path (पथस्पथः सर्वस्य मार्गस्य—Sayana) ; मार्गान्मार्गान्—Daya.

Pari-patim, protector, Lord-supreme (परिपतिं अधिपतिं—Sayana; other than the husband, or an incharge from all sides, पतिं वर्जयित्वा वा सर्वतः स्वामिनम्—Daya.).

Dhiyam-dhiyam, every thought or act of wisdom, every rite (धियंधियं सर्वमस्मदीयं कर्म—Sayana ; प्रज्ञां प्रज्ञां कर्म कर्म वा—Daya.).

Made ready with desire, he has reached or come in contact with, the worshipful supreme overlord of every path. May he give us treasures of noteworthy surface, and may Pusan accomplish our every action—Nir.XII.18.

9. Yajatam pastyanam, the adored of houses i.e. householders (यजतं यष्टव्यं । गृहस्थैर्यजनीयं ; पस्त्यानां पस्त्यमिति गृहनाम—Sayana ; यजतं संगन्तव्यं गृहाणां—Daya. ; पस्त्यं=गृहनाम=house ;—Nigh.III.4).

10. वर्धया=वर्धय (संहितायामिति दीर्घः—Panini VI.1.70).

Ṛdhak, truth (ऋधक् सत्यं—Daya.) ; that which leads to prosperity ऋधक् ऋद्धं समृद्धं यथा भवति तथा—Sayana).

Ṛsvam, the great (ऋष्वं महान्तं—Daya.) ; worth seeing ; of pleasing aspect (ऋष्वं दर्शनीयं—Sayana).

11. Naksanto angirasvat, spreading like the rays of light ; like the moving wind (नक्षन्तः प्राप्नुवन्तः अङ्गिरस्वत् प्रशस्ता अङ्गिरसो वायवस्तद्वत्—Daya. ; नक्षन्तः व्याप्नुवन्तः । अङ्गिरस्वत् । अङ्गिरसो गमनशीला रश्मयः । ते यथा शीघ्रं नभस्तलं व्याप्नुवन्ति तद्वत्—Sayana).

Angirasah, rays endowed with movement (Sayana) ; wind endowed with motion (Daya.). The Ṛsis may also be angirasah.

Acitram, non-wonderful (अचित्रं अनद्भुतं—Daya.) ; also a place scanty of timber (since citram is a place thick with shrubs and trees) (अचित्रं चित् । ओषधिवनस्पतिभि निविडो देशश्चित्रम् । तद्विलक्षणं ओषध्यादिभिर्वियुक्तमपि देशम्—Sayana).

Jinvatha, जिन्वथा=जिन्वथ (संहितायामिति दीर्घः—Panini VI.1.70), refresh with rain (जिन्वथ वृष्टया तर्पयथ—Sayana ; जिन्वथ प्राप्नुवन्ति—Daya.), Maruts have been invoked to satisfy such arid lands with rain.

12. Nakam, the midspace, devoid of ills and troubles (नाकम् अविद्यमान दुःखमन्तरिक्षं—Daya.).

Stṛbhih, by stars and constellation (स्तृभिः नक्षत्रैः—Daya.).

Vipah, of the wise, of the adorer or priest (विपः विप्रस्य मेधाविनः स्तोतुः —Sayana ; wise or one full of wisdom, विपः मेधावी—Daya).

13. Visnuh, Lord who pervades ; all pervading Lord (विष्णुः यो वेवेष्टि स जगदीश्वरः—Daya.).

Sipivista and Visnu are two names or synonyms of Visnu (शिपिविष्टो विष्णुरिति विष्णोर्द्वेनामनी भवतः Nir.V.7).

The former has a contemptuous meaning, so says Aupamanyava, (See किमित्ते विष्णो परिचक्ष्यं भूत्प्र यद्ववक्षे शिपिविष्टो अस्मि—Ṛv.VII.100.6: What was blameable in thee, O Visnu, that thou didst declare, "I am sipivista".).

Visnu creates or measures out the regions in three stages or steps (or only thrice) for the good of people in peril (यो विष्णुर्बाधिताय मनवे पार्थिवानि रजांसि त्रिश्चिद् विममे तस्यसम्बन्धे—Daya.'s paraphrase of this verse 13).

14. Ahihbudhnyah, अहिः बुध्न्यः, a serpent of depth ; cloud in the midspace (अहिः मेघः बुध्न्यः अन्तरिक्षे—Daya.).

Ahi is the synonym of cloud (Nigh I.10), since of its motion ; it moves in the atmosphere (अहिरयनात् । एति अन्तरिक्षे—Nir.II.17; cf. Ṛv.I.32.11: दासपत्नीरहिगोपा, having demon as their master and the cloud their guardian). The other meaning of ahi is serpent, derived from the same root, or from आ√हन् , to attack, with its preposition shortened ; it attacks (अयमपीतरोऽहिरेतस्मादेव । निर्ह्रसितोपसर्गः । आहन्तीति ।—Nir.II.17).

Budhnam is a syonym for midspace, the middle region (बुध्नमन्तरिक्षं —Sayana), and budhnya is what is or who is born in antariksa or midspace, and hence, a cloud.

Parvatah, cloud (पर्वतः मेघः—Daya.). Clouds are so called because, they move in layers or parva. But Sayana translates the term as filler (पर्वतः पूरयिता । 'पर्व पूरणे' इति धातुः । यद्वा पर्ववद्वज्रं पर्वतः । तद्वान् । पर्वतस्य गिरेः शत्रुरिति वा पर्वतः), derived from the verb parva, to fill. He gives another alternative. Parvata is the wielder of thunderbolt i.e. Indra, or also the enemy of hills or parvata is also parvata. See our notes on I.19.7 also.

In Nir. I.20, we have : Parvata (mountain) is so called because it has joints (parva ; पर्ववान् पर्वतः). But parva is derived from the root√पॄ to fill, or from √प्री , to propitiate (पर्वपुनः पृणातेः प्रीणातेर्वा). Ardhamasa (a period of fortnight is also parva, because in this period the gods are propitiated (अर्धमास पर्व, देवानस्मिन्प्रीणन्तीति). The mountain is also called parvata on account of the similarity of joints of the nature of the period (parva).

Canah, food (चनः अन्नं—Sayana अन्नादिकम्—Daya.). The Nighantu does not include this word in the synonyms of anna.

Osadhibhih, Soma herb or other medicinal herbs (ओषधीभिः सोमलतादिभिः—Daya.) or it may be vegetables as sesamum, pulse and the like (ओषधीभिः । ओषः पाकः आसुधीयते इत्योषधयस्तिल माषाद्याः—Sayana ; from osa, vitality or energy).

Ratisacah, all the givers or liberal donors, and hence visvedevah, all gods, all Nature's bounties, who receive and give back both in plenty. (रातिऽसाचः । दानकर्त्तारः—Daya.); रातिषाचः । रातिं दानं सचन्ते सेवन्ते इति रातिषाचो विश्वदेवाः—Sayana).

15. Puru-viram, one with numerous virah or children ; vira is one born of virya or semen, and thus son, grandson and the like (पुरुवीरं वीर्याज्जायन्त इति वीराः पुत्रादयः—Sayana) ; also vira is one with vitality or vigour, and hence a brave person (पुरवो बहवो वीरा यस्मात्तम्—Daya.).

Carsanipram, male dependents, persons related to men (चर्षणिप्राम् । चर्षणयो मनुष्याः । तेषां पूरयितारं—Sayana ; यश्चर्षणीन्मनुष्यान्प्राति व्याप्नोति तम्—Daya.).

For verses 5 and 14 see Nir. VI.6 and XII.33 respectively.

1. The hymn deals with cosmic evolution, and Nature's numerous bounties participating in the huge task. We have such terms occurring in the verses : Aditi, Varuna, Mitra, Agni, Aryaman, Savitṛ, Bhaga (who are the protecting deities—tratṛn devan). For Varuna, Mitra, and Agni, see our notes on VI.49.1, for Agni on I.1.1 ; for Bhaga on I.14.3. for Savitṛ, our notes on I. 22.5 (Nir.X.31) ; for Aditi on I.24.1; 89. 10; and for Aryaman on I.26.4 (Nir.IV.22,23; XI.22.2-4).

Aditi, the unimpaired, mother of gods (अदितिरदीना देवमाता Nir. IV.22; cf. Brhaddevata II.46). Everything born or shall be born is Aditi, dyau (heaven) ; antariksa (atmosphere); father, mother, son, five classes of men and all-gods* (I.89. 10). With these words, the seers, describe the greatness of Aditi,—or else all these things are unimpaired (अदीनाः) (अदितेर्विभूतिमाचष्टे, एनान्यदीनानीति वा—Nir.IV.23).

Aditi attends on the birth of two kings Mitra and Varuna, and the ordinance (action, vrata) of Daksa ; दक्षस्य वादिते जन्मनि व्रते राजाना मित्रावरुणा विवाससि—X.64.5. It is said that Daksa is a son of Aditi, and is praised among the sons of Aditi, but it is also said that Aditi is daughter of Daksa (अदितेर्दक्षो अजायत दक्षाद्वदितिः परि । अदितिर्ह्यजनिष्ट दक्ष या दुहिता तव 1-X.72.4 ; आदित्यो दक्षः इत्याहुः । अदित्यमध्ये च स्तुतः । अदितिर्दाक्षायणी—Nir.XI.24).

* अदितिर्द्यौरदितिरन्तरिक्षमदितिर्माता स पिता स पुत्रः ।
विश्वदेवा अदितिः पञ्चजना अदितिर्जातमदिति र्जनित्वम् ॥

Agni is also known as Aditi (अग्निरप्यदितिरुच्यते Aditi gives perfect innocence, i.e. faultlessness in the entire sphere of action (अनागास्त्वमदिते सर्वताता ।—I.94.15 ; अनागास्त्वम् । अनपराधत्वम् । अदिते । सर्वासु कर्म ततिषु—Nir. XI.24).

Aryaman, a synonym for the sun ; it has many chariots (or it is very swift) ; and its path is unobstructed, i.e. unimpeded ; it chastises the enemy (darkness). Seven priests, seven rays, extract juices for him, or seven seers praise him. In births of diverse forms (or activities), the sun rises (अतूर्तपन्थाः पुरुरथो अर्यमा सप्तहोता विषुरूपेषु जन्मन्—X.64.5, commented by Nir.XI.23).

Savitr, same as the sun ; the creator Lord ; see our notes on I.22.5.

Bhaga, Gracious Lord ; a name for enjoyment also. For this we have "As a consumer to his enjoyment" (जार आ भगम्—Ṛv. X. 11.6, and Av.XVIII. 1. 33). The sun is called here a consumer (जार); he is the consumer of night ; he is the consumer of lights also (स्वसुर्जारः शृणोतु नः) —VI.55.5 ; here dawn is the sister of the seer ; and the sun is dawn's consumer (dawn is sister, savsṛ, from companionship, or drawing the juices—Nir.III.16.

Bhagam, is also glory (भगं ऐश्वर्यम्—Daya.).

Daksapitrn, clever parents or preceptors (दक्षपितॄन् चतुरान् जनकानध्यापकान् वा—Daya.) ; whose grandfather is daksa or clever (or Daksa by name); grandfather may be any elder in ancestry. (See आहं पितॄन् त्सुविदत्रां अवित्सि, X.15.3 ; अदितिर्ह्यजनिष्ट, X.72.5). For the relation between Daksa and Aditi, see note on verse 1 of this hymn.

Dvijanmanah, twice born ; this refers to the sun, first born in heaven, then out of the sea. It refers to a child also who is first born of its mother, and the second time, out of the "womb", as if, of the preceptor as a student. (द्विजन्मानः द्वयोर्लोकयोः जायमानाः प्रादुर्भवन्तः—Sayana ; i.e. manifest in two places, heaven and earth).

4. अद्या=अद्य (निपातस्य चेति दीर्घः—Panini VI.3.135).

Rudrasya sunavah, the sons of Rudra, the teaser of the wicked (रुद्रस्य दुष्टानां रोदयितुं—Daya.) ; or the sons of Lord of vitality, i.e. Maruts, the elements of human vital complex (in cosmos, the cloud bearing winds) , रुद्रस्य सूनवः पुत्राः मरुतः—Sayana).

Vasavah, the giver of dwellings (वसवः वासयितारः—Sayana) ; the learned scholars of the third or the lowest category (वसवः आदि कोटिस्था विद्वांसः—Daya.), the other two categories are Rudra (the middle one) and Aditya (the top one). Such planets as may have the probability of sustaining life are also Vasu. Again, a Brahmacarin who observes austerity with necessary discipline up to the age of 36 is rudra, and the one up to the age of 48 is aditya.).

5. Abhyardha-yajva, the participator in the half of the reward अभ्यर्धयज्वा आभिमुख्यस्योर्द्ध सङ्गन्ता—Daya.) ; whom the rewarder with prosperity honours with wealth (अभ्यर्धयज्वा स्तोतॄनभ्यर्धन् समृद्धान् कुर्वन् यो यजति धनेन पूजयति तादृशः—Sayana).

This is commented upon by Yaksa : the term means one who offers sacrifices, having made them in separate parts (सिषक्ति पूषा अभ्यर्धयज्वा अभ्यर्धयन् यजति—Pusan, who sacrifices in separate parts, pours down—Nir. VI.6).

7. Sam yoh, security and removal, Sam=positive pleasure, or peace (Santi, शान्ति) ; yuh = freedom from or removal of pain (शं शमनं उपद्रवाणां i.e. calming down or annihilating obstacles ; योः यावनं पृथक्करणं, पृथक्कर्तव्यानां भयानां, i.e removal of troubles, or making separate of those things which are to be kept off).

Tokaya-tanayaya, for the infant and for the boy (तोकाय अल्पवयसे तनयाय सुकुमाराय सन्तानाय—Daya) ; for children and their children (तोकाय पुत्राय तनयाय तत्पुत्राय—Sayana). Both the terms usually occur in pairs, and are synonyms of son (Nigh.II 2, अपत्यनामानि). See our note on VI.48 10.

9. अद्या=अद्य (संहितायामिति दीर्घः—Panini.VI.1.70)

Divyah, celestial, i.e. the Adityas of heaven (self-luminous stars of uppermost region).

Parthivasah, terrestrial, i.e. the vasavas, born on the earth (पार्थिवासः पृथिव्यां भवा वसवः—Sayana).

Gojatah, born in midspace (गोजाता: गव्यन्तरिक्षे प्रसिद्धा:—Daya.) ; pertaining to pṛsni, the midspace, i.e. the Maruts (गौ: पृश्निर्माध्यमिका वाक् । तत् उत्पन्ना मरुत:—Sayana).

Apyah, born in waters or in atmosphere (अप्या: अप्सु भवा:—Daya.) ; the aquatic, born in the firmament, i.e. the Rudras (अप्या: अप्सु अन्तरिक्षे भवा रुद्रा:—Sayana).

12. The terms used in this verse are : Rudra, Sarasvati, Visnu, Vayu, Ṛbhuksin, Vaja, Vidhatṛ, Parjanya and Vata, Nature's bounties invoked for food.

Rudrah, Lord of vitality, divine vital forces (teaser of wicked or the tormenter).

Sarasvati, learning personified, divine speech, the enlightened one (see notes on I.3.10).

Visnuh, omnipresent Lord, all pervading Lord (see notes on I.22.16 ; VI.49.13).

Vayuh, wind (see notes on I.2.1) ; lord of cosmic vitality or movements (see also Nir.II.8 ; V.6 ; VII.5, VII.17 and X.1).

Rbhuksah, man of wisdom (ऋभुक्षा: मेधावी—Daya.).

Rbhu, (the technician of aircrafts), Vibhu, (the technician of waterways) and Vaja (technician of roadways)—the three belong to the Academy of Defence (सौधन्वाना: from dhanu, defence weapon) (ऋभुक्षा: । ऋभुर्विभ्वावाज इति त्रय: सौधन्वना:—Sayana); of these three, Ṛbhu is the first, Vajah the last and Vibhuh, the middle one by intrapolation (तेषामाद्यो ऋभुश्च, वाज: अन्तिमश्च । उपलक्षणमेतत् । विभ्वा च—Sayana).

Vajah, normally food (Nigh.II.7); technician.

Vidhata, the creator, the protector ; the giver of law ; law-institutor (विधाता विधानकर्ता—Daya.) ; Prajapati (विधाता प्रजापतिश्च—Sayana) ; For Dhata and Vidhata see विश्वकर्मा विमना आद्विहाया धाता विधाता परमोत संदृक्—Ṛv.x.-82.2 ; Yv.XVII.26 ; Nir.X.26.

Parjanya, cloud-divine (see Parjanya Hymn VII.101-103). The word is derived from √तृप्, to be satisfied by reversing the first and last letter (r and p to p and r) ; one who gives satisfaction and is favourable to men (trp+janyah, तृप्+जन्य:=पृत्+जन्य:=पर्ज्+जन्य:=पर्+जन्य: =पर्जन्य.) ; or he is so called because he is the best conqueror (पर:+जिन्) or he is the best progenitor (पर:+जन्) ; or he is the bestower of juices (प्र+ऋज्) (पर्जन्यस्तृपेराद्यन्त विपरीतस्य तर्पयिता जन्य: । परो जेता वा परो जनयिता वा । प्रार्जयिता वा रसानाम्—Nir. X.10).

(See also I.38.9 and V.83.2. for Parjanya).

Vata, wind, may be the same as Vayu.

13. Apam napat, see notes on I.22.6.

Savitr, Lord of creativity ; see notes on I.22.5.

Bhaga, Lord of graces ; see notes on VI.50.1.

Tvastr, Lord of brilliance ; the architect ; master of designs, "Tvastṛ is so called because it pervades quickly" say the etymologists. It may, however, be derived from √त्विष् meaning to shine ; or from √त्वक्ष्, meaning to do (त्वष्टा तूर्णमश्नुत इति नैरूक्ता: । त्विषेर्वा स्यात् दीप्ति कर्मण: । त्वक्षतेर्वा स्यात् करोति कर्मण:—Nir.VIII.13).

See Ṛv.X.110.9; Av.V.12.9, Yv. XXIX.34 य इमे द्यावापृथिवी for an invocation to Tvastṛ : O wise and excellent sacrificer, incited by the sacrifice here today to Lord Tvastṛ, who made these two progenitors, heaven and earth, and all created beings beautiful.

Tvastṛ is an atmospheric deity ; he is enlisted among such gods of antariksa, midspace ; he is also Agni according to Sakapurni (माध्यमिकस्त्वष्टेत्याहु: । मध्यमे च स्थाने समाम्नात: । अग्निरिति शाकपूर्णि:—Nir.VIII.14). Also see I.95.2-5, where tvastṛ means fire (born in midair, heaven and waters).

14. For this verse, see also Yv. XXXIV.53; Nir.XII.33.

Ahirbudhnya, cloud born in midspace, see VI.49.14; a serpent of depth.

Aja-ekapad, one-footed goat, the one-footed driver, or he protects with one foot, or he drinks with one foot, or he has only one foot, he does not draw one foot out (अज एकपादजन एकः पादः । एकेन पादेन पातीति वा । एकेन पादेन पिबतीति वा । एकोऽस्य पाद इति वा । "एकं पादं नोत्खिदति"—Av.XI.4.21) : Nir.XII.29.

The verse is interpreted in Nir. XII.33 thus : May the serpent of depth, ahirbudhnya, hear us. And may the one-footed driver, the earth, the ocean, and the all-gods, the promoting truth (or promoting sacrifice) (सत्यवृधो यज्ञवृधो वा), and who are invoked and praised with stanzas and the stanzas uttered by wise men (i.e. by intelligent men) protect us.

1. Mitrayoh, of the two friends ; of the teacher and taught ; of the inbreath and the outbreath (मित्रयोः सुहृदोरध्यापकाध्येत्रोर्बाह्याभ्यन्तरस्थयोः प्राणयोर्वा—Daya.).

Varunayoh, of the pair as of udana or the up-breath etc. (वरुणयोः उदान इव वर्त्तमानयोः—Daya.).

Mitrayoh-varunayoh priyam, the favourite of or grateful to Mitra-Varuna pair (मित्रयोः वरुणयोः प्रियं । मित्र शब्दो वरुणशब्दश्च इतरेतर योगात् मित्रा वरुणावुभावप्याचष्टे । मित्रावरुणयोः प्रियम्—Sayana).

2. Trini vidathani, the three cognizable worlds (त्रीणि विदथानि वेदितव्यानि स्थानानि त्रींल्लोकान्—Sayana) ; the cognizable disciplines, actions, devotion and knowledge (त्रीणि वेदतुं योग्यानि कर्मोपासनाज्ञानानि—Daya.).

Devanam janma, the birth of divinities, (abiding in them), i.e. of the Vasus on the earth, of the Rudras in the firmament and of the Adityas in heaven (Sayana). Or, the birth of learned people of the three disciplines mentioned above (Daya.).

3. अच्छा = अच्छ (संहितायामिति दीर्घः—Panini VI.1.70).

4. Adityan, to the persons who have life-long dedicated to scholarship with austerity and sanctity for over a long age of 48 years (आदित्यान् कृताष्टचत्वारिंशद् वर्षं ब्रह्मचर्येण पूर्णविदुषः—Daya.) ; Also to Nature's bounties of the celestial region ; to the spiritual enlightenment of the innermost realm.

5. मृलता = मृलत (संहितायामिति दीर्घः—Panini VI.1.70)

Aditya adite, all invocative, O Aditi and O sons of Aditi (Sayana). O lady of deep learning and austerity (O Aditi), and other male scholars (adityas), similarly adept in austerities. (Daya.).

6. Vrkaya vrkye riradhata, Vrkaya, to the injurer or thief (वृकाय हिंसकाय स्तेनाय ; वृक्ये तस्यस्त्रियै—Sayana).

Vrkye, to the evil characteristics of the thief (वृकाय स्तेनाय वृक्ये वृकेषु स्तेनेषु भवे व्यवहारे—Daya.) ; or the wife of the thief ; or vṛka, the wild dog or wolf (वृको अरण्यश्वा, तस्य स्त्री वृकी), and vrki, its female (Sayana).

8. Namah dadhara prthivim dyam, the reverence sustains earth and heaven ; earth and heavenly receiving reverence from men continue to live for long time for the enjoyment of mortals (नमः नमस्कार एव पृथिवीमुत द्यां द्युलोकं च दाधार धारयति । द्यावा पृथिव्यौ प्राणिभिर्नमस्क्रियमाणे सत्यौ तदुपभोगाय चिरकालमव तिष्ठेते—Sayana).

9. Rtasya rathyah, the regulators (or adepts in the discipline) of your truthful life (ऋतस्य सत्यस्य रथ्यः रथेषु साधुः—Daya.) ; the regulators of your sacrifice ; leaders or conveyers of the sacrifice offered (ऋतस्य यज्ञस्य रथ्यः रंहितॄन् नेतॄन्—Sayana).

14. Panim, to a trader (पणिं व्यवहारकर्त्तारं—Daya.) ; a trader, a greedy trafficker, who gives no offerings to the gods, no presents to the priests (पणिं वणिजमदातारं—Sayana).

Atrinam, to one who deprives others of their wealth (अत्रिणं परस्वापहारकं—Daya.) ; voracious (अदनशीलं राक्षसादिकं—Sayana).

Vrkah, a robber, a thief (वृकः स्तेनः—Daya.) ; an extortioner, from √वृक्, to seize, to take away (वृक वृक आदाने-इति धातुः). Also vṛka is one who chooses, from √वृ (वृणोतीति वृकः, काकः श्वापदो वा Unadi, III.41).

Vrkah, also means the moon, so called because her light is disclosed, or because her light is not sufficient, or because her light is brighter or stronger (compared with stars). (वृकश्चन्द्रमा भवति । विवृत ज्योतिष्को वा । विकृत ज्योतिष्को वा । विक्रान्त ज्योतिष्को वा—Nir. V.20.

To support, we have the verse : अरूणो मासकृद् वृक. पथा यन्तं ददर्श हि—Ṛv.I.105.18 ; Bṛhaddevata II.112)—The red moon, maker of the month, indeed saw (the stars) going along the route.

The sun is also called vṛka, because he dispels darkness. (आदित्योऽपि वृक उच्यते—Nir. V.21). For we have the verse : अजोहवीदश्विना वर्तिका वामास्नो यत्सीममुञ्चतं वृकस्य—I.117.16)—The constant one invoked you ; O Asvins, when you released her, like a quail, from the mouth of wolf (vṛka) : here her is the dawn (उषा) who as the legend goes, was seized by the sun. She called upon the Asvins who released her (आह्वयदुषा अश्विनावादित्येनभिग्रस्ता । तामश्विना प्रमुमुचतुः । इत्याख्यानम् ।

A dog is also called vṛka on account of biting (श्वापि वृक उच्यते। विकर्तनात्) : thus, in its support, we have the words : वृकश्चिदस्य वारण उरामथिः Ṛv. VIII 66.8 ; Av. XX.97.2—the wolf, the killer of the sheep, indeed his warder, Here vrka is a dog, a watch dog ; the word also means wolf or jackal, and vrki is she-wolf or she-jackal, the butcher (वृद्धवाशिन्यपि वृक्युच्यते), as in the quotation : शतं मेषान्वृक्ये चक्षदान मृज्राश्वं तं पितान्धं चकार—(Ṛv.116.16) : The father made Ṛjrasva, who made a gift of a hundred rams to the she-wolf, blind (Nir. V.20-21).

1. Atiyajasya, of the one who is excessively interested in the performance of sacrifices (an exceedingly devoted public worker) (अतियाजस्य योऽतिशयेन यष्टु योग्यस्य यज्ञस्य—Daya.).

According to Sayana, Atiyaja is the name of a seer, who was rival to Ṛjisvan, a priest, who pronounces an imprecation (अतियाजो नाम कश्चिद् ऋषिरस्माद् ऋजिश्वन उत्कृष्टः स्यामहमिति बुद्धया देवान् यियक्षरास । ऋषिस्तदीयं यजनं निराचष्टाद्यया—Sayana).

2. Brahmadvisam, the enemy or obstructor of prayer, praise or divine knowledge ; even one hostile towards wealth or money, brahma being synonymous to dhana or wealth (ब्रह्मद्विषं धनस्य द्वेष्टारं—Daya. ; Nigh. II.10).

3. Brahmadvise, for the enemy of divine knowledge (ब्रह्मद्विषे वेदविद्याद्वेष्ट्रे—Daya.) ; an enemy of Brahman, the Lord Supreme or the high class Brahmanas (ब्रह्मद्विषे ब्राह्मणद्वेष्ट्रे तस्मै—Sayana).

5. Pasyema suryam uccarantam, may we behold the rising sun (of. तच्चक्षुर्देवहितं शुक्रमुच्चरत्—VII.66.16).

9. Amrtasya girah, words of eternal knowledge (अमृतस्य नाशरहितस्य विज्ञानस्य गिर: विद्यायुक्ता वाच:—Daya.).

Amrtasya sunavah, children or sons of immortal Prajapati (अमृतस्य मरणरहितस्य प्रजापते: ये सूनव: पुत्रा: ते देवा:—Sayana).

10. Yujyam payah, appropriate milk offering ; payah is milk and also water (Nigh. I.12) or food (Nigh.II.7) ; yujyam, appropriate or worthy of the occasion (युज्यं समाधातुमर्हं पय, दुग्धमुदकमन्नं वा—Daya. ; युज्यं योग्यं पय: आमिक्षारूपं—Sayana).

13. Agni-jihvah, tongue of fire ; whose tongue is the fire ; those whose tongue is enlightened with truth (अग्निजिह्वा: अग्निना सत्येन सु प्रकाशिता जिह्वा येषान्ते—Daya.) ; one who receives oblations by the tongue of Agni or fire (अग्निर्जिह्वा स्थानीयो येषाम् । यद्वा अग्नेर्जिह्वा । तया पोष्यमाणत्वात् अग्निजिह्वा—Sayana).

16. Dhiyam, discriminating intellect (धियं प्रज्ञां—Daya.) ; sacred acts, as yajna etc. (धियं कर्मयज्ञलक्षणं—Sayana).

Have, in the sacred performances (हवे प्रशंसनीये धर्म्ये व्यवहारे—Daya. ; हवे यज्ञे—Sayana).

Ilam, food (Nigh.II.7) ; one of you two produce food (clouds, the rains or parjanya produce the food just as rains produce herbs and vegetables)(इलां अन्नं जनयत् जनयति । वृष्टया हि ओषधिवनस्पतयो जायन्ते तेभ्यश्चान्नं जायते । —Sayana). The other amongst you produces the semen or virile essence (this refers to Agni, who metabolizes the food in body, and thereby semen is produced, which on its turn leads to the fertilization of ovum (अन्य: अग्नि: गर्भं जनयति । पुरुषेण भुक्तमन्नं जाठरेणाग्निना पक्वं सत् रेतोरूपेण परिणमते तदेव योषित्सु गर्भो भवति—Sayana).

17. Barhisi, In the fire-altar (बर्हिषि यज्ञकुण्डे—Daya. ; दर्भपुञ्जे —Sayana).

Stirne—in which firewood and fuel have been well arranged.

In the fire altar, in which the fire wood has been properly arranged and fire has been established, with the chant of the Vedic hymns, offer the oblations of food (नमसा, with food etc.)—Daya.

Visve devah, all the learned people (present in the sacrifice) as well as all Natures bounties.

Havisi, in both oblations and offerings, and the food or refreshments served to the guests and visitors (हविषि दातव्येऽत्तव्ये वाऽन्नादौ—Daya.).

Pusan (Lord of bounty and sustenance) is the deity of this hymn ; another popular name of our supreme Lord ; He is addressed as pathaspate, the lord of paths, one who leads us on paths of our life, a true guide in the darkness (1) ; He is liberal in encouraging poor to strive for wealth ; and wealth and handsome donations to poor and needy (He is prayatadaksinam) (2) ; we invoke Him so that He softens the miser and instigates the niggard to liberality (3) ; He drives away all obstructors (4) ; He changes the hearts of wicked black-marketeers (panis) against exploitations of people (6-8) ; He brings to us the prosperity of cows and cattle (9-10).

2. Vasuviram, a hero of riches ; liberal in bestowing wealth (वसुवीरं वसुं धनं वीरं शुभलक्षणान्वितं पुरुषं, person endowed with good qualities, —Daya.) ; one who is especially the instigator of poverty to acquire wealth (वसुं धनं अभिप्राप्तुं वीरं दारिद्रयस्य विशेषेण ईरयितारं गमयितारं—Sayana).

5. Pari trindhi araya, परि तृन्धि आरया, pierce with a goad from all sides (परि: सर्वत: तृन्धि हिन्धि आरया प्रतोदेन—Daya. ; आरया। सूक्ष्मलोहाग्रो दण्ड: प्रतोद इति आरा इति चाख्यायते। तयापरितृन्धि परिविध्य—Sayana).

Pratoda is a goad ; a stick with sharp iron point at one end. Ara (आरा) is also a saw.

This hymn is also devoted to Pusan, who can rightly direct a person for advice to a man of wisdom (1) ; for advice to the house of men of wisdom (2) ; Pusan has a harmless discus, not for injuring (3) ; particularly for a man who is a devotee and offers oblations (4) ; He guards cattle and houses (6-7) ; He averts poverty (8).

1 Yah eva idam iti braviti, who may even say, this is so. Sayana translates vidusa (विदुषा) as a cunning man, a conjurer (विदुषा जानता तेन जनेन—Sayana ; the word usually means a wise man) ; and therefore, in regard to the phrase य एवेदमिति ब्रवत, Sayana says that it means, one who says, this, your property, has been lost, and by the earlier passage, he explains as directing the way to the recovery of the lost or stolen goods. Of course, this is merely an imposed interpretation with a sting of superstition in it.

9. See Yv. XXXIII.41.

For verse 1, see Nir. V.9.

Again the hymn is devoted to Pusan ; He is a superb charioteer ; is Kapardin, wearer of a braid of hair (2) ; He has goat for steed (3-4, 6) ; He has been metaphorically described as husband (didhusu) of His mother, and a lover, a gallant, of His sister (Svasuh-jarah) (5).

1. Vimucah napat, a grandson of Prajapati. Sayana regards the word vimucah (विमुच:—with all the three letters with anudatta accent) as a vocative and interprets it as "O Prajapati"—(हे विमुचो नपात् । विमुञ्चति सृष्टिकाले स्वसकाशात् सर्वा: प्रजा विसृजतीति विमुक् प्रजापति:), who at the period of creation, lets loose all creatures from himself.

To Dayananda, only napat is vocative, whilst vimucah is a verb meaning, render free (विमुच: मोचय—Daya. To him again, napat is not the grandson, but the one who does not fall (नपात् यो न पतति स:). His anvaya (prose order) of the verse is : हे आघृणे नपात्त्वं न ऋतस्य रथीर्भव न आ इहि, हे अध्यापकोपदेशकौ वामुक्त विद्वंस्त्व विमुचस्त्वमहञ्च सं सचाव है ।

A ghrne sam sacavahai, May we two together serve the god of glowing heat (Nir.V.9) (आघृणि:=glowing with heat=आगत-हृणि;=one whose glow has reached us (Nir.V.9).

2. Kapardinam, one with a braid of hair (usually the term is associated with Siva). (कपर्दिनं जटाजूटं—Daya.—not of Siva but of a young Brahmacarin, who is expected to have braids of hairs, and long beards (Av.XI.5). (कपर्दवन्तम्—Sayana).

5. Matuh didhisum, lord or guardian of mother (मातुः जनन्याः दिधिषुं धारकं—Daya.) ; the mother means night (मातुः निर्मात्र्या रात्रेः, the maker or the measure ; दिधिषुं पतिं पूषणं—Sayana). Pusan, the sun, is the guardian of night.

Svasuh jarah, the consumer or lover of sister. Here dawn is regarded as the sister of the sun, and the sun is the consumer of this dawn. (स्वसुः भगिन्य इवोषसः जारः निवारयिता—Daya.).

Bhrata indrasya, since Indra and Pusan both of them are the Adityas, born of the same mother Aditi (See page 429,430 of our notes). (भ्राता बन्धुरिव इन्द्रस्य विद्युतः—Daya.).

For verse 3, see Nir.II.6

Karambha-at, one who eats karambha, a mixture of parched barley meal and butter (करम्भात् यः करम्भमन्नविशेषमत्ति सः Daya.; करम्भाणां घृतमिश्राणां यव सक्तूनां भत्ता—Sayana).

3. Paruse gavi, in the sun, who has joints ; for the radiant sun. (परुषे परुष्मति पर्ववति भास्वति, the joint having or the shining ; गति गच्छतीति गौरादित्यः since he moves, therefore, the sun is gau (Sayana).

Gau, the sun is called so : Lo, that (charioteer) in the sun (gavi) who has joints : आदित्योऽपि गौरुच्यते । उताद: परुषे गवि । पर्ववति भास्वतीत्यौपमन्यव.—(Nir.II.6).

Dayananda translates paruse : in harsh attitude (परुषे कठोर व्यवहारे) and gavi, in words or speech (गवि वाचि).

6. अद्या = अद्य (निपातस्य चेति दीर्घः—Panini,VI. 3.135)

Adya ca sarvatataye svah ca sarvatataye, for the sake of the enjoyment of all pleasures, from yajna today, and for the enjoyment of all pleasure from the yajna tomorrow (सर्वतातये सम्पूर्णसुखसाधकाय यज्ञाय—Daya.) ; or for the sake of the general sacrifice today and the general sacrifice tomorrow.

(सर्वतातये सर्वं ऋत्विग्भिस्तातये इति सर्वतातिर्यज्ञः । तदर्थम्—a yajna that is conducted by all the priests is the Sarvatati yajna; यद्वा । सर्वेषां भोगानां विस्ताराय, or the yajna meant for the enjoyment of all—Sayana).

This hymn has the deities Indra and Pusan ; both represent the aspects of the Supreme Lord ; both of them are adityas also as the suns of different months. Indra is invoked for well-being and friendship whilst Pusan for food (1) ; the one likes Soma, whilst the other Pusan likes Karambha (2) ; goats are the carriers of Pusan, and horses of the Indra (3) ; Pusan is one with Indra in all other respects, and people depend on the goodwill of both (4-6).

Camvoh, in the space between the celestial and terrestrial regions (चम्वोः द्यावा: पृथिव्योर्मध्ये—Daya.) ; the two ladles or cups (चम्वोः अधिषवण फलकयोः—Sayana).

Karambham, a preparation of parched barley and butter. (See VI.56.1) ; the buttered meal.

For verse 1, see Nir.XII.17.

Pusan and Indra are the two forms of one and the same supreme Lord, as well as of the same sun. This is explained in the first verse. When the sun goes on account of the increase of rays, he is called Pusan : अथ यद्रश्मि पोषं पुष्यति तत्पूषा भवति (Nir.XII.16) and in this connection, the verse has been quoted : Thy one form is bright (शुक्रं), which means that it is bright red (शुक्रं ते अन्यत् means लोहितं ते अन्यत्) ; and thy other is holy, which means that to it the sacrifice is offered (यजतं ते अन्यत् means यज्ञियं ते अन्यत्). Thy function is to make the day and night of different forms (विषमरूपे ते अहनीकर्म) And thou art like heaven (द्यौरिव चासि). Thou protectest all sciences (सर्वाणि प्रज्ञानान्यवसि). Here let thy gift be full of fortune, O Pusan, abounding in food (अन्नवत् । भाजनवती ते पूषन्निह दत्तिरस्तु)—Nir.XII.17. In connection with Pusan, Yaska quotes another verse (VI.49.8) which we have already discussed.

Pusan is thus like the sun : he is identified with both day and night, and is considered as their regulator (the lengths of days and nights depend on the sun).

Bhuvane visve arpitah, placed over the whole world (भुवने संसारे विश्वे समग्रे अर्पित: स्थापित:—Daya. ; विश्वे विश्वस्मिन् सर्वस्मिन् भुवने लोके अर्पित: प्रजापतिनापोषकत्वेन स्थापित:—placed so by Prajapati in his capacity of nourishing all things—Sayaan). Thus it is clear, that the same sun, in the capacity of nourishing the entire universe is known as Pusan.

Similarly, one and the same Supreme Lord in the capacity of resplendence is known as Indra, and as the nourisher is known as Pusan.

3. Yasi Dutyam suryasya, Pusan assumes the role of the messenger of the sun. In this connection, Sayana quotes an anecdote : on one occasion, when Surya with the gods, had set out to fight the asuras (the clouds or vṛtra) he sent Pusan to his abode to console his wife, who was greatly afflicted by his going to the wars ; for this office, Pusan is here commended (Wilson).

Kamena krtam tavasam su-ancam, propitiated by willingly offered devotions (or oblations), vigorous, and well moving, accomplished by physical and mental powers (कामेन कृतं निष्पन्नं तवसं बलिष्ठं स्वञ्चं सुष्ठिवञ्चन्तं प्राप्त शरीरात्मबलेन युक्तं—Daya.).

Whilst interpreting this verse, Sayana unnecessarily introduces pasu (animal) offerings (कामेन पश्वादि विषयेण कृतं स्तोतृभिर्वशीकृतं तवसं बलवन्तं प्रवृद्धं वा स्वञ्चं स्वञ्चनं सुष्ठु गच्छन्तम्—Sayana).

Suryayai adaduh, gave to Surya (सूर्या) ; all Nature's bounties gave Pusan to the wife of the sun named as सूर्या (यं पूषणं देवास: सर्वेदेवा: सूर्यायै सूर्यस्य पत्न्यै यद्वा सावित्र्यै सूर्याख्यायै अश्विनोर्वरणाय अदद्: दत्तवन्त:—Sayana). See also पुत्र: पितराववृणीत पूषा—X.85.14.

For verses 2 and 4 ; see Nir.X.21 and V.22 respectively.

1. Pitarah, the fathers ; the guardians ; here in this verse, they have been addressed as enemies of gods (deva-satravah, देव शत्रवः), and hence Sayana derives the word pitr from √पी, pi, to injure ; and pitarah are asurah, or wicked demons. (पितरः हिंसकाः । पीयति हिंसाकर्मा । तस्यैतद् रूपम् —Sayana).

वोचा = वोच (द्व्यचोऽतस्तिङः—Panini. VI.3.134).

Dayananda in his paraphrasing separates the term pitarah, from the rest as follows : हे इन्द्राग्नी, युवं यानि सुतेषु वीर्या चक्रथुस्तैर्वां देवशत्रवो हतास स्युश्चिरञ्जीवथ इति वामहं नु प्र वोचा । येन युवयोः पितरो ऽप्येवं वामुपदिशन्तु ।

O teachers and preceptors, for your successful accomplishments, may people hostile to the group of learned perish and both of you live long. Such are my instructions to you and may your elders, the guardians, also bless and advise you like that.

2. Vat, वट्, a synonym of truth (Nigh.III.10).

Ittha, इत्था, a synonym of truth (Nigh. III.10).

Ittha is also by this way : इत्था अनेन प्रकारेण—Daya. ; Sayana) ; after this fashion.

Panisthah, most deserving of praise (पनिष्ठः अतिशयेन प्रशंसितः—Daya.).

Iheha matara, a mother everywhere ; mother here and mother here (इहेहमाता जननी ययोस्तौ—Daya.).

Yamau, twins (यमौ यमलौ सहोत्पन्नौ—Sayana).

[Yama is so called because he governs, √ यम् (Nir.X.19) ; यमौ-नियन्तारौ—Daya. ;]. Agni is also called Yama (Nir.X.20).

For Yama, see Ṛv.I.66.7-9. Yama is as it were, what is born and what shall be born. Yama was born associated with Indra (Nir.X.21).

3. Sapti-iva, like two horses or two fleet coursers (सप्तिः= horse = अश्वनाम, Nigh.I.14).

4. Pajra-hosina, receiving of acclamation (पज्र: संगतो होषो घोषो वाग्ययोस्तौ—Daya. ; पज्र: प्राजित: प्रसिद्धो होषो घोष: स्तोत्रं ययोस्तादृशौ—Sayana).

Josa-vakam vadatah, uttering amiable eulogies (जोषवाकं प्रीतिकरं वचनं वदत:—Daya.) ; uttering unacceptable eulogies (जोषं जोषयितव्यं प्रीतिहेतुत्वेन कर्तव्यं स्वयमप्रीतिकरं तादृशं वाकं वाक्यं वदत:—Sayana).

O Indra and Agni, you partake of the food of that man who praises you two when the Soma juices are pressed (य इन्द्राग्नी सुतेषु वां सोमेषु स्तौति तस्याश्नीथ: । अथ योऽयं जोषवाकं वदति विजंजप: प्राजितहोषिणौ न देवौ तस्याश्नीथ:—Nir.V.22).

Yahvam stavat, praises you (य: वाम् युवां स्तवत् प्रशंसेत्—Daya.) ; praises you improperly (कुत्सितं स्तूयात्—Sayana).

5. Visuco asvan yuyujana isata ekah samana a rathe, one of you . . . proceeds in a common car. Here one ekah, is Indra, who is identical with the sun, goes over the world in a car which is common to him and Agni, as being also, identified with the Sun ; the same identity being kept in view, Indra yokes the multiform horses,—months, weeks, days, to a monoform car, or the year (Wilson).

6. Trinsat pada, thirty steps (i.e., thirty muhurtah, the thirty divisions of day and night), त्रिंशत् पदानि अवयव भूतान् त्रिंशन्मुहूर्तान्—Sayana ; Two less out of thirty-two Nature's bounties (heaven and firmament eliminated)—आकाशं द्यां च वर्जयित्वा सर्वान् भूम्या दीन्पदार्थान्—Daya.).

Hitvi sirah, having eliminated the head, that is, the speech or words of chief importance (हित्वी त्यक्तवा शिर: शिरोवन्मुख्यं वचनम्—Daya. ; शिरो- हित्वा त्यक्तवा स्वयमशिरस्का सती—Sayana) ; or animating the head (of living beings) ; exciting the head (शिर: प्रेरयित्री).

This may apply to dawns, as being headless (अशिरस्का), she having abandoned the head, being of herself headless. See Yv. XXXIII.93.

Mahidhara, like Dayananda, also refers the epithets to vac, speech, apad (अपाद्) or footless (पादरहिता—Daya.) meaning prose (गद्यात्मिका).

Hymn-60

The deities of the hymn are Indra and Agni, both mean the same Supreme one, our Lord ;—with two aspects. Being the lord of mid-space, He is Indra, the resplendent ; and again as the lord of the terrestrial world, He is Agni, the foremost adorable ; both stand for opulence ; both join together to recover cows, waters, the sun, the dawns (the bounties of light, enlightenment, truth and virtue), that are carried away so often by malevolent forces, the dark asuras, the untruth and vice personified (2) ; they are slayers of Vṛtra (3) ; slayers of enemies (5) ; they counteract all oppressions, committed by pious and impious both ; they support virtue (6) ; they have yoked horses, the Niyuts (8) ; they are invoked for horses, cattle, food, happiness and friendship (13) ; and they quaff the sweet Soma, the devotional dedication, which alone exhilarates them (15).

6. Hatah vrtrani, who kills the evil dark forces or who destroys dark clouds (हत: हिंसत: वृत्राणि मेघाऽवयवान्—Daya.).

Arya, the pious (आर्या उत्तमगुणकर्मं स्वभावौ—Daya.)—persons noble in qualities, in actions and in behaviours.

Dasani, the liberal givers ; the donations (दासानि दानानि—Daya.).

Vrtrani and dasani being neuter in gender, do not actually mean the persons, they mean the evil disturbing actions of aryas and dasas, done severally (दासानि दासा: कर्मंहीना: शत्रव: । तै: कृतानि चोपद्रवजातानि । आर्या आर्यै: कर्मानुष्ठातृभि: कृतानि वृत्राणि उपद्रव जातानि—Sayana).

For verse 2, see Nir.II.24.

1. Divodasam divine perspective ; the giver of enlightenment (दिवोदासं विद्याप्रकाशस्य दातारं—Daya.).

Vadhri-asvaya, speeding mind ; one yoked for horses to march ahead (वध्रयश्वाय वध्रयो वर्धका अश्वा यस्य तस्मै—Daya.).

2. Sarasvati (spiritual awareness ; one of the 57 synonyms of speech (Vac ; वाक्). The word stands for both,—in the sense of a river (not a proper name, but in general terms, for a stream or channel of any realm,—physical, mental or spiritual) and of a deity in Vedic passages (Bṛhad-devata II.135)—(तत्र सरस्वतीत्येतस्य नदी वद्देवतावच्च निगमा भवन्ति —Nir.II.23).

How it is used in the sense of a river, is seen below :

Like the one who digs the lotus stem, she has shattered the peaks of mountains with her might and strong waves. Let us worship Sarasvati, who sweeps what is far and what is near alike, with well-composed hymns, for our protection.

Susmebhih the word Susma (शुष्म) is a synonym of strength, so called because it crushes everything (इदं शुष्मैः शोषणैः । शुष्ममिति बलनाम । शोषयतीति सतः--Nir.II.24).

Bisakha, here bisam is derived from the root bis (√बिस) meaning to split or grow (बिसं बिस्यतेर्भेदनकर्मणः । वृद्धि कर्मणो वा—Nir.II.24).

Sanu or peak is so called because it is very much raised up or it is very lofty (सानु समुच्छ्रितं भवति । समुन्नुन्नमिति वा—Nir.II.24).

Urmibhih, with mighty waves (महद्भिरूर्मिभिः).

Paravataghnim, who sweeps what is far and what is near alike, i.e. who destroys what is on the other, as well as, what is on this bank (पारावतघ्नीं पारावारघातिनीम् ।—Nir.II.24).

Param, something afar (पारं परं भवति).

Avaram, something near at hand (अवारमवरम्).

Let us attend upon the Sarasvati (river) with well-composed, sublime hymns (सुवृक्तिभिः शोभनाभिः स्तुतिभिः) and acts of worship (कर्मभिः) for our protection (अवसे अवनाय).—Nir.II.24.

3. Brsayasya, the destroyer of Nescience (बृषयस्य अविद्याछेदकस्य —Daya. ; Bṛsaya is also the name of Tvastṛ whose son is Vṛtra. (Sayana) ; Brsayasya prajam, the son of Tvastṛ, i.e. Vṛtra (Sayana).

Wilson cites a legend from the Taittiriya Yajus, to illustrate the importance of correctly accentuating words of the Veda. Indra, it is said, had killed a son of Tvastṛ, named Visvarupa and that accounts for the enmity between them. Once Tvastṛ celebrated the Soma-sacrifice, at which he deliberately did not invite Indra though he invited other gods. Indra, however, joined the celebrations uninvited, and by force took a part of the Soma libation. With what was left, Tvastṛ performed a sacrifice for the birth of an individual who should avenge his quarrel and destroy his adversary, directing the priest to pray, now let a man be born and prosper, the killer of Indra (इन्द्र घातक or इन्द्र शत्रु:). In uttering the mantra, however, the officiating priest made a mistake in the accentuation of the term इन्द्र घातक, slayer of Indra, in which sense, as a tat-purusa compound (तत्पुरुष समास), the acute accent should have been placed upon the last syllable (अन्तोदात्त): instead of which the reciter of the mantra placed the accent on the first syllable (पूर्वोदात्त), whereby the compound became bahuvrihi (बहुव्रीहि समास), epithet, with the meaning, the one of whom Indra is the slayer; consequently, when, by virtue of the rite, Vṛtra was produced, he was foredoomed by the wrong accentuation to be put to death by Indra. So Vṛtra did not slay Indra ; instead he became one of whom Indra was slayer. The purport of the legend is to emphasize the importance of proper accentuations.

Ksitibhyah avanih avindah visamebhyah asravah—thou hast acquired for men the lands etc. The phrase is capable of multiple interpretations according to Sayana : (i) thou hast shed poison upon them ; (ii) thou hast destroyed them (क्षितिभ्य: मनुष्येभ्य: अवनी: असुरैरपहृता भूमी: अविन्द: अलम्भय: एभ्य: मनुष्येभ्य: विषं उदकं च अस्रव: अक्षारय: । यद्वा क्षितयोऽसुरजना: । तेभ्य: सकाशात् अवनीर्भूमीरविन्द: लब्धवत्यसि । तान् हत्वैभ्यश्चासुरेभ्यो विषं मृतहेतुभूतं गरलमस्रव: —Sayana).

According to Dayananda, O Sarasvati, may you turn out those who speak ill of learned people (देवनिद:), and take the side of those, who are destroyers of nescience (बृसयस्य मायिन:), and also of their progeny (प्रजां) ; and win over the lands for protection (क्षितिभ्य: अवनी: अविन्द:), and from the interior of these lands, take out (अस्रव:) water (विषं).

Visam, विषं = उदकं (water, Nigh.I.12).

9. Atidvisah, anya rtavari svasrh, bring to us her other water-laden sisters. Sayana gives two explanations .: (i) ati = atini (अति नयतु अतितारयतु) to lead over or beyond and (ii) ati dvisah, may the other sisters overcome those who hate us.

Rtavari, the dawn (ऋतावरी उषा:—Daya.)—the dawn removes from us all those who hate us, and just as the sun to days, so she brings to us the other sister dawns (Daya.).

12. Sapta dhatuh, seven metres or seven rivers (सप्तधातु: सप्त धातवोऽवयवा गायत्र्याद्या गङ्गाद्या वा यस्या: सा तथोक्ता—Sayana) ; seven sustaining elements (सप्त प्राणादयो धारका यस्या: सा—Daya.).

Seven metres : Gayatri, Usnik, Anustup, Bṛhati, Pankti, Tristup, and Jagati.

Seven rivers : (seven channels or nerves) : Ganga, Yamuna, Sarasvati, Sutudri, Parusni, Asiknya, and Vitasta.

Seven sustainers—the five sheaths, lower self and the supreme Self (physical, vital, mental, knowledge sustaining and bliss sustaining sheaths).

Panca, the five vital breaths (prana, apana, vyana, samana, and udana) : according to Sayana ; Brahmana, Ksattriya, Vaisya, Sudra, and Nisada, the five classes in society.

14. Ma-apa spharih, reduce us not to insignificance ; cause no decline (माप स्फरी: अवृद्धं मा कुर्या:—Daya. ; अप्रवृद्धान् मा कार्षी: । स्फारो वृद्धि: —Sayana).

Hymn-62

The hymn is devoted to Asvins, the twins, the pair, the leaders of heaven (divah), who at dawn drive away the glooms (1) ; they come with splendours in lustrous cars (2) ; their horses are swift as thought, harnessed to their space cars (4) ; these horses are winged, since their cars have to move in space ; they also pass by roads unsoiled by dust (6) ; they can also penetrate the mountains (7) ; and as such they are not ordinary vehicles : they move in space, on water, on roads, and beyond the mountains ; they are right-royally worshipped in due seasons. (9); their Niyut steeds are of three categories; most excellent (parama), middling (madhyama) and most inferior (avama) (11).

6. For Bhujyum, see earlier notes, on I.112.6; 20; 116.3-5; 117.14; 119.4; IV.27.4; the pleasure worth enjoying (भुज्युं भोक्तुं योग्यमानन्दम्; also भुज्युं भोक्तारं IV.27.4; भोगमर्हम् I.119.4; सुखस्य भोक्तारं I.120.20 —Daya.).

Tugrasya sunum, the son of Tugra; the son-like of a strong person (तुग्रस्य बलिष्ठस्य सूनुं अपत्यमिव वर्तमानम्—Daya.). For Tugra, see earlier notes on I.116.3; 117.4; VI.20.8; 26.4.

7. Vadhrimatyah, the aspiring mothers; of the one in which are present the vast multitudes, i.e. the earth and midspace (वध्रिमत्याः बहवो वध्रयो वर्धनानि विद्यन्ते यस्याम् तस्या भूमेरन्तरिक्षस्य वा—Daya.). See also I.116.13; 117.24; also X.39.7; 65.12 (वध्रिमत्याः वर्धिकाया विद्यायाः I.117.24; वध्रय प्रशस्ता वृद्धयो विद्यन्ते यस्यास्तस्याः I.116.13—Daya.).

Shayave, for the quiet devotee; for sleep (शयवे शयनाय—Daya.; शयानाव I.116.12; for the sound and pleasant sleep, सुखेन शयनशीलाय; शंयुं, यः शेते तं पुत्रं IV.18.12; the all pervading one, शयुः=योऽभिव्याप्यशेते III.55.6; one who provides rest to everyone during dissolution, शयुः यः प्रलये सर्वाणि भूतानि शाययति सः—Daya.). शेतेऽसौ शयुः, शयनशीलः—Unadi I.7.

8. Adityah, light; also a measure of time, months (आदित्याः कालावयवाः—Daya.).

Vasavah, life-elements; also earth and other places of abodes (वसवः पृथिव्यादयः—Daya.).

Rudriyasah, the Maruts; the elements of vitality (रुद्रियासः प्राणाजीवाश्च—Daya.).

10. Nrvata rathena, having a leader, a driver (नृवता उत्तमा नरो विद्यन्ते यस्मिंस्तेन—Daya.; नृवता नेत्रा सारथिना युक्तेन—Sayana); or equipped with a horse (यद्वा अश्वयुक्तेन—पतङ्गाः नरः; नरा = अश्वाः = पतङ्गाः, Nigh. I.14; —Sayana).

Antaraih cakraih, chariot with wheels capable of taking one all around different regions ; well-guided chariot (अन्तरैः भिन्नैः चक्रैः लोकभ्रमणाय परिध्याद्यैः:—Daya.) ; अन्तरैः अनिकृष्टैः चक्रैः युक्तेन—Sayana).

Sanutyena tyajasa, with impelling forces ; with secret indignation (सनुत्येन सप्रेरणीयेन त्यजसा त्यागेन—Daya. ; सनुत्येन तिरोहितेन त्यजसा क्रोधेन—Sayana).

Vanusyatam, the angry ones ; the obstructing ones (वनुष्यतां क्रुध्यतां बाधमानानां वा। वनुष्यतीति क्रुध्यति कर्मा—Nigh.II.12 ; हन्तिकर्मा—इति यास्केनोक्तत्वात् —Sayana).

11. Niyudbhih, Niyut, steeds ; the one moving with the speed of wind (नियुद्‌भिः वायोर्गतिभिः:—Daya. ; नियुद्‌भिः वाहैः:—Sayana).

Hymn-63

For verse 8, see Nir. VI.29.

1. Valgu, the pleasant speech (वल्गू शोभनवाचौ। वल्गुइति वाङ्नाम, (Nigh.I.11).

Nasatya, of the truthful nature (नासत्यां सत्यस्वभावौ—Daya.). See previous notes—I.3.3 ; 46.5 ; 116.4 ; 180.9 ; 184.1 ; 3 ; III.54.16 ; 58.7 ; IV.37.8 ; V.46.2 ; 73.6 ; 74.2 ; 75.7 ; 78.1 ; VI.11.1 ; 50.10 and its vocative (dual) forms as I.34.7 ; 9-11 ; 47.7 ; 9 ; 116.2 ; 9-11 ; 13 ; 14 ; 16 ; 17 ; 19 ; 20 ; 22 ; 23 ; 117.1 ; 6 ; 11 ; 13 ; 23 ; 118.4 ; 11 ; 182.4 ; 183.3 ; 5 ; 184.5 ; II.41.7 ; IV.14.1 ; 43.7 ; 44.4 ; 7 ; VI.49.5 ; 63.7 ; 10 ; etc.

3. Barhih, wide space, midspace (बर्हिः अन्तरिक्षं, also बृहन्ते सर्वे पदार्था यस्मिँस्तदन्तरिक्षं ; संवर्द्धितं तेज इव विज्ञानं, I.188.4 ; उत्तमासनं, IV.9.1 ; अतीव विशालं VI.67.2 ; बृहत् गृहं, I.142.5—Daya.

5. Nara-nrtu, the leaders and guides (नरा नायकौ नृतू नेतारौ—Daya. ; नरानेतारौ नृतूनृत्यन्तौ, i.e. guides and dancers.

Sayana refers here to the legend of the Asvins carrying off in their car the daughter of surya from the other gods, as narrated in the Aitareya Brahmana, IV.7 (मायाभिः प्रज्ञानैः कौशलेर्वा जितवन्तौ स्थ इत्यर्थः—Sayana).

6. Vayah, birds (वयः पक्षिणः—Daya.) ; also horse (वयः अश्वाः —Sayana ; अश्वः = श्येनासः, Nigh. I.14 ; the list does not give vayah as a synonym of horses).

8. Dhenumna isam pinvatam asakram, Fatten the perennial cow like food ; i.e. which never runs dry (असंक्रमणीम्—Nir.VI.29) ; the phrase literally means, give us a cow, food, that does not astray.

Sayana explains dhenum by gratifying (धेनुं प्रीणयित्रीम्), or isam (इषं) may be the adjective for esaniyam, give us a desirable cow (इषमेषणीयां धेनुमित्यन्वयः—Sayana.

9. The verse is full of epithets : rjre raghvi ; two straight right going. (ऋज्रे ऋजुप्रिये रघ्वी लघ्वी—Daya. ; ऋज्रे ऋजुगमने रघ्वी क्षिप्रगामिन्यौ बडवे i.e. the straight-moving and fast moving mares—Sayana).

Puruyasya, the intuitive instinct (पुरयस्य या पुरोऽयते प्राप्नोति तस्य —Daya.) ; of Puraya (पुरयस्य पुरयनामकस्य—Sayana) ; the word occurs nowhere else in the Ṛgveda.

Peruka, the instinct of resistance (पेरुके पालके—Daya. ; पेरुके रातिविद्य-मानानि—Sayana) ; the word occurs nowhere else in the Ṛgveda.

Sandah, the discriminating instinct (शाण्डः यः श्यति तनू करोति तथाऽयम् । अत्र शो तनूकरण इत्यस्मादौणादिकेऽडच् प्रत्ययः—Daya. ; a king of this name, —Sayana) ; the word occurs nowhere else in the Ṛgveda.

10. Purupanthah, master of manifold ways ; the versatile (पुरुपन्थाः पुरवंहुविधश्चासौ पन्थाश्च—Daya.) ; the word occurs nowhere else in the Ṛgveda.

Bharadvajaya, for the sage, profound in sacred knowledge (भरद्वाजाय धृतविज्ञानाय—Daya.).

Purudansasa, achievers of great deeds (पुरूदंससा पुरूणि दंसास्युत्तमानि कर्माणि ययोस्तौ—Daya.). As a vocative, the word occurs in VI.63.10 and VIII.9.5) ; also see पुरूदंसम्—III.1.23 ; 5.11 ; 6.11 ; 7.11 ; 15.7 ; 22.5 ; पुरूदंसा VII.73.1 ; पुरूदंससा I.3.2 ; VIII.87.6.

10. This verse has only one pada (एकपदात्रिष्टुप्).

3. Gavah, rays (गाव: किरणा:—Daya. ; रश्मय:—Sayana) ; but Wilson translates as kine, since of the word vahanti.

Volha, the married one (वोलहा विवाहिता—Daya.) ; of the army (वोलहा सेनाया:—Sayana).

Asteva = asta-iva, like one casting his darts, arrows, weapons etc. (अस्तेव शस्त्राऽस्त्राणां प्रक्षेप्तेव—Daya.) ; वीर: क्षेप्तेव—Sayana).

Ajirah na, like a warrior (अजिर: न क्षिप्रगामी शत्रून् यथा—Sayana) ; like the one who does not move with speed, (अजिर: न य: शीघ्रं न गच्छति स: न इव —Daya.).

4. Divah duhitah, O, the daughter of the midspace, or the region of light, O dawn (दिवो दुहित: अन्तरिक्षसुते हे उषो देवि—Sayana ; प्रकाशस्य कन्येव वर्तमाने—Daya.).

6. Vayascit, like the birds (वयश्चित् पक्षिण: इव—Daya. ; पक्षिणोऽपि —Sayana).

1. Ramyasu, in the nights (राम्यासु रात्रिषु। राम्येति रात्रिनाम—Nigh. I.7 ; Daya. ; राम्यासु याम्यासु, r, substituted for y.)

Duhita divah-jah, daughter born of midspace or the region of light, i.e. dawn (दिवोजा: दिवो जाता अत एव दुहिता दिव: पुत्री उषा:—Sayana) ; (दिवोजा: सूर्याज्जातेव, like the one born of the sun —Daya.).

Ajigah, makes visible (अजीग: जागरयति—Daya.); vomits, अजीग:उद्गिरति। जिगर्तिगिरति कर्मावा, jigarti means to consume or to invoke, or to seize, गृणाति कर्मा वा, गृह्णाति कर्मा वा,—Nir. VI.8); brings them up out of darkness.

2. Urmyayah, of the night (ऊर्म्याया: रात्रे: Nigh.I.7).

9. Arkam, food or thunderbolt (अर्क अन्नं वज्रं वा; अर्क इत्यन्ननाम Nigh. II.7.; वज्रनाम Nigh.II.20—Daya. ; also अर्क अन्नं हवि: ; स्वधा अर्क: ; इत्यन्ननामसु पाठात्—Sayana).

Makhebhyah, for battles, for yajnas (मखेभ्य: संग्रामादिभ्य: संगन्तव्येभ्य: ; मख इति यज्ञनाम Nigh. III.17—Daya.).

11. Divah Sardhaya sucayo manisa girayo napa ugra asprdhran, of heaven for the strength pure praises mountains, like waters fierce have vied (literal translation by Wilson) ; दिव: स्तोतु:, शर्धाय मारुताय बलाय, for the strength of Maruts ; गिरय: न मेघा इव, like clouds).

In the cosmological interpretation, Mitra represents light and Varuna, its concomitant counterpart is the material plasma, as if the pair of matter and energy ; both of them are essentially one and yet in the manifested world different, the eldest of all existing things ; though not the same, and yet the firmest restrainers (1) Dayananda interprets them as the prana and the udana, the two of the vital airs.

1. Rasmeva, like the reins; like the radiations (रश्मेव किरणवद् रज्जुवद् वा—Daya.; रश्मिनेव अश्वान्, horses restrained with reins.—Sayana).

Yamistha, the firmest restrainers (यमिष्ठा अतिशयेन यन्तारौ—Daya. ; यन्तृतमौ—Sayana).

Girbhih, by praises (गीर्भि: स्तुतिभि:—Sayana) ; by words or speech (वाग्भि:—Daya.).

Asama, not the same (असम विषमौ—Sayana) ; not alike, excelling all (अतुल्यौ सर्वेभ्योऽधिकौ—Daya.). Sayana refers to a similar passage : त्रिरश्रिं हन्ति चतुरश्रिरुग्र:" I.152.2., इति निगमान्तरेणासाम्यं दर्शितम् ।

2. Manisa, the well-cultivated intelligence (मनीषा विद्यासुशिक्षायुक्ता प्रज्ञा—Daya.) ; prayer (मनीषा स्तुति:—Sayana).

Sayana usually translates such terms as धिय:, मनीषा etc. as prayer, which may as well mean intellect.

Namasa, with respect ; with viands etc. (नमसा सत्कारेणान्नाद्येन सह वा —Daya.; अन्नेन हविषा सह—Sayana).

Varuthyam, pertaining to house (वरूथ्यं वरूथे गृहे भवम्—Daya. ; the house, safe from heat, chill and blast of air, वरूथ्यं शीतवातातपानां वारयितृ भवति —Sayana).

Sudanu, liberal givers ; munificient divinities सुदानू—vocative—शोभनानि दानानि ययोस्तौ—Daya.; हे शोभनदानौ—Sayana).

3. Apaseva, by actions(अपसाऽइव कर्मणेव—Daya.; Sayana).

5. Spasah, rays and courses ; reins and goings ; the dispellers of darkness and ignorance and encouragers of light and knowledge (स्पश: अविद्यान्धकारं बाधमाना विद्याप्रकाशं स्पर्शन्त:—Daya.; स्पश: रश्मयश्चरा वा—Sayana).

Spasah adabdhasah amurah, your courses are unobstructed, according to Sayana, spasah means rasmayah cara va ; rays or perhaps reins, or goings which are ahimsitah (अहिंसिता:), uninjured, amudhah, (अमूढा:), not bewildered.

6. Upamat-iva, like a pillar or post (उपमात्-इव उपमीयते प्रक्षिप्यते इति उपमात् स्थूणा ; the post to which a calf is tied,—Sayana) ; like a similie (उपमादिव—Daya.).

Visvadevah, the illuminator of the world ; the sun (विश्वदेव: विश्वेषां सर्वेषां देव:—Daya.; विश्वदेव: सूर्य:—Sayana).

Bhumim, the earth, Dyam, firmament ; the graceful knowledge (द्यां दिवं च—Sayana ; कमनीया विद्याम्—Daya.).

Dhasina, by food (धासिना अन्नेन—Daya.).

Ayoh, of man ; of the living (आयो: जीवनस्य—Daya.; आयो: मनुष्यस्य —Sayana).

Drhlah, cloud (दृह्ल: युवाभ्यां दृढीकृतश्च मेघ:—Sayana) ; 'the firm Naksatrah, present in the firmament, the one which does not decay (नक्षत्र: अन्तरिक्षं व्याप्नुवान:—Sayana ; नक्षत्र: यो न क्षीयते—Daya.).

A-atan, replenish with light (आतान आतनोति युवाभ्यां दृढीकृत एव—Sayana; आ अतान् समन्तादतेयु: प्रकाशयेयु:—Daya.).

8. Jihvaya, with his tongue ; with his prayers (जिह्वया वाचा—Sayana ; Daya.).

9. Minanti, exterminate (मिनन्ति हिंसन्ति—Sayana ; Daya.). There is no verb to govern the objects specified, and Sayana brings on from the verse 8, vicayistam (वि चयिष्टं) meaning vinasayatam (विनाशयतं), destroy.

Na ye devasah ohasa na marttah ayajnasacah apyah na putrah— Here ohasa (ओहसा) means, by the means of conveying—wishes it may be supposed i.e. stotrena by praise (वहन साधनेन स्तोत्रेण—Sayana ; प्राप्तेन बलेन योगेन वा—Daya. ; apyah is rendered doing acts (अप्य: । अप: कर्म । तद्वन्त: —Sayana ; अप्य: अप्सु सत्कर्मसु भव:—Daya. ; from apas, opus, but not sacrificing, or sacrificing in vain : वृथाकर्माणि कुर्वन्त:—Sayana).

Na putrah, not sons, is rendered not pleasing or satisfying (न: पुत्रा: । पृणन्तीति पुत्रा: । न पुत्रा अप्रणन्त इत्यर्थ:—Sayana ; like the sons—Daya.).

10. Nakih devebhih yatathah, you do not go with other gods (देवेभि: अन्यैर्देवै: सह नकि: यतथ: न गच्छथ:, you are not associated with them at sacrifice—Sayana) ; you are not associated with learned persons (Daya.). यतथ:=यतेथे (अत्र व्यत्ययेन परस्मैपदम्—Daya.).

11. Yuvoh askrdhoyu, your bounty is unlimited (युवो: युवयो: अस्कृधोयु य आत्मन: कृधु ह्रस्वत्वं नेच्छति—Daya. ; अस्कृधोयुरकृष्वायु: । कृध्विति ह्रस्वनाम । निकृत्तं भवति (Nir.VI.3.) ; युवाभ्यां देयं तद् गृहादिकं अस्कृधोयु अविच्छिन्नं भवति—Sayana ; i.e that which is to be given by you, as houses and the like, is unchecked.

Askrdhoyu, long-lived ; means one whose life is not short. The word krdhu (कृधु) is a synonym of short : it is mutilated (यो अस्कृधोयुरजर: स्वर्वान्, VI.22.3 ; Av.XX.36.3).

The deities are the pair Indra and Varuna. Of the two Indra represents resplendence, and Varuna, the material plasma. According to Dayananda the pair are (i) Vayu (wind) and vidyut (lightning), (ii) teacher and preacher, (iii) the sun and electricity, the Speaker (one who presides over an assembly or parliament) and the Chief of an army, (iv) king and his people, like the sun and moon. The Lord Supreme is venerable (वरुण) and resplendent (इन्द्र); or the one who presides over firmament (इन्द्र) and over waters (वरुण). Again Indra is one who slays vrtra (nescience) with adamantine weapon, whereas as Varuna, he comes to the aid of people in difficulties (3). Both are pre-eminent in greatness, over all natural forces (visvedevah) (4) ; both are addressed in vocative, along with another vocative (deva) ; the givers, and we invoke both of them to be on our side (6) , We invoke them for opulence (7). for wealth, for our felicity (8). since we desire to cross over difficulties as we cross the waters with a boat (8). Varuna is the imperial mighty divine, endowed with greatness and wisdom (9). In fact, both of them are one, not two, observant of holy duties (Su-tapau, सुतपौ सुष्ठु ब्रह्मचर्यादिनुष्ठानाख्यं तपो ययोस्तौ—Daya.) ; they are one in drinking and enjoying Soma (the medicinal elixir, महौषधिरसं —Daya. or the emotional affection given by the devotee) ; they come on chariot along the road leading to sacrifice, i.e., a benevolent act free from the infliction of injury, adhvaram, युवोरथो अध्वरं (etc.) (10). They occupy their respective positions in space, barhisi (बर्हिषि). (11).

1. Vrkta-barhisah, by whom the sacred grass has been clipped (वृक्त बर्हिष: स्तीर्णबर्हिष:—Sayana; वृक्तं छेदितं बर्हिरुदकं येन तस्य ; here Dayananda interprets barhih as a synonym of water (बर्हिरित्युदक नाम, Nigh.I.13).

Srusti, quick, at once, immediately (श्रुष्टी सद्य:, Daya.; श्रुष्टीति क्षिप्रनामाशु अष्टीति—Nir.VI.12).

2. Maghonam, the distributors of wealth, rich in wealth (मघोनां धनाढ्यानां—Daya.; दानवतां—Sayana).

Manhistha, the most liberal along the opulent (मंहिष्ठा दातृतमौ—Sayana; the most respectable (मंहिष्ठा अतिशयेन पूजनीयौ—Daya.).

Tuvisusma, possessed of vast strength (तुविशुष्म बहुबलौ—Sayana; बहुबल सेनायुक्तौ—Daya.).

Vrtra-tura, the destroyer of Vṛtra, cloud, or evil forces, terrible as clouds (वृत्रतुरा यौ वृत्राणां मेघवदुन्नतानां शत्रूणां तुरौ हिंसकौ—Daya.; destroyer of enemies, शत्रूणां हिंसकौ—Sayana).

3. Namasyebhih, pertaining to respect and praise (नमस्येभि: स्तुत्यै: —Sayana ; by foods, नमस्वन्नेषु भवै:—Daya.).

Susaih, by strength (शूषै: बलै:; शूषं इति बलनामसु पाठात्—Sayana ; Nigh.II.9)

4. Gnah, speech, (ग्नेति वाङ्नाम—Nigh.I.11).

10. Svasaram, day (स्वसरं दिनं—Daya., Nigh.I.9 ; path (स्वसरं मार्गं —Sayana).

11. Barhisi, on the sacred grass (Sayana) ; in space ; occupying respective positions in space (बर्हिषि अवकाशे—Daya.).

The pair of Indra and Visnu is the deity (dyavaprthivi), Indra is lightning, vidyut, or electricity of the midspace ; Visnu is one of the names of the sun (See Adityah, Vol.II, p.430) corresponding to the month of Phalguna.

For Visnu as the sun, who is known for his three steps covering the entire horizon, we have : We desire to go to those regions of you two, where are nimble and manyhorned rays. There indeed shines forth brightly that highest step of the wide-striding Visnu (ता वां वास्तून्युश्मसि गमध्यै I.154.6). See Nir.II.7.

Sipivista, (शिपिविष्ट) and Visnu are synonymous terms, of course ; the former is a contemptuous term (Aupamanyava, Nir.V.7) since he is denuded like a phallus, i.e. whose rays are not displayed, or else, it may be that the word is used as a synonym of praise ; O Visnu, what is this wellknown shape of thine, i.e. worthy of being fully known, that thou sayest to us "I am enveloped with rays sipivista whose rays are displayed. (किमित् ते विष्णो परिचक्ष्य भूत प्रयद् ववक्षे शिपिविष्टो अस्मि ; VII.100.6 ; —शिपिविष्टोऽस्मीति प्रतिपन्नरश्मिः ; शिपयोऽरश्मय उच्यन्ते । तैराविष्टो भवति—Nir.V.8)

Again, according to Nir.XII 18-19, that which is set free becomes Visnu (अथ यद् विषितो भवति तद् विष्णुर्भवति) ; Visnu is derived from √विश्, to pervade, or from vy-as (व्यश्), to interpenetrate (व्यश्नोतेर्वा—Nir.XII.19) : We have : Visnu strode over this universe, thrice he planted his foot, enveloped in dust : (इदं विष्णुर्वि चक्रमे त्रेधा नि दधे पदम् । समूलहमस्य पांसुरे—I.22.17) According to Aurnavabha, the three steps are (i) on the mountain of sunrise, (ii) on the meridian and (iii) on the mountain of sunset (समारोहणे विष्णुपदे गयशिरसीत्यौर्णवाभः). According to Sakapuni, the three steps are (i) on earth, (ii) in the midspace, and (iii) in the heaven (पृथिव्यामन्तरिक्षे दिवीति शाकपूणिः—Nir.XII.19)

3. Aktubhih, by the nights (अक्तुभिः रात्रिभिः—Daya. Nigh.I.7) ; with radiance (अक्तुभिः तेजोभिः—Sayana).

Stomasah, praises (स्तोमासः स्तुतयः—Daya.; स्तोत्राणि—Sayana).

Ukthaih, with the Vedic praises or prayers (उक्थैः वेदस्थैः स्तोत्रैः —Daya.; उक्थैः शस्त्रैः साधं शस्यमानास: उच्चार्यमाणाः—Sayana ; शस्यमानास: प्रशंसिताः —Daya.).

4. Indra and Visnu both have equally spirited horses (सधमाद: सह-मादयन्तः अश्वास: अश्वाः—Sayana ; सधमाद: to the same destination, समानस्थानानि —Daya.; अश्वास: the great ones, महान्तः—Daya.; अश्वाः—Sayana).

Girah, the speech (गिरः वाणीः—Daya.; the prayers ; शस्त्ररूपा वाचः —Sayana).

8. Yat apasprdhetham tredha sahasram, with whosoever you have contended, you have thrice conquered thousands.

The verse is quoted in the Aitareya Brahmana, VI.15 ; What time, O Visnu, with Indra ye did strive, then did ye two divide in thrice the thousand (Keith). Indra and Visnu fought with the Asuras ; having conquered them, they said: "Let us make an arrangement". The Asuras said, "Be it so." Indra said, 'so much as Visnu three times traverses, so much be ours ; let the rest be yours.' He traversed these worlds, then the Vedas and then speech. They say, 'What is the thousand ?' These worlds, these Vedas, moreover speech, he should reply. 'Did you divide, the Achavaka repeats in the ukthya, for he is then the last (and so on).

Thus the first step covers the entire space, the second step, the entire Veda or the divine knowledge , and the third the entire speech.

Sahasram, unlimited (सहस्रं असंख्यं—Daya. ; unmeasured, अमितं —Sayana) ; actually the whole.

For verse 2, see Nir.V.2.

In this hymn, the deities are Heaven and Earth in pair.

3. Visu-rupani, of various forms ; of a variety of forms (विषु-रूपाणि व्याप्तरूपाणि—Daya.; नानावर्णानि—Sayana).

Savrata, of similar functions (सव्रता समान कर्माणि—Daya. ; Sayana).

4. Ghrtaprca, Heaven and earth are both surrounded by water (or cosmic vapour) घृतपृचा घृतेन प्रदीपनेनोदकेन वा संपृक्ते—Daya.; घृतसंपृक्ते —Sayana).

Ghrtavrdha, the asylum of water (घृतावृधा घृतं प्रदीपनमवकाशनञ्च श्रीयं-योस्ते ; asylum of light or water—Daya.; घृतवर्धयन्त्यौ—Sayana).

6. Urjam, food or vigour. (अन्नं पराक्रमं वा—Daya. ; ऊर्जं अन्नं—Sayana ; अर्क्=अन्ननाम—Nigh.II.7.

Dyau, or heaven is like father, and prthivi or earth is like mother (पिता माता पितेव मातेव—Daya.).

Hymn-71

For verse 2, see Nir. VI.7.

1. Savita, the sun, or the supreme creator, is the deity.

Makhah, yajna or sacrifice ; the giver of comfort like a sacred act (मख: यज्ञ इव सुखकर्त्ता—Daya.) ; the adorable (मख: मंहनीय:—Sayana).

Sudaksah, sagacious (सुदक्ष: शोभनं दक्षं बलं यस्य स:—Daya. ; सुप्रज्ञः —Sayana).

Rajasah, of the world or region or water (रजस: लोकस्योदकस्य वा —Sayana ; लोकस्य—Daya.).

2. Davana, donations (दावने दाने—Daya. : Sayana).

Savimani, at the stimulation. We go at the stimulation (or inspiration) of the divine Savitr (सवीमनि प्रसवेऽनुज्ञाने—Sayana ; सवीमनि प्रसवे —Nir.VI.7).

4. Ud um devah savita prati dosam asthat, may the sun rise regularly at the close of night (प्रति दोषं यथा रात्रि रात्रिं प्रति सूर्यस्तथा, ग्रस्थात् उत्तिष्ठेत् —Daya.; स्य: स. सविता प्रतिदोषं प्रतिरात्रं रात्रे: अवसानेऽवसाने उत्अस्थात् उत्तिष्ठतु —Sayana). दोषा = night. (Nigh. I 7).

Ayohanuh, the one whose jaw is strong as iron (अयोहनु: अयोलोहमिव दृढा हनुर्यस्य स:—Daya.; golden-jawed, अयोहनु: हिरण्मय हनु:—Sayana; रुक्मं = अय: = हिरण्यनामानि, Nigh. I.2.

Hiranyapanih, golden-handed (हिरण्यपाणि: हिरण्मय पाणि:—Sayana; हिरण्यादिकं सुवर्णं पाणौ यस्य स:—Daya.).

5. Upavakta-iva, like an orator (उपवक्तेव अस्माकमधिवक्तेव—Sayana); like the one who speaks from close proximity.

Hymn-72

The deity of the hymn is a pair of Indra and Soma, i.e. the light-divine (Indra) and bliss-divine (Soma), the innermost enlightenment along with the divine joy (of the vijnanamaya and anandamaya sheaths).

1. Yuvam mahani prathamani cakrathuh, you have made great and principal (beings).

2. Upa dyam skambhathuh skambhanena, you have propped up the sky with the supporting pillar.

Prthivim mataram, earth, the mother of all.

4. Pakvam amasu antah ni gavam it dadhathuh vaksanasu, you have deposited the mature milk in the immature udders of the kine.

Vaksanasu, in the udders (वक्षणासु ऊध:सु—Sayana); in the rivers (वक्षणासु नदीषु—Daya.); वक्षणा: = नदीनामानि Nigh. I.13.

Gavam, of rays (गवां किरणानां—Daya.); of cows (Sayana).

5. Tarutram, helpers in times of trouble (तरुत्रं दु:खात्तारकम्—Daya.; तरुत्रं तारकं—Sayana).

The deity of the hymn is Bṛhaspati, the supreme Lord.

1. Brhaspatih, the supreme Lord, sustaining earth and other regions (बृहस्पति: बृहतां पृथिव्यादीनां पालक:—Daya.). At different places of the Vedic texts, the word has varying usages : (i) the specialist of the sacred lore (बृहस्पति: बृहत: शास्त्रबोधस्य पालमतिथिम्—I.190.1) ; (ii) the Lord of a massive society (बृहतीनां स्वामिनं विद्वांसंजनं—V.51.12) ; (iii) the protector of knowledge or speech (वाग्विद्यारक्षकं ; वेदार्थविद्वज्जनम्, III.62.5) ; (iv) a sovereign, ruling over a great empire (बृहतां पालकं राजानं—III.62.6) ; (v) a learned person, or Lord supreme with a command over a wide sphere of the Vedic knowledge (बृहत्या: वाच: स्वामिनं, विद्वांसं ; बृहत्या ऋग्वेदादि वेद वाच: पालकं परमात्मानं—VII.X.4 ; बृहस्पति: बृहत्या वेदवाच: पालयिता (विद्वान्)—I.190.2) ; (vi) the light of the sun, the sustainer of the world, बृहतां पालनहेतुं सूर्यं प्रकाशं ; (vii) the preceptor of sacred knowledge (सकलविद्याऽध्यापकं—Yv. IX.27) ; learned persons or technicians, renowned for knowledge in their own spheres, like the sun (बृहतां पति: सूर्य इव विद्वान् शिल्पिजन:, I.161.6) ; (viii) a lady preceptor (बृहत्या वेदवाच: पालिकाऽध्यापिका विदुषी स्त्री—Yv.XII.54) ; (ix) also fire, electricity and other sources of energy (बृहतां पालका विद्युद्रूपोऽग्नि:—Yv.XXVII.19) ; (x) a good administrator or chief of an army (बृहत्या सभाया: सेनाया वा पालक:—Yv.XVII.48). These references have been taken from Dayananda's comments.

The word Bṛhat is a synonym of 'great' ; it is grown all round (बृहदिति महतो नामधेयम् । परिबृह्लं भवति—Nir.I.7 ; II 11.21), Bṛhaspati destroys the derider (Nir. IV.25 ; बृहस्पते चयसे इत्पियारूम् I.190.5) ; Indra and Bṛhaspati are jointly praised also (Nir. VII.10) ; Bṛhaspati is the protector or supporter of the great (बृहस्पति बृंहत: पाता वा । पालयिता वा—Nir. X.11, and 12 ; having sent the cloud with a dreadful roar, Bṛhaspati drew it out like a cup from a tree, X.68.8).

Bṛhaspati is the breaker of mountains, the first-born of the seed of Prajapati, the traverser of the two worlds (here in the sense of the sun) (1) ; he has conquered the treasures of the enemy, recovered cows from Panis, and the special pastures ; he appropriates waters from clouds (3).

In the Aitareya Brahmana, III.34, we have a legend about the seed of Prajapati, the creativity of our Lord ; and how Aditya was born, and how Varuna came into being, and from Varuna, descended Bhṛgu ; and how the Adityas came into being. The coals became the angirasas ; in that, the coals after being quenched blazed forth again, Bṛhaspati came into being. The extinguished coals became black cattle ; the reddened earth ruddy cattles. The ash which was there kept about in diverse forms, the buffalo, the gayal, the antelope, the camel, the ass, and the ruddy animals.

The deities are Soma and Rudra; they are the conferers of happiness upon our bipeds and quadrupeds (1) ; they expel the widespread sickness from our homes (2); and keep off Nirrti (2) ; they grant medicaments for the ailments of our bodies (3) ; they are invoked for happiness in the world and for liberation from the bonds of Varuna.

2. Nirrti. The Vedic references for this word are :

The Nir. I.17 discusses about the use of this word in the pada-patha : (Nirṛtya) is either in the oblative or in the genitive case, (so it is written in the Pada-patha) as ending in the visarjaniya (= nirṛtyah, निर्ऋत्याः in the padapatha)—दूतो निर्ऋत्या इदमा जगाम—(X.165.1)—पञ्चम्यर्थं प्रेक्षा वा, षष्ठ्यर्थं प्रेक्षा वा । आः कारान्तम् (Nir.I.17) ; परो निर्ऋत्या आ चक्ष्व (X.164.1).

The Nighantu gives twenty-one synonyms of earth. With reference to them, nir-rtih (earth) is so called from giving enjoyment (तत्र निर्ऋतिर्निरमणात्) ; the other word nir-rtih, which signifies calamity is derived from √ऋ, to befall ; these two words (i.e. one meaning the earth, and the other meaning calamity) are not to be confused. (ऋच्छते: कृच्छ्रापत्तिरितरा) (1). As a synonym of earth, we have the passage—स मातुर्योना परिवीतो अन्तर्बहुप्रजा निर्ऋतिमाविवेश—encompassed within the womb of the mother, and multiplying greatly, he entered the earth (I.164.32).

Again we have : "People having many children fall into calamity", say the ascetics. "It refers to the phenomenon of rain," say the etymologists (बहुप्रजाः कृच्छ्रमापद्यत, इति परिव्राजकाः ; वर्षकर्मेति नैरुक्ताः—Nir.II.8).

Dayananda translates nir-ṛtim as an evil policy or practice inflicting (निर्ऋतिं दुःखप्रदां कुनीतिं VI.74.2) ; the undesirable movement of wind causing disease (वायूनां रोगकारिका दुःखप्रदा गतिः—I.38.6). The word also means the earth (निर्ऋतेः भूमेः—VII.58.1). Also calamity, (पाप्मा वै निर्ऋतिः—S.Br.VII.2.1.1 ; घोरा वै निर्ऋतिः—S.Br.VII.2.1.10).

Nirṛti is alaksmi, misfortune and poverty (निर्ऋतिं लक्ष्मीं—Sayana).

For verses 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 11, 13 and 14 see Nir.IX.17 (2) ; 18 (3), 40 (4), 14 (5), 16 (6), 19 (11), 20 (13) and 15 (14) respectively.

In this hymn, we have several weapons or implements as deities, e.g. armour or varma (1) ; bow or dhanuh (2) ; string of the bow or jya (3) ; the extremities of the bow or artni (4), the quiver or isudhih (5) ; the charioteer or Sarathi (6), reins or rasmayah (7) ; horses or asvah (7) ; chariot or ratha (8) ; the guards of the chariot or ratha-gopah (9) ; the arrows or isavah (11, 12, 15, 16) ; whip or pratoda (13) ; the ward of the fore-arm or hastaghna (14). The whole hymn is repeated in the Yajurveda, with the exception of the verses 9 and

15. (Chapter XXIX. 38-51 for the verses 1-14 ; the verse 15 is absent in the Yajuh ; the verse 16 as Yajuh. XVII 45 ; the verse 17 is XVII. 48 ; the verse 18 as Yajuh. XVII.49 ; the verse 19 is again absent.)

1. Pratikam, the experiencing one (प्रतीकं प्रतीतिकरम्—Daya.) ; the form (प्रतीतं रूपं—Sayana) ; in front of the army (प्रतीकं अनीकमुखं—uvata ; सेनामुखं—Mahidhara).

2. Samadah, सऽमद:, battles (समद: संग्रामान्—Daya. ; uvata, Mahidhara) ;with exhilaration (समद: अत्यन्त मध्यती: शत्रुसेनाश्च—Sayana).

Ajim, the paths, (आजिं मार्गं—uvata, Mahidhara) ; the combats, (आजिं संग्रामं—Daya., Nigh.II.17).

May we win kine with the bow, and with the bow the combat. May we win dreadful battles with the bow.

Samadah (battle) = सम् + अद् (i.e. eating together) from √अद् to eat ; or सं + मद: (i.e. raging together) from √मद्, to rage (समद: समदो वात्तेः, सम्मदो वा मदतेः—Nir.IX.17). People devour each other, as it were, in battle (Durga).

3. Coming close to the ear, as if desirous of whispering a secret, and embracing its dear friend, this strong ; stretched on the bow and leading us to salvation in battle, utters a low shrill sound like a woman.

Here jya (bow string) is derived from to conquer, or from √ जि (to conquer, cl.ix) or it is so called because it causes arrows to fly quickly (ज्या जयते र्वा । जिनातेर्वा । प्रजावती पुनीति वा—Nir.IX.17-18).

Samane, in the battle (समने संग्रामे—Nir.IX.18).

4. Approaching each other like women of the same mind, they bear (arrows) in their lap as a mother does a son. May these quivering ends of the bow, having a mutual understanding, drive away the enemy, the unfriendly people.

Artni, the ends of the bow (आर्त्नी) are so called because they send forth arrows, or they are made of wood, or they never fail (आर्त्नी अर्तन्यौ वा । अरण्यौ वा । अरिषण्यौ वा—Nir.IX.39-40).

5. The father of many (daughters) and whose sons are many, clangs and clashes, having reached the field of battle. Slung on the back, the quiver, when hurled forth, conquers strifes and all the hostile armies.

The father of many daughters and sons is with reference to arrows. When exposed it smiles as it were. Or it is an onomatopoetic word (बह्वीनां पिता बहुरस्य पुत्र इतीषूनभिप्रेत्य । प्रस्मयत इवापा व्रियमाणः । शब्दानुकरणं वा ।

Isudhih, quiver, is the receptacle of arrows. (इषुधिरिषूणां निधानं —Nir.IX.13).

Sankah, strife ; it is derived from √सच्, to suffer, or from √कॄ, to scatter, preceded by the preposition सम्, (sam). (सङ्काः सचतेः, संपूर्वाद् वा किरतेः—Nir.IX.14. Also संकाः, सह कायन्ति शब्दायन्त इति संकाः –Sayana ; संकाः संग्रामान्—Daya. ; Nigh.II.17.

6. Seated on the car, a skilful charioteer guides his steeds in front of him to whatever place he likes. Admire the greatness of the bridles. From behind, the reins give direction to the mind.

Abhisavah, bridles ; reins (reins penetrate actions, अभीशवोऽभ्यश्नुवते कर्माणि—Nir.III.9 ; See X.94.7—दशाभीशुभ्यः ; अभीशूनां रश्मीनाम्—Sayana ; arms, अभीशूनां बाहूनां—Daya.).

Rasmayah, rays ; reins (रश्मयः किरणाः—Daya. ; रश्मयः अश्वग्रीवाभ्यां व्याप्य वर्तमानाः पाशाः—Sayana).

11. She wears a beautiful wing. Deer is her tooth. When hurled, she flies girt with cow-phlegm. May the arrows grant us protection there where men run to and fro. (Nir.IX.19).

She wears a beautiful wing is with reference to the swift feathers of arrows. Her tooth is made of the horn of deer (mrga). Or else it is derived from √मृग्, to pursue (मृगमयोऽस्यादन्तः । मृगयतेर्वा—Nir.IX.19).

Gobhih, from a substance obtained from cow. It also means skin and phlegm (अथापि चर्म च श्लेष्मा च—Nir.II.5 ; गोभिः सन्नद्धो असि वीलयस्व । thou art girded round with skin and phlegm, be strong. VI.47.26) (गोभिः गोविकारैः स्नायुभिः । अथवा गौरिति ज्या नाम ; c.f. वृक्षेवृक्षे नियता मीमयद् गौः —X.27.22—Sayana).

Isu, arrows, is derived from √ इष्, meaning to go (or to kill) (इषुरीषतेर्गति कर्मणा (वधकर्मणा वा)—Nir.IX.18-19).

13. They strike their thighs and deal blows on their buttocks. O lashing rod, impel sagacious horses in battles. They strike their thighs, i e. their moving thigh bones (आघ्नन्ति सानूत्येषां सरणानि सक्थीनि—Nir. IX.20.) The word Sakthi is derived from √ सच्, to be united, the body is fixed in it. And they deal blows on their buttocks.

Jaghanam, buttock, is derived from the verb janghanya, (जङ्घन्य) to strike repeatedly (जघनं जङ्घन्यते:—Nir.IX.20).

Asvajani, the lashing rod(अश्वाजनि अश्वानां क्षेप्त्रि कशे यथा त्वया—Sayana ; अश्वानां प्रक्षेप्त्रि—Daya.).

Kasha—Lashing(rod is also called whip (कशा), which is so called because it reveáls (प्रकाशयति) danger to the horse (अश्वाजनी कशेत्याहु: । कशा प्रकाशयति भयमश्वाय) Or else, it is derived from √कृष्, to drag on account of being small (कृष्यतेर्वाणूभावात्) Further speech is called kasa (कशा), because it reveals meanings, or it rests in space (वाक्पुन: प्रकाशयत्यर्थान् । खशया ।), or it is derived from √ क्रुश्, to make a noise (क्रोशतेर्वा)—Nir.IX.19.

14. Like a serpent, it encompasses the arm with its coils, protecting it from the impact of the bowstring. May the manly handguard, learned in all expedients, well protect the man from all sides.

Hastaghna, hand-guard, a shield, the guard of the forearm, हस्तघ्न; it is so called because it is held firmly on the hand (हस्तघ्नो हस्ते हन्यते—Nir. IX.14 ; हस्ते हस्तसमीपे वर्तिनि प्रकोष्ठे स्थित: सन् ज्यया हन्यते इति हस्तघ्न:—Sayana).

Puman, man ; the word is derived from √पुंस्, to crush (पुमान् पुंस्मना भवति । पुंसतेर्वा—Nir.IX.15 : पुमान् पौरुषोपेत: स्वयं पुमांसं धन्विनम्—Sayana).

15. Alakta, mixed with poison (आलाक्ता आलेन विषेण दिग्धा युक्ता—Daya. ; आलेन विषेण अक्ता—Sayana).

Ruru-sirsni, the one having the head of the type of the head of a deer ruru, (रुरुशीर्ष्णी रुरो: शिर इव शिरो यस्या: सा—Daya.) ; the point of the arrow (रुरुशीर्ष्णी रुरुशिरस्का । अर्त: हिंसा कर्मणो रुरु शब्दोत्पत्ति:—Sayana).

Parjanya-retase, the one whose seed or semen is parjanya ; the stem of the arrow formed of the sara (शर), reed or grass, growing in the rainy season (पर्जन्य रेतसे । पर्जन्यो रेतो यस्याः सा पर्जन्यरेताः । तस्यै पर्जन्कार्य भूतायै । शरकाण्डस्य पर्जन्य-जन्यत्वात्—Sayana).

Retas is also water (Nigh.I.12).

17. Kumarah visikhah-iva, the one with shaven head and like the one without the tuft or lock of hair left after shaving ; like shaven-headed boys (कुमाराः कृतचूडाकर्माणः विशिखाइव शिखारहिता इव—Daya.; कुमारा मुण्डिता इव—Sayana).

18. Marmani, the tender or vital parts, susceptible to injury (मर्माणि शरीरस्याञ्जीवन हेतूनवयवान्—Daya.; येषु स्थानेषु विद्धः सद्योम्रियते तानि मर्माणि—Sayana).

Varmana, with armour (वर्मण कवचेन—Sayana ; Daya.).

19. Svah, a relative ; a blood relation (स्वः स्वकीयः—Daya.; ज्ञातिः—Sayana).

Aranah, unfriendly (अरणः अरममाणः—Sayana) ; one who is not prepared to put up a fight (सङ्ग्राम रहितो यथावत् सङ्ग्रामं न करोति—Daya.).

Nistyah, a distant one ; a stranger (निष्ट्यः शब्देन धर्षितुं योग्यो दूरस्थः सन्,—Daya.; तिरोभूतो दूरे स्थितः—Sayana).

IN MEMORY OF

VED RATAN MOHAN

Col. Ved Ratan Mohan, M.P. was born at Rawalpindi on July 30, 1920. He graduated from the Punjab University and later took his Master of Commerce Degree from Delhi University.

Shri Ved Ratan Mohan's father Shri N.N. Mohan was a prominent industrialist and a generous philanthropist. Shri Ved Ratan Mohan made his own memorable contribution to the success of the enterprises in which his family was interested. He also took active interest in public life and supported many worthwhile causes.

In 1961, the honorary rank of Captain was conferred on Shri Ved Ratan Mohan; in 1966, he became a Lieutenant Colonel in the Territorial Army; in 1972, the honorary rank of Colonel in the Territorial Army was conferred on him.

He was elected as Deputy Mayor of the Municipal Corporation, in Lucknow. Later he was elected to the office of the Mayor. In 1964, he was nominated as a Member of the Uttar Pradesh Legislative Council. In 1967, he was awarded Padama Shri. In 1971, he became the recipient of the Padma Bhushan Award. In 1972, he was elected to Rajya Sabha, the Upper House of Indian Parliament, from Uttar Pradesh.

He died on July 28, 1973, deeply mourned and widely lamented.

He had travelled extensively and had a wide range of interests and accomplishments. Photography, painting, music and poetry had a claim on him. Equally, he gave generously of himself to the solution of public problems and to personal hardships of individuals in distress. He was deeply interested in Indian culture and in educational institutions as vehicles of India's cultural renaissance and socio-economic reconstruction. The Vedas and their message energised his inspiration and impelled him to consecrated action for human welfare.

Preface

The Vedas are the Word of God. At the very beginning of the Creation, man received knowledge of the Vedas. The Ṛgveda is the most ancient of all the holy scriptures in the world.

Knowledge of the Vedas is not intended for a particular race or country. God revealed this knowledge for the greatest good of mankind. This noble objective is reflected in the following words of the Vedic sages :

May all be happy and rid of diseases,
May all have a happy and harmonious life,
May nobody ever be afflicted with suffering.

The Vedas have been translated into several languages. Scholars like Griffith, Wilson and Max Müller have written commentaries on the Vedas in English. But the need for bringing out an unconventional and standard translation of the Vedas has been felt for quite sometime. The task, however, involved dedication, hard work and considerable financial resources.

Col. Ved Ratna Mohan, ex-M.P., was a promising youngman, the scion of a family which had implicit faith in the Vedas. His brilliant career was cut short by untimely death in 1973. His father, late Shri Narendra Mohan, was a leading industrialist of India. Devoted to social service, he took keen interest in the dissemination and distribution of religious literature. He had unshakable faith in God. Daily he would perform yajna and once in a year he would perform this on a big scale when all the mantras of one of the four Vedas would be recited. He had named his eldest son Ved Ratna (Jewel of the Vedas). He had desired the late Ved Ratna to do some service to the Vedas. But fate had willed otherwise. Col. Ved Ratna died before he could fulfil his father's wish.

His younger brother Major Kapil Mohan, who has great reverence for the Vedas like his father, made the noble resolve to get all the four Vedas translated into English and publish them on behalf of the Narendra Mohan Foundation in the sacred memory of his elder brother. This Foundation was endowed by the sons of the late Shri Narendra Mohan, the founder of the Mohan Industries, in accordance with the wishes of their father. A hospital, a college, and several other charitable institutions devoted to public service are being run by the Foundation.

The task of rendering the four Vedas into English was entrusted to the Veda Pratishthana by the Foundation. Dr. Govardhan Lal Dutta, a famous educationist and Head of the Pratishthana, requested the Vedic scholar Svami Satya Prakash Sarasvati to undertake the highly onerous responsibility. Indeed one could think of no other scholar better qualified than Svami Satya Prakashji to accomplish this task. I am happy that Svamiji was kind enough to accede to the request. He is devoting most of his time to the translation work though he is a parivrajaka, a peripatetic monk. In this task, he is collaborating with Pandit Satyakam Vidyalankar.

Thanks are particularly due to Shri Vishwanath for his unstinted cooperation in the excellent printing of this work. No words would be adequate to express my warm appreciation and grateful thanks to Major Kapil Mohan, Svami Satya Prakashji and other colleagues and co-workers of the Veda Pratisthana who have generally helped in the accomplishment of this sacred task.

Our labours would be fully rewarded if through this English translation of the four Vedas, attempted for the first time in India, the divine message enshrined in the Vedas impregnates human consciousness everywhere.

Foreword

by

Dr. L.M. Singhvi

Executive Chairman, Veda Pratisthana.

The Vedas enshrine the cosmic vision and vitality of our ancestors and epitomise a living legacy of divine inspiration, intuition and insight.

The glory of the Vedas is their universal and timeless quality.

The subtle and symbolic invocations of the Sruti and the mystic and melodic music of the celestial hymns have hallowed human consciousness through trackless centuries with a sublime glow.

The Vedas exemplify a carefully nurtured and elaborately systematized oral tradition which is unrivalled in the annals of civilization.

The evocative poetry of joyous and spontaneous affirmation of life and nature, the unravelling explorations of the seers into the terrestrial and transcendental destiny of mankind, the pervasive immanence and the pristine omnipresence of primeval reality and primordial matter, and the wisdom and philosophy of Moral and Social Order in an harmonious equilibrium unfold the luminous realm of the spirit of the Vedas.

The Vedas are unique in their perspective of time and space.

Early in the history of human civilization, the Vedas proclaimed the essential unity of mankind, untrammelled by geographical barriers and tribal parochialism.

The Vedas declared the enduring filial allegiance of Man to Mother Earth: माता भूमि पुत्रोऽहं पृथिव्या .. ...अथर्व. 12.1 12.

The Vedas articulated the essential equality and intrinsically equal dignity of men and nations and the need for cooperative effort for common benefit: अज्येष्ठासो अकनिष्ठास एते, सं भ्रातरो वावृधुः सौभगाय । ऋक्. 5.60.5.

The Vedas cautioned against recrimination, jealousy and ill-will among the human kindred: मा भ्राता भ्रातरं द्विक्षन् मा स्वसारमुत स्वसा......अथर्व. 3.30.3.

The Vedas aimed and aspired for an ambiance of unfailing and ubiquitous friendship:

The Vedas celebrate the vac whose array of thousand syllables and thousand postures of consciousness manifested in a thousand ways appear as flame-songs of the earth and the empyrean. In their innermost recesses are embedded the eternal and cosmic powers of illumination. The Vedic words rising from the oceanic depths of creative consciousness provide a panoramic vision and a thousand vignettes of that real inner illumination, svar, reached by dhi, the two facets of which are karma (action) and prajna (knowledge). In that realm of invocation and sacrifice, faith (sraddha) converges with reason (tarka); intuition assimilates perception; light combines with vigour; wisdom coalesces with valour; speech and action become one. The science of Vedas seeks that true synthesis of faith and reason, and in that pursuit, its prayer is that we may be blessed with "faith" that has not degenerated into the somnolence of the spirit and that we may be endowed with "reason" that has not, in the words of Gurudeva Tagore, lost "its way into the dreary desert sand of dead habit" and which has its habitation in the meandering maze of pointless prolixity:

वयं सोमस्य विश्वह प्रियास. सुवीरासो विदथमावदेम ॥ ऋक्. 8.48.14.

The true Vedic faith does not countenance dogma; the Vedic reason is not a euphemism for sophistry; the Vedic word is not a victim of verbiage. The essential perception of the Vedas is not a prisoner of perversions. The humanism of Vedas is not a hypocrisy and the Vedic teaching of tolerance is not a transient contrivance The core commitment of Vedas is to truth and dharma, to harmony and happiness, to freedom and justice. The soulful Vedic voyage in ceaseless quest of the experience of inner illumination and with its rich symbolism and manifold meanings is perhaps the oldest and the most magnificent and many-splendoured pilgrimage of the human spirit.

The Vedas gave the Magna Carta of Human Brotherhood and Universal Goodwill and proclaimed a noble prayerful Preamble to the humanitarian Constitution of One World based on friendship, fellow-feeling, freedom and fearlessness in words which are immortal and ever inspiring and which are central to the basic teleology and technology of building impregnable defences of peace in the minds of men. The Vedic seers who viewed the world of perception and the world of thought as a continuum prayed for the composite benediction of hearing noble thoughts and seeing noble deeds: भद्रं कर्णेभि: श्रृणुयाम देवा भद्रं पश्येमाक्षिभिर्यजत्रा: । यजु. 25.21

In that endeavour of building a universe of noble thoughts and noble deeds, the Vedic seers convened a cosmic convocation based on the fundamental human quest for truth and the acceptance of its many facets (एकं सद् विप्राः बहुधा वदन्ति):

आ नो भद्राः क्रतवो यन्तु विश्वतोऽदब्धासो अपरीतास उद्भिदः ।
देवा नो यथा सदमिद् वृधे असन्नप्रायुवो रक्षितारो दिवे दिवे ॥ ऋक्. 1.89.1.

In the Vedic vision of human society, man in his relation to man was not predatory, aggressive and oppressive as in the Hobbesian nightmare which conjured up homo homini lupus. The Vedic ideal was that Man was under an obligation to protect and preserve and to aid and comfort mankind everywhere: पुमान् पुमांसं परिपातु विश्वतः । ऋक्. 6.75.14.

The Vedic philosophy of freedom and fearlessness reached a credal and climactic crescendo in the earthy yet ethereal invocations:

अभयं मित्रादभयममित्रादभयं ज्ञातादभयं परोक्षात् ।
अभयं नक्तमभयं दिवा नः सर्वा आशा मम मित्रं भवन्तु ॥ अथर्व. 19.15.7

Equally, the Vedic hymn of togetherness remains a refreshing reminder and a beacon light to the fractured and fragmented world out of whose womb the new world order is struggling to be born:

सङ्गच्छध्वं संवदध्वं सं वो मनांसि जानताम् ।
देवा भागं यथा पूर्वे सञ्जानाना उपासते ॥ ऋक्. 10.191.2.

These noble thoughts made the culture of the Vedas the first and foremost foundation of the edifice of universal values: सा प्रथमा संस्कृतिर्विश्ववारा: । यजु. 7.14.

These enduring verities of the Vedas are not a relic of the past, nor are they the exclusive preserve or the sole inheritance of Indians and Indo-Aryans. They belong to the common heritage of humanity and are relevant in our contemporary world and in our age. We owe it to ourselves and to the peoples and the nations of the world to share this precious heritage and to disseminate its message and meaning.

It is the proud privilege of Veda Pratisthana to be the chosen instrument of the monumental project for preparing and presenting a readable and systematic modern translation of all the four Vedas. The Veda Pratisthana has had the credentials and the capacity to attempt this ambitious task because it was founded on the deep understanding and encyclopaedic erudition of Swami Satya Prakashji, an eminent scientist and a distinguished professor before he became a parivrajaka, the firm financial support and the bounteous benefaction of Narendra Mohan Foundation, an eloquent and tangible testament of the Mohan family's liberal and public-spirited disposition, and of the intrepid faith, fortitude, vision and dedication of the late Shri Prakash Vir Shastri.

The munificence of Major Kapil Mohan and his family and their deep devotion to the cause of Vedic learning enabled the Veda Pratisthana to embark on this noble enterprise. It was Major Kapil Mohan's resolve to raise a truly meaningful memorial in the form of a new edition of the Vedas in remembrance of his elder brother, the late Col. Ved Ratan Mohan that led the Narendra Mohan Foundation to offer its generous and unsparing financial assistance for this project. We acknowledge our debt of gratitude to Major Kapil Mohan and to Narendra Mohan Foundation. We also take this opportunity to pay our tribute to the memory of Col. Ved Ratan Mohan whose life was a superb saga of service and an inexhaustible treasury of goodwill.

The late Shri Prakash Vir Shastri was the main architect of Veda Pratisthana. It was to him that we owed the initial organization, the basic conception and the purposeful momentum of the project. Indeed, we are only trying to translate his dream into a reality. An eminent and gifted parliamentarian, whose cascading eloquence, sparkling wit, mature wisdom and intrinsic goodness had a singular charm, Parkash Vir Shastri was an articulate exponent and a selfless missionary of the fundamental values of India's creative and spiritual culture. Spun and woven with the warp and woof of Indian sensitivity and perception, the tapestry of his life and work was as authentic as it was inspiring. He shunned the pettiness and parochialism of politics and strove to reinforce our national life with the tensile strength of our quintessential heritage. He lived and worked for national goals. In national politics he was the ambassador of the larger cultural claims on life. In his tragic and untimely death, Mother India lost an illustrious son who distinguished himself not by the office he held, nor by his wealth or material acquisitions, but by his dedicated and singleminded service to the cause of the nation. In his death, Veda Pratisthana lost its moving spirit, regained mainly because his memory is a motive force. We savour the exhilarating fragrance and see the inspiring and exhorting presence of his personality, pervasive, permeating and perdurable, in the fruition of this project and pay our affectionate homage to his everlasting memory.

As fire priests with fingers produce fire from two sticks by the motion of their hands, in the same way with the co-ordinated efforts of their deep thinking and noble actions, wise men manifest and extend the glory of effulgent Lord, who is excellent, and to be realized at depth with subtle eyes, ever vigilant and sovereign Lord of creation. 1

Like the household fire, devotees seek the glory of Lord even from afar and enshrine it in their inner chamber for enlightenment. The glory of our Lord is full of splendour, all-illuminative and worthy to be honoured in every heart. 2

Well-kindled, ever-youthful, the glory of the adorable Lord shines before us, with undecaying and life-bestowing radiance. To it, proceeds our abundant ever-flowing homage, like viands to a sacrificial fire. 3

When the nobly-born, brilliant worshippers assemble, they make your glory shine more brightly than any other glory for bestowing blessings and progeny. 4

O vigorous adorable Lord, grant us, in requital of our praises, excellent riches and worthy children, and descendants, and other blessings such that no evil, attempting to assail, may succeed in its effort. 5

For the attainment of spiritual wealth, the ever-young damsel of wisdom, charged with devotion, as if a ladle charged with melted butter, approaches day and night the one, who shines with its own lustre. 6

Consume, O effulgent Lord, all my evils with those strong flames, with which you consume old famished things. May you all drive away all febrile diseases. 7

O eminent Lord, pure and radiating, may the devotee, who lights up your glory by praises, inspire us also to get enlightened with these praises. 8

O adorable Lord, our mortal revered elders, the leaders of the family, have been spreading your radiance on several occasions. May they through these propitiations be gracious to us. 9

May those men, who bravely fight all evil forces prevail against capricious devices, and be among us to lead us to right path for noble actions. 10

O invincible Lord, may we not sit inactive in solitude, foresaken by others, while difficulties surround us from all sides. May we feel your presence everywhere, O housefriend, in houses full of children. 11

Whatsoever the system of worship, O adorable Lord, the one with vigorous speed, render our dwellings blessed with progeny and excellent posterity, increasing with lineal successors. 12

Protect us, O adorable Lord, from the odious demons, guard us from the malice of the churlish sinner. May I, with you for my ally, triumph over adversaries. 13

May this fire of faith of adorable Lord surpass the warmth of all other forces. This self-kindled, vigorous and firm-handed fire possessing thousands of means, works in coordination with imperishable elements. 14

Verily, this is that faith of the adorable Lord which defends us from the malevolent and from heinous sin. It is, whom the well-born worshippers serve and adore. 15

This is that fire, which is honoured in all places, and whom the rich master, presenting oblations to, kindles, and round whom goes the ministrant priest at the place of worship. 16

O adorable fire-divine, may we, with riches in possession, bring you continual offerings in abundance, and both of us—the devotee and the ministrant priest—invoke you to bless our work and worship. 17

Relinquish us not, O adorable Lord, to the group of persons devoid of courage; nor to deficient clothing; nor to such destitution; leave us not to hunger or to a fiend ; expose us not, O observer of truth, to evil, whether in the house or in the forest. 19

May you, O effulgent adorable Lord, without delay bestow upon me and upon those who are liberal in oblations, abundant and wholesome sustenance. May we both, learned and the learner, partake in your munificence; may you all, the divine powers, ever cherish us with blessings. 20

O fire-divine, shine with bright lustre. O source of strength, you are full of effulgence and thus earnestly invoked. May you not let your loyal worshipper, with whom you are associated, be consumed by evil forces; let not our benevolent son fail us. 21

O fire-divine, may you not condemn us to indigence; may not these flaming fires, which Nature's forces have kindled, harm us. O source of strength, let not your displeasure even at our fault, fall upon us. 22

O radiant adorable fire-divine, the mortal, who offers dedication to the divine immortal, becomes affluent in wealth and wisdom. The same Lord, the deity, favours the seeker who inquiringly goes to Him (i.e. asking who that divine is). 23

O adorable Lord, cognizant of our solemn and auspicious worship, may you bring to the worshippers abundant riches, whereby, through your blessings, we enjoy ourselves with undiminished life, and excellent descendants. 24

May you, O effulgent adorable Lord, without delay, bestow upon me and upon those who are liberal in oblations, abundant and wholesome sustenance. May we both—the learned and the learner—partake in your munificence. May you all, the divine powers, even cherish us with blessings. 25

O adorable fire, kindled by us today, may you gladly accept our fuel-sticks, which emitting the fragrant sacred smoke purify the surroundings. May you then touch with your scorching flames the celestial summits, and overspread your fragrance with the rays of the sun. 1

We celebrate with dedicated acts the greatness of the illustrious superman amidst enlightened persons, who are pure, most wise, thought inspirers, and who enjoy both kinds of our oblations—physical and spiritual. 2

Let us ever extol the adorable Lord, who is to be adored by us ; He is mighty, dextrous, and the messenger, traversing both worlds—material and spiritual—and the teacher of true knowledge. His glory has been extolled by men in ancient times, as well as by men of today so that He blesses us in our midst for the benevolent acts. 3

The worshippers, reverentially bent upon their knees and bearing the oblation of herbal grasses present it to the adorable fire-divine. O priests, may you serve Him with oblations, invoking Him to be enshrined in your heart and adorn Him with love, as if, with clarified butter. 4

The devout performers of solemn ceremonies, aspiring for chariots, as if, are led to the doors of the chamber of Lord. Ladles, placed to the east, are plying the fire with melted butter at the fire-sacrifice, as the mother cow licks the calf, or as rivers water the fields. 5

May day and night, the two youthful damsels, divine and mighty, invoked by all, possessed of wealth, as if, reclined on the bed of sacred firmament, worthy of adoration, be with us like a cow, good at milking. 6

I am inclined to adore you, the two sages, the ministrants at the places of work and worship of men, from whom all the prosperity is derived. May you raise our offspring to a higher stature, and help us to acquire precious treasures preserved amongst Nature's bounties, when the worship is being conducted. 7

May the goddess of culture, associated with the models of other cultures, may the goddess of wisdom in company with men, ordinary and intellectual, may the fire-divine, and may the goddess of divine speech with masters of language come to bless us and enshrine our hearts. 8

O divine architect of universe, well pleased, may you give us procreant vigour, whence a brave son skilled in action, lover of divine powers and resolute like grinding stones, be born. 9

O Lord of forest, may you spread the glories of Nature all around. May the fire-divine, the pacifier, take us across our troubles through truthful means and like the ministering priest, convey our offerings to Nature's bounties. Verily, he knows the secret of divine powers. 10

O fire-divine, kindled into flame, come to our presence in the same chariot with radiant sun and with the swift-moving Nature's bounties; may the mother infinity, the mother of excellent offsprings, enshrine herself on the sacred bed of universe, and may the immortal divine powers be satisfied with the reverentially offered homage. 11

O most adorable, fire-divine, consentient with other cosmic fires, may you appoint the terrestrial fire as the messenger at the fire-sacrifice. The fire is established firm for the benefit of mankind; it is the observer of natural laws, is crowned with flames, is the purifier, and is fed upon sacred butter. 1

When the common fire, like a neighing steed about to feed upon the forage, springs up from the vast-enclosing forest, then the wind fans its flame; and the route through which it passes gets scorched and is turned black. 2

O fire-divine, showerer of blessings, while kindled, your undecaying newly-born flames rise upward. The ruddy smoke ascends aloft to heaven, and you proceed to Nature's bounties as their messenger. 3

Your fresh lustre quickly spreads over the earth, when, with your teeth of flame, you devour your food of oblation. Your blaze rushes along like a charging host, when, O splendrous fire, you spread with your flame among the trees, as if, they were barley plants. 4

Men deck that youthful fire both at dawn and at evening as they tend a courser. They kindle it as a guest in their dwellings. Then, brightly shines the splendour of this showerer of blessings, to whom the oblation is offered. 5

Resplendent fire, when you shine near at hand like gold, your appearance takes a beautiful form. Your mighty power issues like thunderbolt from firmament, and your lustre is displayed like the wondrous sun. 6

We present to you, O fire-divine, the sacred oblations, mixed with the milk of love and butter of devotion. May we have the blessings of your boundless glories as the protections within the innumerable fortresses of iron. 7

O omniscient, source of strength, munificent fire-divine, may you protect us, your worshippers and praisers, with those unobstructed splendours which belong to you, and with those songs wherewith you protect the learned seers and the chanters of praises. 8

The bright fire-divine, radiant with its own diffusive lustre, issues like a sharpened axe. It is praiseworthy, the doer of great deeds, and the purifier. It gets manifested out of the two parents, the sacred fuel-sticks, for invoking Nature's bounties. 9

Illume for us, O fire-divine, to grant these auspicious riches; may we possess a son, who promises to be intelligent, and becomes the celebrator of sacred institutions. May all good rewards be granted to your praisers, and to him who eulogizes you. May you ever preserve us with blessings. 10

Offer your sacred homage and praise to the refulgent splendour of adorable Lord who, with all His knowledge, goes as a messenger through all Nature's forces and human beings. 1

The sagacious Lord has been our guide from the time that He is revealed through the mother Infinity. He is ever youthful; with his shining-teeth He assails the forest of physical delusions, and in a moment devours them as food, though they may be plenteous. 2

Men apprehend Him (the fire-divine) as pure splendour in the principal abode of that divine power. He is worthy of lofty adoration, and blazes with His glory for the good of mankind and for the destruction of evil forces. 3

This far-seeing, sagacious, immortal Lord has been enshrined in the hearts of non-sagacious. May you not forbear to harm us, O mighty Lord, in this world, since we long to share your gracious favour. 4

The herbs, the trees and the earth bear this all-supporting fire-divine as the germ. He occupies an appropriate place assigned by Nature's bounties. May He, as one of His functions, convey our homage to immortal divine powers. 5

Adorable Lord has power to grant abundant celestial nourishing nectar. He has power to grant riches and valour. O victorious Lord, let us, while we are so close to you, not remain devoid of strength, devoid of posterity, of beauty, and of devotion. 6

Wealth is competent to the acquittance of debt; may we be masters of our permanent possessions. He is not real offspring, who is begotten by another. May you not give a long rope to a blockhead. 7

Unwelcome for adoption is the stranger, who is begotten of another. He is not to be contemplated even in thought as fit for acceptance. For verily, he would like to return to his own house. Therefore, let there come to us our own child, a new-born, victorious over foes, and rich in wisdom. 8

May you, O adorable Lord, defend us against the malignant. May you, endowed with strength, preserve us from defaming actions. May the sacrificial food come to you free from defect. May the riches, that we crave, come to us by thousands. 9

Illume for us, O fire-divine these auspicious riches; may we attain perfect understanding. May all good rewards be granted to your praisers and the householder. May you ever cherish us with blessings. 10

Offer praise to the mighty adorable Lord, traversing without hindrance heaven and earth. His is the supreme glory amongst the immortal cosmic powers, which grow in the lap of Nature's divinities, and is realized by those who wake (from the slumber of ignorance). 1

Universal fire-divine is the promotor of the rivers and the showerer of the waters. He is effulgent and has been pervading the firmament and the earth. The universally honoured Lord, augmenting with the most excellent glory, shines upon the world and mankind. 2

Through your fear, O universal fire, the dark evil forces, though of many minds, come under a control, having abandoned their possessions. Adorable Lord, may you shine upon all men and blaze, consuming the cities of their foes. 3

O Universal fire-divine, both the earth and heaven, submit them to your threefold jurisdiction. Refulgent in your undecaying splendour, you invest both the worlds with lustre. 4

The solar horses, full of ardour, honour you, O universal fire, neighing, as if, our resonant hymns, that are full of devotion. You are Lord of men, our conveyer of riches, and ensign of dawns and days. 5

O reverencer of friends, forces of celestial realms submit themselves before your vigour. They propitiate you for your deeds. You bring forth vast light for the benefit of righteous persons, and expel the dark elements from their dwellings. 6

Manifest in the loftiest heaven, you like wind reach in a moment the place where divine forces inhabit. O omnipresent fire, you show favour to your sons and with loud roaring thunder give life to creatures. 7

May you send to us, O fire-divine, the universal leader, knower of all that is born, that brilliant sustenance whereby you confer wealth, and grant wide-spread abundant food and fame to the mortal, who offers worship to you. 8

Bestow upon our nobles and leaders the riches and renowned wealth which feed many. Associated with the vital and life providing elements, may you grant us, O universal fire divine, infinite happiness. 9

I glorify the achievements of that terrestrial fire, male personified, and salute the most revered amongst common men, the universal sovereign, the mighty one like a cloud and the demolisher (of all that is inimical). Besides, may I so proclaim that his exploits are, as if, comparable to that of the resplendent (the sun). 1

They propitiate Him, the fire-divine, who is wise, the manifesting, the sustaining, the enlightener of the pious, the giver of happiness, the sovereign of heaven and earth. I glorify with hymns the ancient and mighty works of fire-divine, the demolisher of strongholds of evils. 2

May the fire-divine chase away those infidels, who do not perform worship and who are uncivil in speech. They are niggards, unbelievers, say no tribute to fire-divine and offer no homage. The fire-divine turns those godless people far away who institute no sacred ceremonies. 3

I glorify that celestial fire, the sun personified, who with all his manly prowess drives the maidens, the dawns, eastward who were as far rejoicing in the western darkness. I extol that fire in the sun, the lord of riches, the unyielding tamer of adversaries. 4

He is the mighty fire-divine, who by his fatal weapons baffles the devices of evil-doers, who creates the dawns, the brides of the sun. He, with his conquering strength, coerces the faithless people and impels them to bring their tributes to Lord bound by discipline. 5

He is that universal fire-divine, the sun, in whose protection all men rest by nature, with a desire to enjoy his gracious favour. This celestial fire, the leader of cosmos, finds the choicest abode in his parent's bosom, a seat between the heaven and earth. 6

The celestial sun, the leader of the cosmos, takes away the glooms from the firmament while he rises. He takes them away from the lower firmament of the earth, as well as from the upper firmament of heaven. 7

I propitiate with oblations the divine, vigorous fire-divine, rapid as a horse. May you knowing our wishes, be a herald of our benevolent selfless works. He regulates Nature's bounties according to strict measures. 1

Come, O fire-divine, rejoicing by your own paths, delighting in the alliance of Nature's bounties, roaring with your fury on the high places of the earth and threatening to consume all the woods and forests with your teeth like flames. 2

The worship advances; the sacred grass is strewn; the fire-divine is adored and made propitious as the ministrant priest. May you invoke the all-boon-bestowing parents, —heaven and earth—,of whose children, O fire-divine, you happen to be the youngest. 3

Wise men promptly generate Him (the fire-divine) at the initiation of sacrifice and make Him leader of the solemn worship. He is established as the Lord in the homes of people. He is delightful, sweet-spoken, and the observer of eternal laws. 4

The fire-divine, selected as the bearer of oblation, is established in the homes of worshippers. He presides over work and worship, and sustains them. He is the giver of all boons; Him heaven and earth extol, and Him the ministrant priests worship. 5

The sovereign fire-divine, supreme of all divine powers, is kindled with tributes, and invoked with the butter of devotional love by his faithful devotees. The men adore him with oblations. The sacred fire-divine is lighted before the advent of dawn. 1

This most mighty fire-divine has been acknowledged amongst men as the invoker, the giver of delight, and the most powerful. He spreads light over the earth; and whilst eagerly burning the plants with his teeth of flames, he leaves dark tracks behind him. 2

This fire-divine is greatly celebrated by the institutor of the ceremony, when he shines like the sun with lofty splendour. He glorifies the brave in the struggle and shines in full refulgence as a heavenly guest. 4

Full many offerings have been presented to you, O fire-divine. With all your flames be propitious, and favourably listen to the invocations of the worshipper. Having been glorified, may you on your own magnify your person. 5

May my words that win a hundred and a thousand treasures, addressed with redoubled force to the fire-divine, become the source of conferring fame, of removing diseases, and of destroying evil forces. May they be the means of happiness, to the eulogists and their kinsmen. 6

He (the sun), who rises from the bosom of the dawn, is the consumer of beloved creatures, the invoker, the giver of delight, the wisest of the wise, and the purifier. He gives consciousness to both classes of beings, men and animals, oblations to Nature's bounties, and riches to the pious. 1

He is the sun, who is the accomplisher of great deeds, who forces open the doors of the dark fortresses and recovers for us the radiant source of light, bestowing nourishment to many. Verily, he is the invoker of Nature's bounties, and a giver of bliss. He is seen by all people dissipating the gloom of the nights. 2

He is unperplexed, far-seeing, elevated, resplendent, right-directing, a friend, a guest, the bestower of prosperity upon us, and wonderfully radiant. He shines before the dawns and further is the embryo of waters, and he enters into the nascent plants. 3

He, the fire-divine, has been adored through human ages. He, the born-knower, gleams refulgent with his lovely lustre when engaged in a battle. The devotees wake to meet Him when enkindled at the altar. 4

O fire-divine, fail you not to go to Nature's bounties in your function as a messenger of them who are present here in the assembly of prayer. May you bring all the divinities, the divine speech, the divine vital powers, the pair of twin-divines and the waters so that they may bestow riches upon us. 5

O fire-divine, the celebrated sage when enkindling you, destroys the malignant. May you give us wealth in plenty. May you sing praise in choral song, O fully enlightened, and may you ever cherish us with blessings. 6

Like the lover of the dawn (the sun), he, the fire-divine, sends forth radiant, bright, resplendent, and extensive lustre. He, the showerer of blessings, the receiver (of oblations), shines in his splendour, encouraging holy works. He arouses people for new aspirations. 1

He, like the sun, shines, while morn is breaking and priests weave the sacrifice and repeat the praises. The munificent fire-divine, the messenger of Nature's bounties, the cognizer of their birth, proceeds to them, and hastens in various directions. 2

Our praises and holy hymns, soliciting riches, proceed to the fire-divine, who is full of splendour and of agreeable form, and is of graceful movement, the bearer of oblations, the ruler of men. 3

Joined with the cosmic vital powers, O fire-divine, bring hither the divine blessing of the resplendent sun, the cosmic vital elements, the benevolent mother infinity, the Lord of light, and universally honoured, the Lord preceptor. 4

Men eagerly implore at the sacred ceremonies the youthful fire-divine, the giver of delight, the invoker of Nature's bounties. He, the ruler of the night, has been a dilligent envoy of the opulent institutors of sacrifices for the worship of divine powers. 5

Great are you, O fire-divine, the manifester of the solemnity; without you the immortal souls do not rejoice; come with all divine powers in one charoit, be established, O chief of divine powers, the ministrant priest. 1

Men offering oblations, ever solicit of you, O swift-going fire-divine, to undertake an envoy's duty. In whosoever's devotional heart you enshrine along with other divines, his days become prosperous. 2

O fire-divine, the priests offer you the treasures of homage three times a day for the benefit of the mortal worshipper. May you inspire the divine powers on this occasion, as you have been inspiring them for mankind from the earliest times. May you be our messenger, and guard us from malignity. 3

Fire-divine presides over the solemn worship. He is the lord of every consecreted gift presented. All other life-giving divine powers act in consonance with his functions, and therefore, they make him the bearer of the offering. 4

O fire-divine, bring the divine powers to taste our offerings; may they, of whom the resplendent sun is the chief, be delighted on this occasion. May you convey this worship to the divines in celestial region, and do cherish us ever more with blessings. 5

Let us approach with profound reverence the ever-young Lord, whose glory shines when kindled in the hearts of devotees, and who shines with wondrous light between wide heaven and earth; when piously invoked, He appears to be coming to us from every quarter. 1

May that adorable Lord, who by His greatness is the over-comer of all evils, and who in the sacrificial chamber is praised as cognizant of all that is born, protect us, the worshippers and our noble patrons from trouble and disgrace. 2

O adorable Lord, verily, you are venerable and friendly. The most celebrated sages exalt you with praises; may our rich offering be acceptable to you, and may you ever cherish us with blessings. 3

Offer praise and worship to adorable Lord, the enlightener of all, the inspirer of pious thoughts, and the destroyer of the evil intentions. Propitiating Him, in my inner consciousness, I now offer the oblation, my worldly gains, to the universal Lord, the inspirer of intellectual pursuits. 1

O adorable Lord, with your radiant lustre, you fill the heaven and earth. O universally revered Lord, the source of material and spiritual wealth, as soon as revealed, you, with your power set free the divine powers from the curse that binds them. 2

When you are manifested, O resplendent Lord, you look on all creatures like a watchful herdsman, moving round his cattle. O universally adored Lord, may you indicate to us the right way of praying. May you cherish us ever with blessings. 3

O omniscient, adorable Lord, may you honour divine powers by our homage, and may they be well-pleased by the cosmic benevolent sacrifice. 3

The omniscient Lord is pleased to perform splendid acts of cosmic sacrificial order and keep immortal divine powers well-pleased. 4

O resplendent Lord, our forefathers, glorifying you, have obtained all desirable riches. It is through your blessing that instincts of wisdom are easily milked, and vital powers are yoked. You are the liberal donor of wealth to the devotees. 1

O bounteous wise Lord, you dwell with your glories like a prince among his people. May you honour our praises by the award of gold, kine and horses and lead us, your humble servants, to the path of riches. 2

These are our holy hymns addressed to you, on this occasion, with joy and in earnestness. May the stream of your riches come down towards us. O resplendent Lord, may we find comforts under your care. 3

Seeking to find truth, the celebrated sage pours forth his prayers to you like a herdsman trying to milk the milch cow at the pasture. All people proclaim you the Lord of wisdom. May you be present to bless the prayers we offer. 4

The adorable Lord makes the well-known deep waters shallow and thus fordable for His faithful devotee. Being unable to go across the waters, the infidel, the unbeliever in the divine hymn, stays over there to curse the fury of the river. 5

He, diligent in cosmic sacrifice, has been considerate from the very beginning, glorious and approachable. He goes to humble devotees to give prosperity like fishes urged by hunger. The men of mature wisdom and subduers of law-breaker listen to him attentively. As a friend He rescues a true friend among two men of different aptitudes. 6

All those who prepare the oblation, those who pronounce auspicious words, those who do not need any penance, those who bear torches, and those who bestow happiness, glorify that resplendent Lord, who for restoring cows (the lost wisdom) of persons of nobility from the plunderers, kills the enemies in battle. 7

The ill-disposed stupid men while crossing a crooked river, break down its banks, and the sage, yet maturing in experience, falls as a victim and sleeps to death. Great is the Lord who pervades this earth ! 8

May we attain the wealth, the meaningful prosperity. Let us move quickly to the winding stream and obtain the obtainable. The resplendent Lord helps the one who is a devoted servant but He does not care for the swiftly flying foes, the unmanly babblers. 9

They (the waves of waters) rush like cows unherded from the pastures, each aligning to each like a friend. They are as if driven by spotted steeds, and harnessed horses, sent down by cloud-bearing winds of the sky. 10

The resplendent sun, the brave, creates the cloud-bearing winds through lust of glory. The clouds burst out in torrents, as if slaying one-and-twenty of the men on the two banks of a winding stream, or just as a good-looking priest lops the sacred grass in the chamber of the fire ritual. 11

The bearer of bolt of justice blesses the learned preceptors, men of matured wisdom, and those who discard evil actions. Others also, who claim friendship with you, O Lord, and glorify you, preferring your friendship, enjoy your blessings. 12

Resplendent Lord, with his conquering power at once demolishes all the strongholds and their seven places of evil forces. He gives comforts to the fresh warriors in the battle-field of life. May we conquer the ill-speaking men in conflict. 13

The warriors of the sinful and unfriendly, intending to carry riches of the pious and virtuous devotees, perish in large numbers (sixty-six thousand, six hundred and sixty); such are the glorious deeds performed by the Lord. 14

These assailing elements, under the Lord's careful guidance, come speeding like loose waters, rushing downward. The evils when in conflict with virtuous forces ultimately are defeated and abandon provisions to the virtuous devotees. 15

The resplendent Lord scatters over the earth the hostile, who denies our Lord's existence and who claims to be a rival of the Lord and who appropriates the oblation, meant for the presentation to the Lord. The Lord baffles the wrath of the wrathful enemy; and the foe advancing forward ultimately leaves the field and takes to flight. 16

The resplendent Lord may make a pauper capable of offering large donations. He may let a lion be killed by a goat. He may let one to cut the angles of the pillar with a needle. Such are His wonders; He gives all the spoils of evil persons to His pious devotees. 17

Numerous infidels of the Lord have been reduced to subjection. Even the fierce tendencies of violence come under his subjugation. May you hurl, O Lord, your sharp bolt of justice against him, who harms the devotee, that sings your glory. 18

Those, who abide by true order, and who fight to defend virtues, perform worship, and promote godly actions. The Lord, when he destroys turbulent actions in the struggle, the brilliant intellectuals, and the eloquent speakers, and divine powers cooperate in this sacred work. 19

O resplendent Lord, your favours, and your bounties, whether old or new, cannot be counted like the recurring dawns. You dispel darkness from lofty places even on your own accord; the darkness, which is supposed to be the offspring of the divine power. 20

Neither the destroyers of hundreds of infidels, nor the noblest sages, who glorify you in every home, will neglect your friendship, O benefactor. So, may prosperous days dawn upon these pious devotees. 21

I move around the sacred altar in the chamber of ceremony, carrying the fire of the ritual, like the ministrant priest. I acknowledge my praises to the liberality of the kind-hearted devotees, the virtuous donors of two hundred cows, and two chariots driven by two mares. 22

These four trained horses, with trappings of gold, going steadily on a difficult road, strong-built on the earth, possessors of excellent and acceptable gifts, belong to noble and kind givers. They carry me and my son to obtain food and progeny. 23

The seven flowing rivers praise Him as if He were the radiant sun. His fame spreads through the spacious heaven and earth. Being munificent, He distributes wealth to every man of eminence. He destroys the war-monger in a close encounter. 24

Attend on him, O vital powers, as you have been attending on faithful servants of Lord divine. May you further the desire of vigorous person with favour and guard faithfully his lasting firm dominion. 25

Resplendent Lord is formidable as a sharp-horned bull. He single-handed activated all men. He confers his wealth on the presenter of frequent oblations but does not favour the faithless. 1

Aiding him with your own will, O resplendent Lord, you defend the man of discretion in the struggle of life. You subjugate infidels, exploiters and ill-natured, while you give their exploits to fair and honest persons. 2

Undaunted resplendent Lord, you protect, with all your assitance, the generous and the offerer of homage. You protect a man of discretion and of ripe wisdom in the struggle against any adversary, a person terror to the cruel. 3

O Lord of vigour, honoured by men, you, associated with the vital principles, wipe off numerous obstructions at work and worship offered to the divines. You put to sleep with the punitive justice the malignant, oppressor and the cruel on behalf of God-fearing devotees. 4

O wielder of the bolt of justice, when you hold your mighty powers, quickly crush ninety and nine strongholds of evil. You capture and punish even the remotest culprit, and put an end to evil forces, thus casting down the person clinging to malpractices. 5

The strong and powerful self is born in body for heroic deeds. He covets to come to human form and is the accomplisher of whatever act he undertakes to perform. He is ever youthful and investing the human body with his favours, he saves it from great transgression. 1

Augmenting his strength, he crushes the devil of ignorance. He defends his faithful dependents promptly with protection. He gives wide vision and opportunities to the noble associates and repeatedly confers riches to the presenter of fidelity. 2

He is a confirmed warrior, who turns not his back in the struggle. He is a combatant, engaged in tumults, a hero, victorious over evils from its inception. He is invincible, possessor of great vigour. The self scatters each and every evil that comes hostile to him. 3

O opulent self, you fully occupy, both the earth and heaven—body and mind of man, with your magnitude. With your energies, O soul, the controller of senses, brandishing your adamantine will power, you take delight in sacred deeds, and share spiritual bliss. 4

The supreme Lord, the mighty as a father begets the lower self in a body, whilst the mother Nature brings him forth. The soul finally becomes a valiant warrior to put a fight against all conflicts. He is the benefactor of human complex and the leader of fighting forces within. He in the society of men becomes the conquerer, the leader, the lord, one with strength, a seeker of truth and remarkably bold. 5

Those who have the complete reliance in the formidable spirit of the supreme Self, neither falter nor suffer sorrow. The supreme Self, the protector of sacred rites, the source of sacrificial acts, bestows riches on him who offers praises and prayers with the spirit of dedication. 6

O wonderful, resplendent self, confer that wondrous wealth of wisdom to us, which the prior gives to the posterior, with which the elder wishes to help the younger; who lives far away separated. 7

May the man, who is dear to you, O resplendent self, O wielder of adamantine will power, pay tribute to you. May he remain in your friendship, who is assiduous in dedication. May we be best content under your favour—under the care of one, who harms not, but preserves us. 8

For your favour, O bounteous Self, this mighty hymn clamours and the chanter implores. The will of obtaining wisdom has seized your adorer. May you, therefore. O radiant, help us to our share of wealth of wisdom. 9

Enable us, O resplendent Self, to partake of the sustenance granted by you, or granted by other opulents unasked for. May your devotees have sufficient will and strength to chant your praises; may you and your divine forces ever cherish us with blessings. 10

Pressed is the juice divine, blended with milk of devotion and wisdom and by nature, the resplendent Self has ever been fond of it. O Lord of remarkable faculties, we wake you up with sacrificial deeds. May you acknowledge our praises in the ecstasy of spiritual joy. 1

The dynamic leaders of men, move to the field of work and worship and spread the grass. The worshippers, drunk with devotion, get eloquent in synod, and their voices while they are coming out of their house are heard far off. 2

O resplendent Lord, brave as you are, please set free all thoughts to flow freely,—thoughts which have been encompassed by the dragon of ignorance. Then the streams of thoughts rush forth like charioteers. All created earthly things tremble through your fear. 3

The formidable (resplendent Lord), knowing all actions beneficial to man, masters His opponents by His strong measures. He, in rapturous joy, shakes down their strongholds. Armed with His resolute will, He slays them in His might. 4

O resplendent sovereign Lord, no evil spirits would do us harm, nor friends harm us with their devices. Let the sovereign Lord bring into control the disorderly beings. Let not the lustful unchaste approach our holy work and worship. 5

From the earliest times, the other divine powers have confessed your supremacy over theirs in destructive strength. The resplendent Lord has subdued all the opposition, and has given to His devotees their rich spoils. These men invoke Him always for sustenance. 7

The worshipper invokes you, O sovereign Self, for protection. O protector of all, you have been to us the guardian of great good fortune. May you be our helper against every over-powering assailant strong, as if, like you. 8

O resplendent Lord, may we, daily, with increasing respects and regards, be regarded as your friend. Through your protection, O surpasser in greatness, may we repulse the attack of evil tendencies in our life-struggle and subdue the strength of the malevolent. 9

Enable us, O resplendent Lord, to grasp the intellectual sustenance granted by you, as well as that, which others, who command us, have the fortune to possess. May your great power bring good to him who exalts you. And may you and your divine forces ever cherish us with blessings. 10

O resplendent Self, take rejoice in the ecstasy of spiritual joy. This is the nectar, a sap, as if, from plants, which the stone, controlled like a horse by the reins, the arm of the grinder has expressed for you, O Lord of twin faculties. 1

O resplendent Lord, the master of vital powers, O the one abounding in the riches, may the enhilarating nectar, which is fit for and agreeable to you, and by which you dispel the evil of dark forces, be the source of exhilaration to you. 2

Mark closely, O bounteous, the words I utter, the praise I sing is that which is recited by the celebrated sage. May you accept with pleasure these prayers at this place of worship. 3

May you hear the sound of our grinding stone as if repeatedly singing your praises, and comprehend the hymn of the adoring sage: and in a friendly manner, please accept these adorations while we crave for your kind favours. 4

O destroyer of evils, with my best regards for your strength, I never refrain from your praise, nor from your glorification. Always, on the contrary, I ever remember to pay tributes to you. 5

O resplendent Lord, your wish is comprehended, twice strengthened (with learning and efforts). The sap of devotion has been effused, and sweetened with the honey of sincerity. Thereafter, the hymn of praise, recited in an unreserved language propitiates the Lord, with repeated invocations. 2

Come, O kind-hearted sun-divine far off from the luminous sky or from the earth to be enshrined in our heart to relish our spiritual joy. Let your speedy, vigorous rays of compassion bring you here to be invoked to our hymns and make you joyful. 3

O sun-divine, yoked with speedy beams, propitiated and gratified by our praise, come to us with all your defending assistances. O Lord, possessed of firm and charming countenance, come with your matured associates, overthrowing repeatedly our foes, and grant us strength and vigour. 4

This invigorating praise is addressed to you, as a strong horse is yoked to a chariot. You are mighty, fierce and yet a sustainer of the universe. This hymn solicits wealth and wisdom of you. May you set our glory high in the heaven, much above the sky. 5

In this manner, O resplendent Lord, may you content us with precious gifts. May we be blessed to attain again and again your exalted favour. May you bestow upon our opulent persons plenteous spiritual nourishment and worthy posterity. May you and your divine forces ever cherish us with blessings. 6

The uneffused love of devotion, if not followed by a prayer, does not please the resplendent Lord, and so also the well-effused love, unless accompanied by a prayer. Therefore, I offer to Him the newly composed prayer as is usually offered to a prince or leader. May He listen to it with care, and be delighted. 1

The devotional love expressed along every laud delight the resplendent Lord. The homage, offered as each psalm is chanted, exhilarate our bounteous Lord. Therefore, devotees, with united effort, invok the Lord, as children call father for help. 2

May He be pleased to perform such acts of favour, as His worshippers, at the time of prayers, proclaim, as having ever been done by the Lord. The Lord, equal to the expediency, takes up the control over all the cities of infidels, as a husband over his wife. 3

Thus they proclaim and celebrate that the resplendent Lord is the sole distributor of treasures and saviour from calamities. His many succours come in close succession. May all delightful benefits be granted to us. 4

Men invoke resplendent Lord in life struggles that He may make the hymns they sing. May you, O hero, the benefactor of man, by the dint of power, place us in possession of pastures abounding with cattle. 1

O resplendent, bounteous Lord, invoked by all, give such a sense of discipline to my friends, as is approved by you. O bounteous Lord, you break open strong citadels of darkness. May you discover for us, O discriminator of truth, the treasure, which has been lying concealed till now. 2

The resplendent is the sovereign of the earth and Lord of men. His is the entire wealth that exists on the earth, and he gives riches to the worshipper. May He, glorified by us, enrich us. 3

The affluent and bounteous Lord, when exalted, quickly bestows food to sustain us. His unlimited and unfailing liberality yields much coveted prosperity to men who are His friends. 4

O resplendent Lord, grant quickly wealth for our enrichment ; may we through our adoration gain your compassion. Please grant us riches, comprising of cattle, horses, and chariots. May you and your divine forces ever cherish us with blessings. 5

O resplendent Lord, come to our adoration. Let your energies be harnessed and directed here. Being obliged by you, all mortal men severally invoke you, and as such please give ears to our invocation also, O all-impeller. 1

You are endowed with strength, O resplendent Lord, hence you grant prayers of the seers ; may your greatness extend to your invoker also. O the fierce one, when you hold the bolt of punitive justice in your hand, then formidable by your exploits, you become invincible. 2

O resplendent Lord, by your guidance, you conduct your leading men, your zealous worshippers, through space and earth. By nature, you are the giver of strength and protection. May you bestow strength so that the active may overcome the sluggish. 3

O resplendent Lord, presently bless us so that unfriendly men may make atonement. The untruth, which the wise, sinless, and virtuous men find in us, may that through your favour, doubly disappear. 4

We invoke this opulent resplendent Lord for ample and valuable riches. He is the chief protector of the pious ceremonies of the worshipper. (O Lord), may you and your divine forces ever cherish us with blessings. 5

This devotional love is, verily, offered to you, O resplendent Lord ; be with us in the dwellings of our hearts, O master of both the faculties (mental and physical). May you accept this well-effused offering and give us wealth, O bounteous Lord, when we implore you. 1

O hero, the resplendent Lord, accepting our devotion, may you presently come to us speedily with your vigorous faculties, and be exhilarated at our worship, and listen to the prayers that we offer. 2

O bounteous Lord, what satisfaction is to you from our hymns when we offer them to you ? For you alone, we have composed these hymns, indeed. May you hear them, our invocations, O resplendent Lord. 3

These ancient sages, whose praises you have been listening to, are, verily, gem among common men. Hence O bounteous, resplendent Lord, I invoke you. You are our providence, even as a father. 4

O friends, sing a delightful hymn to the resplendent Lord, the supreme master of vital powers and the acceptor of devotional love. 1

Let us chant to the bounteous Lord such hymns as other men have been doing ; let us offer it to Him who is truth personified. 2

O resplendent Lord, may you be the winner of nourishment for us ; O the performer of hundreds of benevolent works, may you be the winner of cattle ; O the winner of wealth, be the winner of gold for us. 3

O showerer of blessing, we are faithful to you and glorify you. May you be cognizant of this, O giver of wealth. 4

Subject us not to the reviler, to the abuser, to the miser. In you alone is my strength. 5

O resplendent Lord, destroyer of evils, you are our extensive armour and our front line fighter. With you as my ally, I brave the evils of life. 6

Verily, you are great. Heaven and earth, abounding with food pay homage to your strength, O supreme Lord. 7

May the praises of your adorers ever-going along with you, such as you are, and spreading around with radiance reach you. 8

Pay homage to the great, the great giver, the all-wise. The fulfiller of the aspirations of men moves with them (in various forms). 10

The sages compose sacred praises and engender oblations for the sublime, the far pervading resplendent Lord. The wise never violate His statutes. 11

The words of praises truly magnify the glory of the resplendent Lord, the universal monarch, whose wrath is irresistible to overcome. May you urge all associates to glorify the Lord of vital powers. 12

Let none, not even your worshippers, for a moment detain you far away from us. Even from long distances, come to our place of worship and hear our prayers. 1

When the homage is effused to you, these hymn-chanters gather like flies swarming round honey. The pious praisers desiring blessings set their hope upon the resplendent Lord, as men set their foot upon a chariot. 2

These elixirs of devotional prayers mixed with the curds of pious action are dedicated to the resplendent Lord. Come to our heart, O wielder of the bolt of justice, with your two vital and mental powers to bless them for our spiritual joy. 4

May He, with ears ever open, listen to our requests for wealth and never despise our prayers. He is the giver of hundreds and thousands. None can desist Him when He is willing to give. 5

O the resplendent Lord, the destroyer of evil, the brave worshipper, who offers prayer to you and eagerly approaches you, he with your blessings is undeterred by any one and is honoured by men. 6

O bounteous Lord, be a defence to the sincere devotees, may you drive the warriors together, and be the discomfiter of our adversaries. May we divide the wealth of him whom you punish. May you, O imperishable, deliver his possessions to us. 7

May you offer the elixir of devotion to its drinker, the possessor of adamentine justice. Make ready the sweet preparations of dedication to please him for winning His favour, for He bestows happiness on him who pleases Him. 8

O chanters of hymns, do not hesitate ; be active ; pay homage to the great benefactor for riches. Only the active conquers, dwells in peace and thrives. The divine powers favour not the sluggish. 9

No one overturns, or stops the chariot of one who freely gives. The man whom the resplendent Lord and vital principles protect, walks in pastures full of cattle and riches. 10

O resplendent Lord, only that man shall obtain wealth and wisdom, who works hard with devotion and gains your favours for protection. O brave Lord, may you be the preserver of our chariots and our men. 11

Verily, the resplendent Lord's share exceeds that of any one else, like the reward of a victorious. Nobody can overcome Him who is the Lord of vital forces and who gives strength to the participator in noble works. 12

Chant a hymn that is comprehensive, well-uttered and graceful. Never so happens that snares and bonds entangle him who has surrendered himself to Lord by his devotion. 13

O resplendent Lord, what mortal can assail a man who has favour of your support ? O bounteous Lord, the one who offers homage to you with faith, shall immediately win the reward on the day of completion. 14

Inspire those who for the destruction of their opponents offer valuable homage dear to you. O Lord of vital energies, may we with our noble devotees, pass through all perils under your guidance. 15

O resplendent Lord, you cherish the vast wealth of the lower order ; also cherish the middling, and you rule over the one that is most precious. In the recovery of wealth and wisdom, no one can resist you. 16

You are renowned as the giver of wealth to every one in all the struggles that occur. O much invoked, all these people of the earth craving your protection implore your name. 17

O resplendent Lord, the granter of wealth, if I were the possessor of as much wealth as you do, then I would favour sincere worshippers only and not squander it ever upon wickedness. 18

Each day I would enrich the man who sings my praise, in whatsoever place he were. O bounteous Lord, no kinship is there better than yours; no other is as excellent protector to us as you are. 19

Only an active man who solemnly worships acquires wealth and wisdom. O resplendent Lord, invoked by all, I bend down with the words of reverence to you, as a carpenter bends the wooden circumference of the wheel. 20

A man does not acquire wealth by an unbecoming praise. Wealth does not come to one who obstructs. O bounteous Lord, in you rests the power of giving to one like me on the day of completion (of this work). 21

O victorious resplendent Lord, you are the eldest whilst I am the youngest and you have been possessing infinite treasure from the beginning, and therefore, bestow upon me that wealth. We adore you at every solemn worship. 24

O bounteous Lord, may you drive away from us our adversities and render riches easy of acquisition. May you be our good defender in the strife of winning awards. May you be augmenter of prosperity of your friends (such one as I am). 25

O resplendent Lord, give us wisdom as a father giving to his sons. O much invoked Lord, bestow wealth upon us on this occasion so that we may live long to see the divine light. 26

Let no unknown wicked, malevolent, malignant overpower us. May we, protected by you, cross over all the obstructing streams that are rushing down. 27

My wisest disciples are the ones who are the accomplishers of holy ceremonies and of white complexion. They bear lock of hair on the right side. They give me delight, I call these disciples to sit on the sacred grass (near the altar). May they never stay far from me. 1

Disgracing (the worldly entangling tendencies), they bring from a great distance the mighty soul busy at the pleasures of the lower order, to receive the spiritual offerings (of the liberal donor). The resplendent soul thus hastens to leave the enjoyments offered by impulses originated at the worldly physical level and comes to the camp where it enjoys spiritual experiences of the highest type. 2

In the same manner, the liberal giver is enabled by them to easily cross the river ; in the same manner, through them he easily destroys his adversaries. In like manner, the wisest disciples of the spiritual order through prayer and thereby the resplendent Self defends the liberal devotees in their encounter with the ten senses. 3

O leader of rituals, your progenitors are pleased by your praises. I set in motion the axle of chariot. May you not become inert, since O celebrated sages, by your resounding voices, the resplendent Self gets exhilaration. 4

Suffering from thirst, soliciting rain-water, supported by the fighter for justice in the struggle with ten senses, the sages make the inner-self radiant as the sun. The resplendent Self hears the words of the celebrated sages while they glorify him, and bestows to the fighters for the truth ample room and freedom. 5

The illustrious people find themselves like the stripped bare staves wherewith the herdman drives the cattle. The illustrious people are found defenceless. The celebrated sage, then, becomes their chief and leader. Then the fighters for justice flourish. 6

Three fertilize the world with genial moisture, three are their glorious progeny, of which the chief is the sun, casting light before them. Three communicators of warmth accompany the dawn. Verily, the celebrated sages discover them all. 7

The glory of these sages is like the splendour of the sun and their greatness is as profound as the depth of the ocean. Their course has the velocity of the wind, which can never be surpassed by anyone else. 8

They, by their wisdom, seated in the heart, traverse the hidden thousand-branched world, and the wondrous glories of the firmament, wearing the vesture spread out by the creator. 9

O wisest sage, the faultless preceptor sustains the people. That life of yours is really worth while one in which you know the secrets of cosmic light and plasma and the lustre springing from the lightning. 10

Verily, O celebrated sage, you are the son of cosmic light and plasma, born of their mind. Nature's bounties endowed with celestial fervour lay you as a fallen drop on a lotus blossom. 11

He, the sage, cognizant of both worlds (heaven and earth) endowed with many a gift, bestows thousands. He is destined to wear the vesture spun by the creator, and springs forth to life from the wondrous glories of firmament. 12

Consecrated for the sacrifice, propitiated by praises, they, the lords of cosmic light and plasma, pour their life-essence into a water jar from the midst of which uprises cosmic intelligence and from which also, they say, the intelligence of the wise sage is born. 13

O destroyers of nescience, the faultless preceptor comes to you. Welcome him with devoted minds, and he in the foremost station directs the worshipper engaged in prayer, the chanter of the hymn, the assiduous offerer of dedication and he repeats what is to be repeated. 14

May our divine and brilliant hymn, well-composed and well-sung, go forth, like a swift chariot. 1

May you keep the horses of your senses bound to the pole (of chariot) like the golden-armed resplendent soul, the possessor of adamantine will power. 4

May you wake up at the dawn like the sun, ready to perform cosmic sacrifice, and march forward with delight, like a pilgrim on his way. 5

Proceed swiftly to the battle of life and set up a new flag of your victory, O hero, in the service of mankind. 6

Through his own power, he, the sun, ascends as a source of light. It upholds the load of creation, as earth bears living creatures. 7

O fire-divine, I invoke nature's bounties, and not the demons. And I compose a hymn and complete it invoking truth and eternal law. 8

Closely around you, may you revolve your heavenly song and send your invocations to Nature's bounties. 9

The mighty Lord of Venerability beholds with a thousand eyes, the paths, wherein these streams of thoughts run. 10

He is kind of Kings, the glory of the thoughts and his is the resistless sway over all that lives. 11

May He assist us among all people and make song of envious men devoid of light. 12

May the threatening arrow of our opponent passby without harming us. May he put far from us the sins of our bodies. 13

O fire-divine, acceptor of our dedications, may you help us through our prayer ; we sing our dearest song to please him. 14

In accord with the divine cosmic forces, may the grand son of the waters—the fire-divine, be helpful to us. 15

With laudations I glorify the serpent of clouds, born of waters. He stays beneath the streams of the middle air. 16

Never may the cloud of mid-space harm us ; let not the sacrificial acts of this faithful servant be disregarded. 17

May they grant food to our people. Let our foes contending for our riches perish. 18

The leading great groups, with their fierce attacks, burn their opponents as the sun (scorches) the earth. 19

When our wives come near to us, may He, the divine creator give us brave sons. 20

May the creator find our hymn of praise acceptable and may He, who is of comprehensive understanding, be inclined to give us wealth. 21

May they, who are lavish in gifts, bestow upon us treasures, that we long for. May the bounties of heaven and earth along with the bounties of ocean listen to our prayers. May the generous creator, together with these protectresses be our sure refuge ; may he, our lord, give us riches. 22

So, may rich mountains and the flowing waters, the liberal ones, and herbs growing on the band, the pair of heaven and the earth consentient with the forest lords, and both the world-halves, pressure for us those riches. 23

May both the wide worlds consent, and the celestial ocean associated with the sun consent. May all the victorious vital principles consent, so that, who become worthy possessors of long-lasting precious wealth. 24

May our Lord, the master of all Nature's bounties such as, the lightning, the ocean, the sun, the fire, rivers, herbs and trees accept the praise we offer. May we, reclining on the bosom of vital principles, attain fertility. May they all ever cherish us with blessings. 25

May the sun and fire, with their blessing aids, be for our happiness ; may the sun and the ocean, to whom homage is offered, be for our happiness ; may the sun and moon be for our happiness, and comfort, along with prosperity ; may the sun and sustenance be for happiness in life struggles. 1

May the prosperity be for our happiness ; may the discipline be for happiness ; may the intellectual pursuits be for our happiness ; may the riches be for happiness ; may the variously-manifested law and order be for our happiness. 2

May the people of creativity be for happiness ; may the people incharge of sustenance be for our happiness ; may the wide earth, with its provisions, be for happiness. May the vast heaven and earth be for happiness ; may the mountains be for happiness ; may our pious invocations of Nature's bounties secure us happiness. 3

May the fire, with the splendour of countenance be for our happiness ; may the cosmic light and plasma, and the pair of twin-divines be for our happiness. May the noble actions of the pious be for our happiness ; may the impetuous wind blow for our happiness. 4

May the heaven and earth invoked from the earliest times, be for our happiness ; may the mid-space be for our happiness with charming appearance. May the herbs and the forest trees, be for our happiness, may the victorious Lord of the distant regions, be favourable to our felicity. 5

Let the prayer proceed from the hall of the sacrifice, to the distant sun, the rays of which cause waters to flow. The spacious earth far extends with lofty mountains studded, as if, and fire blazes on the extensive plains. 1

O powerful light-divine and plasma-divine, and the vital breath, to you I offer this new praise, as if it were sacrificial food ; one of you (plasma-divine), the invincible lord is the guide to the path of virtue, and second one (light-divine) when praised, animates men to action. 2

The movements of the gliding wind sport around, like milk-yielding kine. The springs are filled to overflowing. The mighty rain-cloud, generated in the dwelling of the lofty heaven, has been roaring in his place of residence in the midspace. 3

O brave, radiant sun, may I bring here with my song the wise ordainer, the expert who yokes dear, graceful and vigorous horses to your chariot and who baffles the wrath of the malevolent. 4

Let the offerers of adoration, engaged in pious acts, worship the Lord of cosmic vitality, in their own hall of ceremony. Praised by the leaders of sacred worship, he lavishes food upon them. This most acceptable adoration is addressed to the Lord of cosmic vitality. 5

May the seventh stream of the cosmic river, the mother of the ocean, and those rivers that flow copious and fertilizing, bestowing abundance of food, and nourishing the people by their waters, come at once together. 6

May these joyous and swift-going, cloud-bearing winds be favourable to our worship and our offspring ; let not the imperishable divine speech of wisdom ignore us ; may she be kind to us and may both jointly augment our riches. 7

May you, (O devotees), invoke the unresisting earth, and the adorable hero, the Lord, that nourishes. May you invoke the gracious Lord, the protector of our worship, the source of strength, the sustainer of old, the liberal giver of gifts to our solemnity. 8

May this our song of appreciation reach you, O vital principles, and may it reach the all-pervading wind, guardian of the embryo with his protecting faculties. May they both bestow upon me, their adorer, progeny and food ; and may you, O Lord, with all divine forces, ever cherish us with blessings. 9

O men of physical strength and men of enlightenment, let your capacious, commendable, and unobstructed chariot bring you hither. O handsome, may you, with the copious triply-combined libations (milk products, herbs and cereals), poured out for your exhilaration at our sacrifices, be delighted. 1

O men of enlightenment and possessors of strengthening food, beholders of heavenly light, preserve unblemished riches for our noble men. May you gladly, and with favourable attitude of kindness, accept our loving devotion at our solemnities, and bestow upon us riches. 2

O Lord of vital faculties, you are the giver of increasing wealth to the dedicated devotee, by whose sacred works and thoughts, you are glorified. When would you bestow upon us riches ? When would we feel secure by your appropriate protection ? 5

When, O resplendent Lord, will you appreciate our praise, and establish us, your adorers, in comfortable homes ? May your horse-like swift faculties, influenced by our protracted solemnity, convey food and wealth with brave children to our homes. 6

The resplendent sun is the upholder of the three regions like a brother. The mother earth along with her autumns, rich in plenteous food, invokes him. The mortals let not rest him at his home. 7

O divine creator, may the riches worthy of laudation come to us ; the riches that are in the bestowal of rain clouds. May the celestial protector of all, ever preserve us ; and may you, with your divine forces, ever cherish us with blessings. 8

The sun-divine has diffused the golden lustre on high skies from his halo around him ; verily, the gracious sun is to be adored since he abounds in wealth that he distributes amongst men. 1

O sun-divine effulgent as golden rays, may you rise up, and hear solicitations of devotees at the time of worship. While diffusing light over the spacious earth, bestow human enjoyment upon men. 2

May the sun-divine, the source of light and energy, be glorified with praise to whom all Nature's bounties also pay reverence. May that Lord, worthy of our salutations, relish our praises and devotion. May he always bless the enlightened devotees with all his protections. 3

The mother infinity delighting at the manifestation of the divine source of light and heat glorifies him. The supreme sovereigns, the source of cosmic light, life and law, and other divinities consentaneously sing her praises. 4

They, the householders, who are solicitous as well as dispensers of wealth mutually and together adore and sing praises of heaven and earth. May the (lightning of clouds, the fire of midspace) hear us and may the venerable mother cherish us with brilliant words of blessings. 5

May the protector of people, when entreated, consent to bestow upon us the effulgence of the sun-divine. The ardent adorer invokes repeatedly the gracious Lord for the lasting protection whilst the less ardent calls him to obtain attractive riches only. 6

May the men of wisdom and strength, when invoked, bless us with happiness. They move in measured steps to the assembly of divines to bring excellent food. May they crush the wicked, the robber, and the demoniac forces. May they completely banish all old afflictions. 7

O immortal, the seekers of eternal truth, the powerful and energetic, the men of wisdom, may you defend us in every conflict, and help us to obtain wealth of wisdom. May you accept our sweet expression of reverence and be exhilarated and satisfied, and proceed by the paths traversed by the enlightened men. 8

The flame of fire goes ahead of the fire sacrifice and accepts oblations for Nature's bounties. The dawn, as ever, goes to the west (having risen in the east). The pair of the householder and his wife proceeds to follow the path of the (morning) ritual, like two persons going in a chariot. May the assigned priest direct and celebrate our worship. 1

Preparation for food-bestowing sacred ceremony is complete. Of the two Lords of people, one, the wind, with yoked horses, is pleasantly blowing, and the other, the nourisher sun, is about to apper. May we invoke them at the break of the dawn, upon the close of the night. Let the sun rise up now in the firmament for the welfare of mankind. 2

May the divine life-giving forces now proceed on their respective paths upon the earth. May the brilliant vital principles in the wide firmament deck them. O swift-moving divines, direct your paths towards us ; may you listen to our messenger (the fire-divine), who has gone to meet you. 3

These universal adorable guardian divine powers occupy the place of common congregation at cosmic sacrifices ; O fire-divine, honour these divinities —one the giver of fortune ; other, the upholder of ever-truth— and the wisdom personified, worthy of oblations, at our work and worship. 4

O adorable leader, bring, whether from heaven or from earth, the adorable divine bounties, such as the sun, the ocean, the lightning, the fire, and the law-abider, the forces of the firmament and the pervading wind, for the good of worshippers ; and may the divine speech and the vital principles be delighted by our offerings. 5

The oblation is offered together with praises to the adorable divine powers ; may the fire-divine, in response to the desire of mortals, be present. May it give never-failing, all-benefiting riches ; and may we today be associated with the assembled divine forces. 6

Heaven and earth are now glorified by the most celebrated priests, the seekers of truth ; they glorify also the lord of ocean, the fire-divine, and the sun, who are worthy of our appreciations. May they, the conferers of joy, bestow upon us excellent nutritious food ; and may you all ever cherish us with blessings.7

May the satisfaction derived from the sacrificial performance come to us as we contemplate the glorification of the swift-moving divine powers. Whatever the lord of creation produces, may we be today there where the wealth-bestowing divine distributes. 1

May the sun, the ocean, heaven and earth, lightning and ordainer, give us that wealth which is merited by brilliant laudations. May the divine mother infinity be disposed to give us riches, which Lord of divine wind and Lord of riches may preserve ever in our keeping. 2

O cloud-bearing winds, possessors of strength, like steeds and coloured like a spotted deer, may the man, whom you protect be resolute, and strong. May the fire-divine and divine speech also defend him, and may there be none to deprive him of his riches. 3

May this Lord of cosmic plasma, the leader of the cosmic sacrifice, and the radiant lord of cosmic light and cosmic order uphold our deeds. And may the divine foeless mother infinity, earnestly invoked, convey us safe beyond evil. 4

I propitiate with offerings the ramifications of that divine attainable, all-pervading Lord, who is the showerer of benefits. May the lord of cosmic vitality, bestow upon us the magnificence of his nature ; the pair of twin-divines (the sun and moon) have come to our dwelling abounding with celestial food. 5

We invoke at the morning the fire-divine ; at dawn the Lord supreme ; at dawn the Lord of light and plasma, at dawn the pair of twin-divines ; at dawn the Lord of riches and nourishment, and universal priest ; at the morning the Lord of bliss and vitality. 1

We invoke at dawn the powerful gracious bounty, the son of mother infinity, who is the sustainer of the universe, to whom the common man, even the opulent praise and says, "give me (wealth) for my enjoyment." 2

O Lord gracious, the foremost guide to our sacred work, and faithful promiser of wealth, may you, granting our wishes, make our ceremony effective, and enrich us with wisdom and vitality. May we, O gracious Lord, be rich in leaders and followers. 3

They glorify your worship, O fire-divine, with reverence. The ministrant priest, who is near us repeating pious praise, excels everybody else. (O devotees), may you have the appreciations for resplendent Nature's bounties and may you turn the unfaithful mind towards active worship. 3

When you (O fire-divine), as a guest, repose at ease in the dwelling of the liberal worshipper, you are welcomed. He (the divine fire) is appropriately placed in the hall of sacrifice and he well-pleased, grants desirable wealth to the people who approach Him. 4

Be gratified, O fire-divine, by our worship, convey our appreciations to the sun and the vital principles. May you enhance our glory day and night on your seat, and partake in the worship. May you bring appreciations at this place to the eager light-divine and bliss-divine. 5

The most celebrated priest has been glorifying the vigorous fire-divine, yearning for wealth, that gives all subsistence. May he bestow upon us food, riches, strength. May you, O Lord with other divine forces ever cherish us with blessings. 6

The devout worshippers, seek to attain divinity, by singing praises at worship. They adore the heaven and earth also with reverences. The adorations, verily, spread like the branches of trees in all directions. 1

Let the sacrifice proceed like a swift courser. May you, O priests, with one accord, elevate your ladles, charged with butter. May you spread sacred grass to prepare for the solemn service. Let the flames, that love to meet Nature's bounties, ascend on high. 2

For your preservation, O worshippers, I invoke, first the cyclonic forces, then the pair of twin-divines, the dawn, the kindled fire-divine, the graces, the lightning, the, wind, the sustenance, Lord, supremacy of universe, the months, heaven and earth, the waters and the sun. 1

Arousing and animating with adoration, the cosmic cyclones proceed diligently with the assigned duties ; the divine lady of wisdom sits on the sacred grass. Let us invoke the intelligent and swift-moving pair of twin-divines. 2

The cosmic cyclone, the first amongst all speedy forces, it knows its function and remains in front of the chariots. It is consentient with dawns, with the sun, with the months, with the planets, and with the vital winds. 4

May the cosmic cyclone, carve out the track we travel, so that we may pass along the path of eternal order. May the fire-divine, the prime strength of natural forces hear our invocation ; may all the great Nature's bounties, which are never perturbed, hear us. 5

Borne by his beams, may the divine sun, possessed of precious treasure, filling the firmament with radiance, come hither. (While he goes away), he lulls men to slumber (in the evenings) and again arouses living beings (in the mornings). In his hands, he holds many things that make men happy. 1

May the outspread, vast and golden arms of the sun, extend unto the bounds of sky ; verily, his greatness is glorified by us. May the sun impart vigour to us. 2

May the divine sun, who is endowed with energy, and is the lord of wealth, bestow treasures upon us. May he, advancing his far-spreading lustre, bestow upon us food that feeds men. 3

These praises glorify the sun, whose tongues, the rays are pleasant, whose arms are full of wealth, and whose hands are lovely, may he bestow upon us wonderful and abundant food ; and may you, divine forces, ever cherish us with blessings. 4

Offer these praises to the vital-divine armed, as if, with firm bow and swift-flying shafts. He is the bestower of food, the invincible, the conqueror, the creator, the wielder of sharp-pointed weapons. May he hear our call. 1

He is known through his control over the beings of the earth, and through his sovereignty over those of heaven. May you, O vital divine, willingly come to our doors, that gladly welcome you, protect our progeny and heal all sickness in our family. 2

May your cosmic electric radiations, which discharged from heaven traverse the earth, pass us uninjured by. O appeaser of the wind, though you have a thousand medicaments, inflict no evil upon our babies and youths. 3

Harm us not, O Lord of cosmic vitality, abandon us not; let us not be tormented under your bondage, when you are displeased ; make us partakers of the life-promoting worship and may you, O Nature's bounties, ever cherish us with blessings. 4

We solicit from you, O divine waters, today, that pure, faultless, rain-shedding, sweet essence of the earth, which the pious worshippers have first consecrated as the beverage of resplendent Lord. 1

O divine waters, the swift-moving fire (the grandson of water) protect that wave, which is most rich in sweets and wherewith may the sun and life-giving elements be pleased. May we, devotees of Nature's bounties, share with you today your joy. 2

The divine waters, the purifiers of hundreds, rejoicing in their innate nature, pursue the paths of Nature's forces; they never violate the sacred laws of resplendent Lord. May you offer to rivers your tributes, rich in affection and love. 3

Those divine waters, whom the sun extends with his rays and, for whom the lightning has carved a path for travel—may these streams serve us and preserve our life. May you, O Nature's bounties ever cherish us with blessings. 4

May the leaders of intellectual, moral and physical realms, possessors of opulence, be exhilarated by our offerings ; may your active and powerful energies bring your transports, beneficial to mankind, towards us. 1

May we as the intellectuals strengthened with your intellectual forces and we as the moral persons with your moral stature overcome the strength of foes by our strength. May our physical forces aid us in our struggles, and helped by supreme Lord, may we overcome our adversary. 2

The water-streams, with ocean as their chief, proceed from the midst of the firmament, purify, and flow unceasingly. The resplendent, the possessor of the adamantine power, the showerer, digs channels of these rivers. May these water-streams protect me here. 1

May the water-vapours, that are in the sky, or those that condence and shower on earth, and those, whose channels have been dug, or those that have sprung up spontaneously, and those that are speeding to the ocean,—all are pure and purifying. Mav those water-streams protect me here. 2

Those, amid whom the venerable sovereign of cosmic waters passes in the middle sphere, again, the one who is discriminater of man's truth and falsehood, and those who are shedding sweet showers —all are pure and purifying. May those water-streams protect me here. 3

May they (the waters), over which their king, the venerable Lord of cosmic waters, rules, and in which the sap of bliss abides, from whom Nature's bounties receive strength and vigour, and into whom the cosmic universal fire enters —may those water-streams protect me here. 4

O solar systems, may we be free from every bond. O Lord of cosmic life, residing among Nature's bounties, may your protection extend to mortals. O Lord of cosmic light and bliss, may we partake (of your bounty). O heaven and earth, may we live (through your blessings). 1

May the cosmic light and bliss, our guardians, grant blessings and shelter to our sons and grandsons ; let us not suffer for offences committed by others ; let us not, O Lord of cosmic life, perform any act by which you may be offended. 2

The ever-prompt vital priests, soliciting Him, obtain precious wealth from the creator of universe ; may the mighty adorable protector, and all universal divine bounties be favourably disposed to us, and approve our offering. 3

Attended by a group (of priests), I worship the adorable and mighty heaven and earth with solemn ceremonies and praises. These two great ones are dear like the sons of Nature's bounties, whom ancient sages, glorifying, have enshrined in their hearts. 1

With newest hymns, may you pay reverence in the sacred hall of worship to the ancient parents (of all living beings). O heaven and earth, come to us with the celestial powers, since both of you occupy a big status. 2

O heaven and earth, you hold in your possession many treasures worth being given to the pious donor. May you give us that wealth, which comes in free abundance ; and may you all ever cherish us with blessings. 3

O guardians of our homes, may you recognize us, and provide an excellent abode to us ; whatever we ask of you, be pleased to grant it, and be the bestower of happiness on our bipeds and quadrupeds. 1

O protector of our homes, be our preserver and augmenter of our wealth, of cattle and horses. O bestower of bliss, may we, through your friendship, be exempt from decay ; be favourable to us, like a father to his sons. 2

O protector of our homes, may we, through your dear fellowship, obtain comfortable, delightful and opulent home. May you help us in preserving and earning our acquisitions, and may you along with your divine forces ever cherish us with blessings. 3

O protector of the home, remover of disease, may you, assuming all kinds of forms, be a friend to us, the granter of happiness. 1

O tawny-hued watch-dog, the child of inner truth-seeking consciousness, why do you display your teeth, bristling like lances in your mouth while barking against me. Any way, go quietly to sleep. 2

O watch-dog, retrace your way, attack the pilferer or the thief; why do you shout at the worshippers of the resplendent Lord? Why do you intimidate us? Any way, go quietly to sleep. 3

May you help in enhancing the prosperity of one who performs good actions ; and the one who performs good actions would then wish you prosperity. Why do you shout at the worshippers of the resplendent Lord? Why do you intimidate us? Any way, go quietly to sleep. 4

Let the mother sleep, let the father sleep, let the watch-dog sleep, and let the master of the house sleep, let all the kindred sleep, let all the people who are around us sleep. 5

The man who sits, the man who walks, or whosoever looks on us, of these we shut up the eyes, just as we close the doors of our house. 6

We put men to sleep through the irresistible might of the bull, the sun, with a thousand horns of rays, who rises out of the firmament. 7

The women who are lying in the courtyard, lying without a bed or stretched on portable coaches, the women decorated with auspicious perfumes, these ones and all we lull to sleep. 8

Who are these persons, the radiant, the brave, the dwellers in one abode, the offsprings of cosmic vitality, friends of men, and (who come, as if) mounted on noble steeds. 1

No one indeed knows whence they come, they and they only know each other's birth. 2

Like hawks they go together by their own sacred paths ; they mutually rival each other, roaring like the wind. 3

The wise is he who knows those white-complexioned beings (cloud-bearing winds), whom the vast midspace bears at her udders. 4

May the people, through the favours of these (cloud-bearing winds) be ever victorious, and be possessors of posterity and manly strength. 5

These cloud-bearing winds, bright in their splendour, invested with beauty, terrible by their varied power. rapidly go their way. 6

Terrible be your power, steadfast your energies, and prosperous be the company of these cloud-bearing winds. 7

Bright is your spirit, unrelenting are your minds. The sound of your irresistible forces (given by the leaves of trees) is like the songs of the minstrel prayers. 8

Ever withhold from us your blazing shaft ; let not your displeasure overwhelm us on any occasion. 9

We, the aspiring, invoke your dear names, O speedy cloudy winds, for our complete satisfaction. 10

They are bearers of bright weapons and impetuous in their haste. They deck themselves with golden ornaments, and their bodies have splendour of their own. 11

O cloud-bearing winds, pure are yourselves, pure are the oblations at the dedicated sacrifice. O observers of law and order, by the eternal truth you come to truth. You are bright by birth, and pure and sanctifying. 12

Your bright ornaments, O vital cloud-bearing winds, rest upon your shoulders, and shining necklaces are pendant on your breasts. Glittering with drops of rain, like lightning flashes, you whirl about your weapons, scattering waters. 13

O vital cloud-bearing winds, your celestial splendours spread wide; you are most adorable; you glorify your names. May you accept this thousand-fold allotment of domestic worship and household treasure. 14

If, O cloud-bearing winds, you justly appreciate the praise of the devout offerer of sacrificial food, conjoined with oblations, then promptly bestow upon us riches, comprehending excellent children,—the riches, such that no ungenerous or adversary can take away. 15

The swift-moving cloudy winds, the dispensers of waters, are fleet as coursers; they deck themselves like youths enjoying a festival; they are innocently charming as children in the precincts of their own house and are frolicksome like calves. 16

May the munificient winds, filling the beautiful heaven and earth with their glory, help us and be gracious to us; may your fatal weapon, that destroys cattle and men, remain far from us. May you turn yourselves to us, O granters of riches, with blessings. 17

Praising your universal liberality, O vital winds, the ministrant priest, occupying his proper seat, calls you. He the guardian of the zealous worshipper, and the person free from duplicity, invokes you with hymns. 18

These swift moving vital winds give pleasure to the zealous worshipper, and humble the strength of the strong men ; they protect their adorers from the angry malignant ; and they lay their severe displeasure on the wicked. 19

These cloudy winds encourage the prosperous man, and even the wandering toiler. As owners of wealth, they are pleased with you. O showerers of benefits, dissipate the darkness ; grant us children and family continuity. 20

Never, O warriors, may we be excluded from your bounty. O lords of war-chariots, never may we be left behind when you distribute it. Please give us a share in that delightful opulence, the genuine wealth, that, O bestowers of benefits, is in your possession. 21

When heroic men, filled with wrath, assemble for winning plentiful forest wealth and people of the land, then, O cloudy winds, sons of vital forces, may you be our defenders in the strife against our opponents. 22

O cloudy winds, you have bestowed on our fore-fathers many benefits ever since worthy of praise and appreciation. Only through the favour of the cloudy winds the fierce strong warrior wins in battles ; through their favour the devotees obtain food. 23

O vital winds, may our brave youth be vigorous, full of vital energy, and the giver of sustenance to people ; and through them, may we overcome all difficulties in acquiring prosperous lands. May we dwell in our own homes with you as our perpetual companion. 24

May the presiding Lord over lightning, ocean, the sun, and fire, rivers, plants, and trees, be pleased with us ; may we find shelter in the bosom of vital powers ; and may you ever cherish us with blessings. 25

O pious sages, through the strength of your sweet expression of devotion, the vital principles are exhilarated at cosmic sacrificial acts. Thereby through their strength, they cause even spacious heaven and earth to tremble and make the spring waters flow. 1

The vital principles inspire the man who sings their praises and, verily promote the thoughts of the institutor who pay homage. May you today enshrine the tender heart of the pious sages assembled at the congregation with friendly minds to share the joy. 2

None else gleams more brightly than these vital principles with their own forms, golden gauds, weapons and with all adornments, decking earth and heaven. Widely radiating, they augment and exhibit their common splendour for our good. 3

O vital principles, when we, through human frailty sin against you, may you not punish us with your blazing dart. O holy divine, let us not be exposed to that. May your most loving favour, the source of abundance, still be extended towards us. 4

Offer worship to the mighty group of bounties belonging to the celestial region, which pours down rain in common. By their greatness, they overwhelm both heaven and earth, starting from the earth, spreading into the midspace, and rising up to the distant heaven. 1

O formidable, high-spirited, quick-moving vital principles, your birth is from the illustrious cosmic vitality. Each looker on the sky is alarmed at the coming of you who are all-surpassing in lustre and strength. 2

O vital principles, being glorified may you grant abundant food to our noble citizen. May you accept complacently our earnest praise. The path you follow is in no way hurtful to living beings. May our prosperity enhance by your delightful protections. 3

O vital principles, the pious man protected by you, becomes the possessor of hundreds, protected by you he overcomes his foes and becomes the possessor of thousands : Protected by you, the sovereign destroys his enemy. O agitators, may the favours of wealth from you ever continue to be abundant. 4

I adore those offsprings of the cosmic vitality, the showerer. May the vital winds, repeatedly invoked, again come to us. May we expiate by praise whatever we have committed secretly or openly against the swift-moving vital winds, by which they could be displeased. 5

This pious praise of the bounteous vital principles has been recited. May they be gratified by this hymn, may they, the showerers of benefits, remove far from us those who hate us ; and may you and divine powers ever cherish us with blessings. 6

O desirous of drinking elixir of devotion, O leaders, your protection injures not the one whom you defend in the struggles of life. May your latest favour be granted to us. May you come quickly, eager to drink the elixir of devotion. 4

O vital principles, whose riches are co-ordinated together, may you come to partake of the sacred viands, for, I offer to you these oblations ; go not away to any other place ; —please stay on here. 5

O vital principles, rich in wealth and uninjuring, may you abide in our hearts. May you be graciously inclined to grant us riches. May you cherish the sweet elixir of devotion offered with the auspicious word "svaha" at the occasion. 6

May the vital principles yet unrevealed, decorating their forms, descend like the blue-backed swans : let the entire company gather round me like happy men rejoicing together at a solemn ceremony. 7

O vital principles, the prosperous ones, may you destroy with a consuming fatal weapon that person who wounds our feelings, and though rebuked by all, yet seeks to kill us. May he be tangled in the nooses of his own mischief. 8

O vital principles, destroyers of evils, this oblation is designed for you : may you, the devourers of enemies, with your protections, graciously accept it. 9

O bounteous vital principles, advisers of domestic worship, benefactors, come with your protections : go not away. 10

O vital principles, self-strong, far-seeing, glorious as the sun, come hither, come hither ; I invoke you for blessings at our work and worship. 11

We worship the mother of three regions, with her fragrant fame, and the augmenter of prosperity ; may I be liberated from death, like the cucumber from its stalk, but no' bereft of immortality. 12

O the sun-divine, when rising today, you declare the truth to the friendly spiritual bounties, light and bliss, that we are void of sin. May we, O mother infinite remain dear to divine powers, and attain divinity. O Lord of cosmic justice, may we, glorifying you, be dear to you. 1

O lord of light and warmth, this sun-divine, the beholder of human beings, rises to illuminate both heaven and earth. He is the guardian of all that is stationary or moveable. He moves witnessing, as if, upright acts or crooked sins of mortals. 2

O lord of light and happiness, he (the sun) from the common dwelling, harnesses his seven steeds of speedy vital energies. Dragged out of the night, the sun surveys all regions, and living creatures like a herdsman. 3

For you, O lord of light and bliss, the sweet-flavoured viands have been prepared. The sun has ascended the shining firmament, for whom Nature's bounties like the self-luminous stars, the cosmic light, the cosmic purposefulness, and the cosmic order make pathways ready with one accord. 4

These cosmic powers of light, justice and warmth are the detecters of even the hidden untruth : these unconquered sons of Infinity, the dispensers of happiness, are magnified in the temple of truth. 5

These unconquerable divine powers of light, warmth and cosmic order, with their great power, awaken even fools to wisdom. Moreover, they lead them by easy paths (to their goal), removing all iniquity. 6

They, ever vigilant with eyes, unclosed and cognizant of the things of heaven and earth, conduct the ignorant man to duty. Even in the fastmoving or flooded river, there is a limited depth. May they lead us across the shore of the vast expanse. 7

When like guardians, the mother infinity and the cosmic light and happiness confer shelter upon the liberal donor and grant sons and lineal succession, may we never precipitate such conditions as to incur the displeasure of Nature's bounties. 8

When my adversary desecrate the altar by ill-expressed praises, may he be turned out by virtuous lord, and undergo various sufferings. May the lord of cosmic order defend us from those who hate us. O both of you, the showerers of benefits, confer vast room and freedom upon the liberal donor. 9

The association of these three divine powers is of mysterious lustre. By their strength, they overcome all enmities. O showerers of benefit, through your fear, our opponents tremble. May you have mercy upon us, mighty as you are. 10

These munificent divine powers conjointly accept the pride of the worshipper. They bestow a spacious place for dwelling upon him, who, for the sake of food and excellent riches, devotes his mind to your glorification. 11

O divine lords of cosmic light and warmth, to you this adoration at sacrifices is addressed. May you take us across all difficulties, and ever cherish us with blessings. 12

O light-divine and the warmth-divine, spreading around the splendorous lustre of you two divinities, the sun rises. He beholds all existing beings and very well observes the acts of mortals. 1

O light-divine and the warmth-divine, the holy sage, the solemnizer of sacrifice, widely renowned earnestly repeats your praises. O performer of noble deeds, it is he whose devotion and actions you favour. 2

O lords of light and warmth, the bounteous giver, you are vaster than the ample earth, vaster than the glorious and expansive heaven ; you maintain beauty in plants and protect people, following the path of truth every moment. 3

I praise the splendour of the lords of cosmic light and warmth whose strength, by its mightiness, keeps heaven and earth asunder. May the days of those who do not offer worship pass without descendants. May he, who delights in selfless noble works, increase in prosperity. 4

O unperplexed, all-pervading showerers of benefits, these praises are offered to you ; of course, nothing surprising, neither any adoration worthy of you is beheld. The insincere commendations of men make them unfaithful. No secrets may be hidden from your knowledge. 5

I offer veneration to you two with praises. Whilst in trouble, I invoke you, O lords of light and warmth. May my present hymns be gratifying to you. May these prayers be acceptable to you both. 6

O divine lords of cosmic light and warmth, to you this adoration at sacrifices is addressed: may you take us across all difficulties, and ever cherish us with blessings. 7

The sun spreads his beams of splendour over all mankind in countless spaces. Shining bright by day, he is beheld the same by all,—the creator, the created—: he is glorified by his worshippers. 1

Rise up before us, O sun with your glorious white beams as horses ; declare us free from sin to Nature's bounties, such as a self-luminous star, ocean, cosmic order and fire-divine. 2

O you two, the undivided mighty heaven and earth, may you protect us who are the nobly born descendants of yours : let us not incur the displeasure of the cosmic forces, such as the ocean, the wind, nor of him, the dearest friend of mortals, the sun. 4

May you stretch forth your arms for the prolongation of our existence. May you bedew with water the pastures of our cattle. May we be worthy of honours amongst men. O ever-youthful cosmic lord of light and warmth, hear these my invocations. 5

May the sun, the ocean and the lord of cosmic order grant affluence to us and to our posterity : may all paths be easy of access unto us : and may you all ever cherish us with blessings. 6

Delighted by the praises, the radiant sun ascends from the lap of the dawns. The divine sun is the source of my joy who breaks not the universal statute. 3

He, the bright and glorious, profound with lustre, rises from the firmament, traversing long distances with shining radiance. Verily, all beings inspirited by the sun wake up and execute their assigned duties. 4

He travels along the path which the immortals have carved. He flies through the region like a hawk. We worship you with praises and oblations, O the cosmic light and bliss, when the sun has risen. 5

Ruling over the waters that are in heaven and earth, and impelled by you, the clouds assume the form of rain. May the auspiciously-manifested lord of light, the royal lord of cosmic order, the powerful lord of ocean accept our homage. 1

O sovereigns, mighty preservers of cosmic vapours, powerful lords of rivers, come to our presence. O munificent lords of light and warmth, may you send down to us from the firmament, sustenance and rain. 2

May the lord of cosmic light, warmth and the divine cosmic order, conduct us by the most practicable paths. As determined by the lord of cosmic order in relation to the liberal donor of oblations, may we, enjoying the protection of Nature's bounties, rejoice in abundance, together with posterity. 3

O the lord of light and plasma, come to our offered oblation and sprinkle our pastures with water and with viands. May you both here pour down your choicest celestial water upon our noble citizens. 4

O lords of cosmic plasma and light, this praise, pure as the devotional love, has been offered to you, and also, to you, O lord of cosmic order. May you strengthen our creative intellect and awaken our all-round faculties. May you all ever cherish us with blessings. 5

May this our propitiatory praise, accompanied by profused salutations, proceed to you, O lords of light and bliss, manifested in pairs again and again. 1

You whom the divine powers uphold for their invigoration, who are wise and excellently great and source of strength. 2

O lords of light and bliss, protectors of our dwellings, protectors of our persons, may you fulfil our intellectual aspirations. 3

May the lord of light, the destroyer of sins, and the lord of cosmic order and the gracious lord oi creation bestow upon us, today at sun-rise what we pray for. 4

May our homes be well protected. May you, O liberal ones, on your way, bear us safe over distress and sins. 5

And further, those who are self-sovereign and along with mother infinity rule over the vast domain, and whose statute is inviolate. 6

I glorify you, O lords of light, warmth and cosmic order, the destroyers of dark forces, at the time when the sun has risen. 7

May this praise be effective for unimpaired strength and for granting wealth or golden treasure. May it be good for the sages and for the fulfilment of the purpose of worship. 8

May we be dear to you, O divine virtuous lord; may we, along with pious worshippers, be dear to you, O lord of light; may we obtain nourishment and happiness. 9

Many are such divine powers who are radiant as the sun, who have fire-like flames and are augmenters of worship and those who direct the three universal sacrificial ceremonies with overwhelming strength. 10

They establish the year, and then the month and the day, the sacred worship, the night, and the holy verse. They, the lords of bliss, light and cosmic order, enjoy unrivalled might. 11

Therefore, today at sunrise, we solicit you with hymns for wealth which you carry, O the lords of bliss, light and cosmic eternal laws. 12

May we, as well as those men who are the learned seekers, be in the enjoyment of the highest felicity, confirmed by you. You, true to eternal order, have been manifested through eternal order, and are the augmenter of eternal order and extremely averse to untruth. 13

That beautiful orb of the sun rises on the near skirts of the sky, as the swift, celestial, white-coloured steed bears it along, to be seen by all and sundry. 14

For the good of all, the seven sister-bays convey the sun, the lord of everyone, moving or stationary, traversing the whole world in his chariot. 15

That God-ordained bright eye of the universe rises : may we behold it for a full hundred autumns and may we live a hundred autumns. 16

May the unconquerable, resplendent lord of light and bliss, cherished by our praises, come to enjoy our loving devotion. 17

Gentle lords of light and bliss, destroyers of foes, come from celestial dwelling, and drink the elixir of loving devotion. 18

O lords of light and bliss, leader of ceremonies, the augmenter of eternal order, may you come propitiated by our homage and drink the elixir of sweet devotion. 19

O lord of men, I approach to adore your cosmic chariot with dedicated mind and oblations of good intentions. I address this praise to be an envoy, to arouse your favour just as a son addresses his parents. 1

Kindled by us, the fire-divine blazes; the extremities of the darkness are seen nigh at hand; in the east is perceived the glory of the rising sun, and the banner of the dawn, the daughter of heaven. 2

O ever-true pair divines, the sincere invoker is singing your praises and the chanter glorifying you with hymns. May you come by the paths that you are wont to travel; come on the chariot which shines with the celestial light and is laden with rich treasure. 3

O pair divines, lovers of sweetness, desirous of wealth, I with full reliance invoke you when the devotional prayers have been expressed forth. May your stout horses bring you hither, and drink the sweet juice of love poured out by us. 4

O divine pair, render my sincere and undisturbed adoration, offered for the acquisition of riches, efficacious; may you preserve my all-round faculties in the time of life struggles. O protectors of pious acts, bestow upon us wealth for our sincerity. 5

Protect us, O divine powers, in our intellectual pursuits; may our procreative power fail not. Possessing sons and grandsons through your favours, and distributing desired riches as well as enjoying ample wealth, may we be blessed with a life, dedicated to the service of God. 6

This treasure given by us has been placed, O lovers of sweetness, before you, like (an envoy) who has come to the presence (of a prince) for (acquiring his) friendship : come to our presence with benevolent thoughts, accepting devotional expressions of regard in the society of men. 7

Nourishers of all, the chariot of you two, devoted to a common purpose, traverses the seven flowing (streams) : the excellent horses harnessed by Nature's bounties, who carry you with speed in the car, are never exhausted. 8

Be propitious to those who are affluent in spiritual thoughts, who invest wealth for the sake of wealth : they who encourage a kinsman with kind commendations, generously distributing wealth of horses (to fellow beings). 9

Ever-youthful twin-divines, hear today my invocation : come O twins, to the dwelling where spirituality is invoked : grant wealth (to the devotee) : elevate the learned seeker : and may you all ever cherish us with blessings. 10

O radiant pair of twin-divine powers, full of vital energies, destroyers of distress, come hither, propitiated by the praises of your adorer, and accept the devotee's sincere offerings. 1

The exhilarating sacred offerings have been prepared for you ; come quickly to accept them. Please pay no heed to the invocations of our opponents ; please do listen to us however. 2

Your chariot, O twin-divines, laden with a hundred blessings, in which you ride with the maiden dawn, is speeding to us across the regions, swift as thought. 3

When the chanter, seeking to propitiate you two divines, raises his voice and sings loudly expressing his devotion for you, like a herbal juice crushed between the stones. O charming ones, the pious worshipper brings you back towards himself, by his oblations. 4

Verily, the spiritual nourishment you provide is wonderful. You liberate the triply-bonded sage ; who has been dear to you, and who craves for your protection, whenever entrapped in the dark caves of ignorance. 5

Such has ever been your benevolence, O twin-divines, that any old famished person, who along with sincere prayers, lives to your dictates gets in requital, by your blessings, a young body hardly subject to decay. 6

When faithless friends desert the leader or saviour, who is devoted to both of you and rely upon you, in the midst of the ocean of disress, you bring him back to shore. 7

You have been granting help even to the wicked, when he is exhausted, and have been listening to the lazy, when invoked. Both of you make the barren cow pour forth milk like water, and you endow her with strength, O twin-divines, by your cares and efforts. 8

Your devoted poet, waking at dawn with sweet thoughts, chants poems of praises. Let the cow nourish him with food of her milk. May you along with other divine powers ever cherish us with blessings. 9

May your golden cosmic chariot of creation, drawn by vigorous powers, overwhelming the heaven and earth with illumination, and following the track of the cosmic waters, come to us with glowing fellies, and laden with nourishing food. Surely it is the protector of men and the conveyer of food. 1

This cosmic chariot (of the sun) extends along five regions. It is furnished with three benches, and harnessed with automation. May it come hither. O twin-divines, directing your course, proceed, wherever you go and whithersoever you go, to bless devout mortals. 2

The daughter of the sun, the dawn, makes choice of your splendour at the approach of night. You defend the devout worshipper by your cures and efforts, when the sacred warm offerings proceed to you to secure your protection. 4

O chariot-borne, clothed in radiance, may you come to our dwellings in the yoked chariot. O twin-divines, while the dawn is breaking, please come to participate in our sacrifice for our well-being and purification. 5

O leaders of rites, may you hasten today to our sacrifice, like thirsty cattle, as if longing for the radiant elixir. The pious men propitiate you with devotional intellect in all places. Let not other devout worshippers detain you. 6

You always rescue the saviour sage, abandoned in the midst of ocean and bear him to shore by your undaunted, undecaying, unwearied and unharnessed vital energies. 7

O ever-youthful twin-divines, may you hear today my invocation ; may you, O twin-divines, come to the dwelling where the oblation is prepared. May you grant wealth to the offerer, and elevate the learned seeker (to a high stature) and may you all ever cherish us with blessings. 8

O all-adored twin-divines, come to our place of worship on this earth where a seat has been reserved for you, as if exclusively a possession of yours. A swift, broad-backed horse awaits you (for your journey), on which you could be seated as firmly as in a dwelling. 1

This most delightful euology awaits you ; the sacred offering has been heated in the cauldron which, after having reached you, would in its turn pour down its contents in the form of rain and fill up the oceans and rivers. May both of you participate in this rite as it were two well-matched shining horses yoked to a chariot. 2

O twin-divines, to whatever places you may descend from heaven, whether amidst the tall tress, or amongst men, or sitting on the summit of the mountain, may you be the bearers of food to the pious donor of oblation. 3

O divine twin-powers, please delight yourself in plants and waters, whenever the seers offer you and you find they suit you. May you enrich us with treasures in abundance, and favour us, as you have been favouring all couples from eternity. 4

O twin-divines, listen to the prayers of the sages, and look favourably thereon. Please come to the worship of this devotee and let him enjoy your most delightful favour. 5

O twin-divines, this adoration, this praise is for you. May you be gratified, O showerers of blessings, by this laudation. We pray that these addressed euologies reach you. May you all ever cherish us with blessings. 7

The night retires before the dawn, the sister of twin-divines. The dark night leaves the path clear for the radiant sun. Let us call upon one, who is affluent in spiritual power (horses), and affluent in divine wisdom (cows). May you keep day and night far from us the arrow-like malevolence. 1

May you, bearing rich treasure in your chariot, come to the mortal, the generous-giver. May you keep afar from us famine and sickness. O lovers of sweetness, may you preserve us day and night. 2

May your vigorous (horses, i.e. beams), in search of bliss bring hither your chariot at the earliest flash of morning. O twin-divines, conduct towards us your radiating, wealth-laden cosmic chariot, with rays rich in moisture. 3

May you come to us with that cosmic chariot, which conveys you, O ever-true lords of men. It is three-seater, laden with wealth, and is the precursor of day. It traverses the sky, encompassing the entire space. 4

You exempt the old and famished from decay; you provide a courser to a lame. You extricate a detached sage from torture and darkness; you encrown the exiled prince, back to the throne. 5

O twin-divines, this adoration, this praise is for you. May you be gratified, O showerer of blessings, by these laudations. May these eulogies, addressed to you, reach you; and may you all ever cherish us with blessings. 6

Come, O ever-true divines, on your brilliant chariot, rich in abundant wealth of kine and horses. All praises gather round you. Your resplendence is enviable, and your form graceful. 1

O ever-true divines, along with Nature's other bounties as your associates, come here to us in your chariot. Ours is an ancestral friendship and hence a common relation between you and us. May you acknowledge this affinity. 2

Verily, the praises awaken the twin-divines, and so the kindred prayers the celestial dawns. The sages, addressing these laudations to the adorable heaven and earth, invoke, the ever-true divines hither. 3

While paying tributes to Nature's bounties, we have gone across to the opposite shore of this state of darkness. The worshipper invokes twin-divines, the multifunctional and multifarious, the first-born and immortal. 1

O ever-true divines, the invoker, the dear priest of devotees, he, who offers worship and repeats praise, has taken seat. O twin-divines, may you come near, and partake of the libation. I, with food in hand, invoke you to our place of worship. 2

With invocations to Nature's bounties, we get ready for their welcome. O showerers of blessings, be propitiated by this pious laudation. Despatched like a speedy messenger, the pious most worshipper arouses you, glorifying you with hymns. 3

The learned seekers approach you in pursuit of food. May you two ever-true divines grant to our benevolent nobility lasting glory, and roof to us. 5

Such worshippers, as are non-exploiters, and benefactors of men approach you, like carts to the farm. They prosper by their own strength, and inhabit an excellent abode. 6

The dawn, the daughter of heaven, has flashed; she comes, showering her majesty in accordance to the eternal law. She scatters evils and odious darkness. And thus she illumines the paths to be trodden by the most enlightened sages. 1

Awaken us today to high and happy fortune, to great prosperity. O dawn, divine benefactress, promote us and give us manifold and splendid riches and reputation among mortals, fostering prosperous progeny. 2

Enjoy these lovely ever-lasting splendours of dawns bright with their varied colours. Gracefully they come, and in their honour, the divine rites have been instituted, filling the firmament, they spread around. 3

She yokes her chariot far away and visits swiftly the lands to give light to all the five classes of men, witnessing works and ways of men. This daughter of heaven is the beloved partner of all living beings. 4

She is the companion of the sun, the distributress of good, the possessor of wonderful wealth. She rules over treasures of every kind, and is praised through hymns by the sages. She is a reckoner of our life-span (that diminishes day by day), the mistress of opulence, and as she rises, she is glorified by the fire-institutors. 5

The bright and wondrous steeds of varied colours, yoked to the car of dawn, are visible. She advances, radiant in her multi-mobile chariot, and brings, shining treasure for her people. 6

True with the truthful, great with the great, divine with the divine power, holy with the holy, she pierces through the rigidity of gloom and displays the vast treasures of wisdom. The true seekers cherishingly long for the dawn to appear. 7

Bestow upon us, O dawn, riches comprising wealth, vigour, abundant food, and progeny. Protect our sacred benevolent works from evil men's reproaches, and may you ever cherish us with blessings. 8

The sun-divine, the leader of all (in the solar system) sends in forward directions his immortal, all-benefiting light. In the form of the eye of all Nature's bounties, he becomes the source of creativity. The dawn has made all the regions visible. 1

I see the paths, innocuous and glorious, leading to divine powers. The banner of dawns is unfurled in the east, and she moves westward, rising to high altitudes. 2

Many are the days that have dawned before the rising of the sun, on which you, O dawns, have been beheld like a wife approaching a husband, never to be deserted. 3

Those ancient sages, our ancestors, observant of truth, rejoicing together with Nature's bounties, discover the light, that is hidden in darkness; and with impulses of truth, are able to generate the dawn. 4

Meeting together on a common calamity, they concur, without contending among themselves; they break not eternal statutes of Nature, and without offence to anyone, they proceed with the light (of dawn or inner conscience, thus recovered). 5

O auspicious dawns, the most celebrated devotees, waking at morn, praise you and glorify with hymns. Dawns are leaders of kine and queen of all viands. May you come first to us, O well-born dawns. 6

The dawns, the object of the sincere invocations of the worshipper, when appear, are glorified by the most pious devotees. Please bestow upon us riches, for which you are so well-known. May you all ever cherish us with blessings. 7

Dawns shine radiant in the proximity of the sun, like a youthful lady, who animates all beings to activity. The fire-divine is to be kindled for the good of men. She gives light that dispels all obstructing dark forces. 1

Advancing towards all, and spreading widely, the dawn rises; and clothed in pure and brilliant vesture, she beams forth with golden colours and lovely radiance, she shines as mother of speech, and as the guide of days, she illumines. 2

The auspicious dawn, the eye of Nature's bounties, mounts on her white and beautiful courser. The dawn, characterised by her beams, is beheld by everyone and mighty over all, she comes forth with wondrous treasure. 3

O dawn, you are the possessor of wealth worth having and you keep our adversaries far from us. May this dawn render the cow-pastures free from peril and drive away those who bear ill-feelings towards us. May you, O opulent, bring treasures to us and bestow wealth on him who praises you. 4

O divine dawn, illumine us with your most excellent beams, prolong our life and bestow food upon us. You are adored by all, for you possess affluence consisting of cattle, horses and chariots. 5

O nobly-born daughter of heaven, may you, whom the most pious worshippers magnify with well-thought-of considerations, bestow upon us brilliant and infinite wealth, and may you ever cherish us with blessings. 6

The earliest emblems of dawn are visible now; her rays are spreading on high firmament. O dawns, in your descending chariot, vast and resplendent, you bring such wealth to us, as makes us happy. 1

The well-kindled fire flames up everywhere, and the priests are chanting hymns to welcome her. The divine dawn rises up, driving away all the evil glooms by her lustre. 2

These luminous beams of dawn are seen in the east, sending out lustre as they radiate around. She heralds the coming of the sun, and impels you for performing fire-ritual and dedications. With her appearance the odious glooms are driven far away. 3

The affluent daughter of heaven is perceived by all creatures. All men can see the luminous dawn as she ascends her chariot, full of wealth and viand, drawn onward by her easily yoked horses. 4

O affluent dawn, actuated by good intentions, we and our nobles greet you today. O luminous dawn, soften the earth with sumptuous oil and may you ever cherish us with blessings. 5

Dawns have disclosed the pathways of men, awaking the five classes of human beings. She has shed light with her lustrous impregnation ; the sun makes heaven and earth manifest with radiance. 1

The dawns send their bright rays to the ends of the sky; they advance like people arrayed for battle. Your rays, O dawns, dispel darkness; they diffuse light as soon as the sun spreads out his arms. 2

Supra-resplendent, the opulent dawn, has risen; she brings forth food that promotes our welfare; the divine daughter of heaven, most vigilant, bestows treasures upon fire-experts. 3

Grant to us, O dawn, as much wealth as you bestow upon your adorers, when praised by them; you, whom your worshippers welcome with clamour, as loud as the bellowing of a bull at the time, when you set open the doors of the mountains. 4

Inspiring every individual devout with a desire for wealth, addressing to us the words of truth, diffusing the light of morning, bestow upon us understanding fit for the acquirement of riches; and may you all ever cherish us with blessings. 5

The pious-most worshippers are the first to awaken the dawn with their songs. The dawn makes the two regions (of heaven and earth) part asunder and clearly shows the world. 1

Giving fresh life, when she casts away the darkness, this dawn rises with new-born lustre. Youthful and unrestrained, she comes forward and manifests the light of the sun and the sacred fire. 2

May the auspicious dawns shine on us for ever with wealth of kine, of horses, and of brave children. May you, shedding moisture, and yielding everywhere abundance, ever cherish us with blessings. 3

The daughter of heaven is everywhere seen, advancing and sending forth her lustre. She drives away the deep darkness, so that objects may be visible to eye. She is the kind guide of every man, when she diffuses light. 1

At the same time, the sun sends forth his rays, and while ascending, renders the planets luminous. So, O dawns, upon your manifestation, as well as, that of the sun, may we attain the share of divine sustenance allotted to us. 2

O Lord of resplendence and venerability, bestow upon our people and family ample comforts for the celebration of sacred work and worship. May we subdue in conflicts such evil-minded persons as may seek to injure him who has been long engaged in your service. 1

O Lord of resplendence and venerability, one of you is titled supreme sovereign, and one self-sovereign. You are mighty and most opulent. All Nature's bounties in the highest heaven, showerers of blessings, have combined supreme vigour and supreme strength in you. 2

O Lord of resplendence and venerability, you break open by your strength the barriers of waters. You establish the divine sun as the Lord in heaven. In the exhilaration of the intelligence-promoting elixir, you replenish the dry beds of the rivers with water. May you render our intellects purposeful. 3

With all humility, the ministering priest invokes you for the begetting of peace and rest; and we, your worshippers, invoke you, who are entitled to our respectful homage, lords of both celestial and terrestrial treasures. 4

O lord of energy and lord of plasma, inasmuch as you have created by your might all these beings of the world, the sun divine honours the Lord of plasma for prosperity, whilst the other, the fierce lord of energy, associated with the vital elements acquires glory. 5

May the high worth of the venerable Lord shine preeminent. These two (householder and his wife) have very much realized His power and might. The one (Lord of resplendence) subdues the destructive adversary, whilst the same lord, as Lord of venerability with His even few blessings furthers the comforts of many a man. 6

O Lord of resplendence and venerability, sins do not contaminate, difficulties do not assail, and distress does not afflict that mortal any time, whose worship you, divines, approve and whom you bless. No adversity inflicts any injury on such a mortal. 7

O Lord of resplendence and venerability, leader of sacred ceremonies, may you come to bless us with your divine protections. If you are pleased with us, hear our invocations and grant (our wishes). Verily, your friendship, your affinity, is the source of happiness. 8

In one of your phases, you destroy evil and conflicts, whilst in the other, you maintain the holy laws. We call on you, O showerer of blessings, with praises. May you bestow upon us, O Lord of resplendence and venerability, protection and felicity. 9

O Lord of resplendence and of venerability, Lord of solar rays, and ordainer of eternal laws, may you grant us glory and spacious shelter. May the beneficient lustre of mother infinity and the praises of the divine creater, the promoter of law be innocuous to us. 10

O sovereign Lord of resplendence and of venerability, I invite you with reverence and homage to bless our sacred works. We offer continuously, with the butter-ladle in our hands, oblations of varied forms to you. 1

Your vast kingdom of heaven gratifies the earth with rain. You bind the sinner with invisible bonds, not made of any rope. May the wrath of our lord of venerability pass away from us. May the Lord of resplendence create for us a wide field of work. 2

May you render the worship, offered amid the assemblies, fruitful; may the prayers, uttered by the worshippers, be successful. May God-sent riches come to us and may you also favour us with ever increasing enviable protection. 3

May this, my song, earnesly offered by me, reach the Lord of resplendence and venerability and win for me sons and grandsons. May we be affluent with precious gems and offer our homage to Nature's bounties; may you all ever cherish us with blessings. 5

I offer you, O Lord (resplendent and venerable, both) my adorations, uninterrupted by the evil-minded persons; and present the libation to you. I offer my devotional love that shines like a dawn, and is an embodiment of affection. May He, in both the capacities, be near us and guard us at the struggle against distress. 1

In the event of a conflict between evil forces and us and in those contests in which bright (weapons) of worldly temptations fall upon our banners (of justice), may you, O Lord of resplendence and venerability both, destroy the evils with your shaft, route them out and scatter in all directions. 2

The divine celestial elixir is self-lucid and endowed with the blessings of Lord of resplendence and venerability at sacred places of worship,—our Lord of venerability sustains the mankind, distinct and sundered (according to vice and virtue) and the other one slays formidable evil forces. 3

By the greatness (of our venerable Lord) are the births of the steller bodies. He puts the vast heaven and earth in their position. It is He, who puts the glorious sun and beautiful constellations to their two-fold task and spreads out the earth. 1

And I, with my own heart, ask: "When shall I be one in Him, in my Lord?" Would He ever accept my dedicated offerings? Also: "When shall I, through the ecstasy of joy experience His gracious presence before me?" 2

Desirous of beholding you, O venerable Lord, I inquire what my sin is. I go to the wise in quest and seek their advice; all the sages, verily, say to me the same—"this Lord, verily, is displeased with you." 3

O virtuous Lord, what has been my great sin that you should seek to penalise your loyal and friendly worshipper? Tell me soon, O resplendent Lord so that repentent and freed from sin, I quickly approach you with deep veneration. 4

May you free us from bonds, inherited from our forefathers, and from those, for which we are ourselves responsible. O sovereign Lord, liberate me, the most celebrated and penancing self, from my animal passions, like a calf set free from its tether. 5

O virtuous Lord it is not our own choice, but our hard environments that betray us. It is the vice of intoxication, wrath, gambling and carelessness. And again, it is the handicap of the ill-company of the elder with thc young. Even a dream is provocative to falsehood. 6

Liberated from sin, may I perform diligent service like a dedicated servant to the divine showerer of blessings, the sustainer of the world. May He, the sagacious Lord, give intelligence to the unwise. May the sagacious Lord guide the worshipper on the path of prosperity. 7

May this adoration, O self-sustained Lord, be heartily appreciated. May we succeed in retaining what we have earned and be able to acquire more through your grace, and may you (with all your divine powers) cherish us with blessings. 8

The most venerable Lord cuts a pathway out for the radiant sun and sets free the waters of the rivers, generated in the firmament. He does it in no time in most natural way as the mare rushes in race in order. He makes great channels for the days to follow. 1

The wind is like your breath, which gives out sounds through the region like an animal that seeks his fodder in pastures. O most venerable Lord, manifested between the vast and spacious heaven and earth, are all the glorious forms that delight you. 2

The efficient, spies of the most venerable Lord, who are sent forth upon their errand, survey the well-formed and well-fashioned two world-halves and they also behold the persons who are truthful, who are poets, well-versed in worship, and are genius and who offer prayers to the Lord. 3

The wise and intelligent venerable Lord, while unfolding the mysteries of knowledge to me, His intelligent and diligent disciple, told me by way of instruction thus: The imperishable divine speech has thrice-seven appellations. 4

In Him invisibly rest three regions, and in Him are confided the three earths, with six seasons. The most adorable sovereign Lord has made this golden sun undulating like a pendulum in the sky and diffusing the glorious light. 5

The spotless dawns with fair bright days have broken, and shining radiantly, obtain the vast light from the sun; desirous to recover it they obtain their wealth of cattle, and the eternal streams of water subsequently issue for their good. 4

O Lord of resplendence and of motivation, those divine powers, with truth in their minds, assiduous in the discharge of their own duties, bring to you a chariot of heroes, and present to you the lords, the viands. 5

May those munificent lords, who give us heavenly light, and confer upon us the gifts of cattle, horses, treasures and gold, overcome the enemies in battles with their cavalry and infantry. 6

We, the pious-most seekers, exerting all our power-like horses, and soliciting food and strength, invoke with laudations Lord of resplendence and of motivation, for our aid; may you all ever cherish us with blessings. 7

The venerable worshippers, by promptly and frequently adoring Lord of motivation with reverence, have been free from reproach. They now invoke dawns and the sun also to gain the favour of Lord of motivation and for the preservation of the embarrassed mankind. 1

O Lord of resplendence and of motivation, preservers of mankind, eager as envoys, may you not be ill-disposed towards us and do us harm. Please carry us safe through many months and years. Our sincere praise, addressed to you, solicits happiness and excellent wealth. 2

The intelligent, bright Lord of motivation is glorious with the yoked cosmic steeds. He favours those men who are well-fed and abound in riches. They are of one mind, ever ready to worship Him, and are the leaders of such pious ceremonies as are productive of excellent progeny. 3

O Lord of resplendence and of motivation, acceptors of the sweet elixir of loving devotion, as far as your individual power and strength permit you, and so far as men whose eyes have vision behold. May you sit here in the assembly, and O the enjoyer of bristling elixir, drink with us. 4

May Lord of resplendence and of motivation come together hitherward in a car, harnessed with yoked steeds. This prime of the sweet beverage has been offered to you. Please be delighted, and liberate us from sin. 5

O Lord of resplendence and motivation, gracious minded, come to our presence and drink the sweet beverage offered to you. Please come with the speed of a hundred and a thousand yoked horses. 6

We, the pious-most seekers, exerting all our power like horses and soliciting food and calling on you with strength, invoke with laudations the Lord of resplendence and of motivation for our aid. May you all ever cherish us with blessings. 7

O wind-divine, drinker of the heavenly elixir and bounteous giver, come to us specially as your thousands of cosmic yoked steeds drive you. I offer you the exhilarating viands. You have the prior claim in this drink amongst all Nature's powers. 1-2

O wind-divine, come to us with those speedy waves, the yoked steeds, with which you reach the devotee, offering homage in his own home, and bestow upon us wealth and children along with kine and horses. 3

May we overcome our evils in the life's struggle through the aid of our brave senses, and may we be the destroyers of adversaries by the aid of such pious fellowmen, who are the exhilarators of the Lord of resplendence and of motivation, the reciters of the divine hymns and conquerers of formidable foes. 4

May you come, wind-divine, to our solemn worship with the yoked forces which are in hundreds and thousands. May you be exhilarated at our ceremony, and may you all ever cherish us with blessings. 5

O Lord of resplendence and fire-divine, may you be pleased today by this pious and newly composed praise. Repeatedly we invoke you both as you are worthy of invocation. You are the best bestower to give food promptly upon him who solicits you. 1

You two, O the demolishers of hostility, are desired by all. You grow together, increasing in vigour, O Lords of strength-giving food, may you grant us substantial invigorating nourishment. 2

Those leaders, offerers of homage, who, desiring your favour, celebrate the sacrifice with holy ceremonies, hasten to worship you, like horses to a battle-field, and repeatedly invoke the Lord of resplendence and the fire-divine. 3

The pious sage, seeking your favour, glorifies you with praises for the sake of enjoying formerly acquired riches, accompanied by celebrity. O Lord of resplendence and fire-divine, destroyers of evils, possessors of punitive justice, exalt us with new bounties. 4

When two large, mutually defiant hosts, emulous in corporal vigour, contest, may you destroy the godless in favour of the god-fearing and in favour of the person who pours out devotional sentiments. 5

May you come to show your loving kindness, O Lord of resplendence, and fire-divine, to our place of loving devotion. You never despise us any time and therefore I propitiate you with constant sacred offerings. 6

O fire-divine, kindled with reverence, may you invite the natural forces of light, water and lighting to bless us. May you forgive whatever sin we have committed and may the ordainer and mother infinity drive away the evils from us. 7

This special praise, O Lord of resplendence and fire-divine, proceeds copiously from one, your worshipper, as rain from clouds. 1

Hear, O Lord of resplendence and fire-divine, the invocation of the worshipper; accept his adoration; O sovereign Lords, may you give him success in his intellectual pursuits. 2

O Lord of resplendence and fire-divine, the leader of people, subject us not to sinfulness, not to torture, nor to the reviler. 3

Desiring protection, we offer profuse reverence and praises to the Lord of resplendence and fire-divine, with sincerity of thoughts and words. 4

Utter destroyers of nescience, with all joy, may you come hither, while you are being worshipped with prayers, hymns and songs. 11

Destroy with your fatal weapons the mortal, who is malignant, the intellectual devil, the tormenter, rapacious ; destroy him, like an earthen pitcher of water. 12

Stream of river, the current of inner conscience, with fostering flow comes forth for our sure defence, as a fort of iron ; the river sweeps away in her majesty and might all other waters as a charioteer (collecting the passengers). 1

The stream of inner conscience is pure in her course, flowing from the mountains to the ocean ; she understands the requisites of a dam-builder and distributes riches among many existing creatures, milking out for them butter and milk. 2

He, (the brotherly source of the stream), friendly to men, continuously swells up in the midst of ladles (i.e. the region of thoughts), even in his childhood ; he is a showerer of benefits to the performers of sacrifices. He bestows upon the affluent worshippers vigorous progeny and purifies their persons for the reception of their bounties. 3

May the auspicious and gracious stream of consciousness hear our praises at this worship. When approached with reverence and with all humility, she is most liberal to them whom she loves in providing the riches she possesses. 4

O the stream of consciousness, these offerings are presented to you with adoration. May you acknowledge this and accept our praises, and place under your kind care. May we ever recline on you as a traveller under shelter-tree. 5

O blessed stream of consciousness, the pious-most seeker has set open the two doors (front and back) of the place of worship. O bright stream, be magnified and give strength to him who glorifies you ; may you all ever cherish us with blessings. 6

O the pious-most seeker, may you chant a powerful hymn in the glory of her who is the most powerful spiritual stream of consciousness, amongst so many other streams. Worship, O seeker of truth, with mighty effective poems, the spiritual stream of divine light which flows through both the realms, terrestrial and celestial (i.e. physical and supramental). 1

O beautiful spiritual stream of divine light, by your blessing people get both kinds of nourishment, physical and supramental. May you be pleased, O protectress, to be considerate to us. May you, the friend of the vital breaths, bestow riches on them, who are affluent in devotion. 2

May the auspicious stream of divine light bestow spiritual fortune upon us. May the faultless and active stream, the giver of spiritual sustenance, think of us. You have been already glorified by people of divine vision. Now please be glorified by a seeker of truth. 3

We, the unmarried ones, liberal in generosity, invoke the brotherly source of divine enlightenment, with a desire to have wives, and with longings for children. 4

With your those waves, O brotherly source of divine enlightenment, which are like honey and butter, please be our protector. 5

May we recline upon the protuberant breast of the spiritual stream of divine knowledge for the enjoyment of food and company of children. 6

At the great public activity of sacred work on earth, where the dedicated leaders of men are engaged with joy and where the invocations to Lord of resplendence are uttered, may the Lord descend prior to any one else from the heaven for exhilaration with all swiftness, as if, on a speedy horse. 1

Since Lord supreme has kindly accepted our homage, O friend, let us solicit His divine protection. May we commit no offence to Him, He being the showerer of benefits, ever our benefactor, even from long distances, as a father to son. 2

I have the privilege of glorifying with reverence and homage the most excellent and benevolent Lord of supreme knowledge. May my praise, worthy of His reputation, reach Lord of resplendence, who is, verily, the lord of godly actions performed by His devotees. 3

May that Lord supreme who brings profues blessings and is most dearly loved, be seated in our hearts with His grace. We all crave for heroes and spiritual wealth. May He bear us safe beyond all evil forces, that vex us. 4

May we receive from the first-born immortals the appropriate sustenance, necessary for our existence. Let us invoke the Lord supreme, who is enemy to none, is clear-voiced and the Holy One of the households. 5

O performers of the sacrifice, may you give oblation of the sparkling pink milk for the king of the land. He knows much better the resources of getting his dues than the deer in search of drinking water. The resplendent king goes there daily to procure his share and revenue from his people of the state. 1

The pleasant enjoyments, you, the resplendent prince, have been receiving from early days. You even now desire to have them every day. O prince, for the gratification of your heart and for the satisfaction of your mind, these tokens of homage have been provided to you, with a request that you be pleased to accept them and enjoy. 2

As soon born, O resplendent prince, you have been receiving all the homages for your invigoration. Your Queen mother, from the earliest days, has been proclaiming your great future prospects. As you advance in age, your reputation goes to fill the vast firmament, since you have gained in battle treasures for the good of enlightened persons. 3

When you encourage us to fight against mighty and arrogant miscreants, we shall surely overcome them, howsoever, they be proud of the strength of their arms. O resplendent prince, when you, along with your men (soldiers), fight against them, we shall, verily, triumph aided by you in that glorious war. 4

I proclaim the exploits of the by-gone days of the resplendent prince and also the recent achievements of him, the bounteous. Against the illusive strategies of the enemy, he has succeeded and thereon, he becomes the sole enjoyer of divine grace. 5

O Lord, your two phases, one of resplendence and the other of omnipresence, have made the spacious world worthy of cosmic sacrifice generating the sun, the dawn and the cosmic fire. You, as the leaders of the sacrificial rites, have baffled the strategies of the steller giants. 4

O Lord of resplendence and pervasion, you have demolished nine and ninety strong cities, the abodes of terrible dark clouds. You slay at once without resistance the hundred thousand brave soldiers of the army of the shrouding clouds. 5

This ample laudation is meant to exalt the Lord of res plendence and the Lord omnipresent, the mighty, the wide-striding and the one endowed with strength. To you I offer praise at the solemn synod. O all-pervading Lord, may you pour food on us in our army camps, O Lord of resplendence. 6

I offer, O the all-pervading Lord, the oblation placed before you with the pronouncement of the syllable VAṢAT. O the one with a halo of light, be pleased with my offering. May this poem of praise exalt you. May you all cherish us with blessings. 7

With the divine light preceding (i.e. uttering the syllable A-U-M), speak out three speeches (i.e. the verses of the Rk. Yajuh, and Saman), which milk out sweet honey from the udder. Cloud, the showerer, having quickly manifested, roars loudly (like a bull) engendering the infant, the embryo of the plants. 1

May He who augments the plants, augments the waters and who rules with His divine magnanimity over the whole earth, give us shelter of three elementary types (i.e. of weather, food and clothes) and all sorts of felicity. May He grant us the desired light at three seasons. 2

One form (of the cloud-divine) is like a barren cow, and the other is potent; and he takes whatever form he desires. The mother (earth) receives milk from the father (sky), thence the father is nourished and thence the son (the living creature). 3

In whom all the steller bodies exist; in whom the three worlds abide; from whom waters flow in three dimensions : three water-shedding masses of clouds pour the waters, all derived from the same mighty one (the cloud-divine). 4

The frogs, like scholars of the divine knowledge, observants of their vows, as if hibernating for the entire year, chant praises aloud impelled by the cloud-divine. 1

When the waters from the upper region fall upon these frogs, hibernating in a pond, completely dry like a leather bag, suddenly is heard the concerted croaking of the frogs, like the bellowing of cows on approach of their calves. 2

When the rainy season has arrived, and rains have set up, then one frog meets another, thirsty and longing, and croaking like a child expressing its joy of welcome to his father with inarticulate ejaculations. 3

Each one fondingly congratulates the other, as if, whilst they are all revelling in the forth-coming of rain; moistened by the rain, when the frog springs forward, the speckled frog joins greetings with the green one. 4

When one of you repeats the croaking language of another, like the pupils mutually repeating the lesson given by their teacher, and when you eloquently converse, while leaping upon the waters, your every limb throbs and swells. 5

Whilst one is bellowing like a cow, the other bleats like a goat; whilst one is speckled, the other is green. They bear one common name and yet they are of different colours. And whilst talking they modulate their voices differently. 6

Like the scholars of divine knowledge, chanting in the moonlit dead of night, you are now croaking around the replenished pond on this day of the year. You are found everywhere, at every spot, particularly, on the day of profuse rains. 7

These frogs like the scholars of divine knowledge, in the ecstasy of the devotional bliss lift up their voices, reciting the perennial prayers. Like the ministrant priests, officiating in hot weathers, they hide in summer; and when perspire in their holes, several of them come out. 8

These frogs, like the leading priests, observe the divine institutes and rites and do not neglect the code of twelve months cycle. As the year revolves and the rains set, then scorched and heated, they come out and enjoy their freedom. 9

May the frogs bellowing like cows and the frogs bleating like goats, the frogs of speckled colour and the frogs green grant us riches. May the frogs, who give us hundreds of cows, bless us with long lives in this fertilizing season of rains, which impregnates thousands of plants. 10

O Lord of resplendence and love-divine, may you cause affliction to and destroy the wicked. It is worthy of showerers (of benefits) to cast down those who delight in darkness. Please drive away of all of them who are stupids ; and also consume, slay, turn out and exterminate them once for all who are cannibals. 1

O Lord of resplendence and love-divine, treat him mercilessly who is destructive and indulges in undesirable activities. Consume him with your wrath : let him perish thereby like a libation in fire. Never hesitate to show hatred towards one who hates people of divine learning, who is a cannibal, the hideous, the vilain. 2

O Lord of resplendence and love-divine, please treat the malevolents with severity, and plunge them in a dingy dark dungeon and see that none of them again comes out of it. May your wrathful courage gain triumphs over their wickedness. 3

O Lord of resplendence and love-divine, please hurl your crushing thunderbolt towards the wicked forces from heaven, as well as from earth. Forge out of the mountains the consuming thunderbolt and order to burn to death the ever-increasing demonic race. 4

O Lord of resplendence and love-divine, please scatter your deadly weapons from heaven from all-sides, pierce the sides of the enemies with fiery scorching thunder-bolts, so that, they die out without uttering a syllable. 5

O Lord of resplendence and love-divine, may this hymn invest you, who are mighty on every side as the girth encompassing two steeds. I am offering this hymn to both of you with sincerity and integrity. May this hom-age of mine be accepted and animated by both of you, as if, you are two kings. 6

O Lord of resplendence and love-divine, may both of you come without delay, as if, riding on rapid horses, and slay these evil beings and destroy the treacherous forces. Let there be no comfort or rest to the malignant who harasses us with his wickedness. 7

How dares he to malign me with false charges when I am of pure heart ? O Lord of resplendence, may such a person, who indulges in falsehood, cease to exist, like water, which slips down from the hollow of the palm. 8

May Lord of love-divine surrender him to a serpent or throw him into the lap of death, who falsely accuses me or persecutes me, whilst I always adhere to truth. May this be also the fate of them, who, with jealousy, vilify everything that is good in me. 9

O adorable Lord, he, who tries to pollute the essence of food or injure our horses, our cattle and our bodies even, may such an adversary, the thief, the robber, sink to des-truction,—not only he himself, but also his progeny. 10

May he be deprived of his bodily existence, as well as his posterity. May he be thrown out from all the three worlds and may his fair glory be blighted, who thinks of our destruction during the day or at night. 11

A prudent person easily discriminates between truth and falsehood, since the two words are mutually at variance. Of these two, the love-divine, cherishes truth and virtue. He, verily, destroys the falsehood. 12

Love-divine encourages not the wicked, nor he instigates such a man of strength even, who deals in falsehood. He, verily, destroys the fiend and wicked and also the one who speaks untruth. All such persons lie entangled in the chain of Lord of resplendence. 13

O adorable Lord, when did I worship the deities of falsehood or when did I think adversely about Nature's bounties? O Lord, the knower of all that is born, why are you angry with us? May destruction fall upon them who lie against you. 14

In case I have harrassed any one in this life, or if I have behaved like a demon, may death come to me this day. May he, verily, lose all his ten children and may he die also who with his false tongue has called me a fiend coming in disguise. 15

May the Lord of resplendence annihilate him with His dreadful weapon, who addresses me as a fiend appearing in disguise which I am not and may He slay such a demon who says to himself 'I am pure'. May he, the most wretched amongst all beings perish. 16

May she too, who wanders like owl during the darkness of night, hiding her body in concealment of person, fall head-long down into endless caverns. May the strong implements with their loud shrill destroy such female demons. 17

O vital winds, may you carefully conduct out a search amongst people; take them into custody and grind the demons to powder, who having transformed themselves to birds fly all over during the darkness and then proceed to sully and pollute the sacred worship. 18

O Lord of resplendence, hurl down from the celestial place your adamantine bolts. O Lord of bounties, may you sharpen the weapon and make its edge further tempered in the herbal chemicals (poisons), and smite the demons down with your rocky implements from forward, from behind, from above and from below. 19

These demons march ahead accompanied by dogs; they try to assail indomitable Lord of resplendence with a desire to annul His influence. For such miscreants, the omnipotent Lord whets His thunderbolt. Now let Him cast His bolt upon the fiends, appearing in disguise. 20

Whensoever the evil fiends proceed to obstruct the sacred rites of the invoker, the Lord of resplendence always comes to destroy them. The omnipotent Lord advances and crushes down the assailing demons, as an axe cuts down the forest timber, and smashes them like an earthen vessel. 21

Destroy the evil being, whether he comes in the fiendish garb of an owl, or of an owlet, or of a dog, or of a duck, or of a falon, or of a vulture. O Lord of resplendence, slay such a demonic person by the stroke of your stones. 22

May not the wicked fiends harm us. Let the dawn drive off the couples of timid ones. May the earth protect us from the terrestrial wickedness and may the firmament protect from the celestial one. 23

O Lord of resplendence, may you slay the fiend appearing in disguise whether he belongs to the class of man or woman, playing mischief by her deceptions. May those fools who murder by chopping necks perish and see no more of the sun when he arises. 24

O love-divine, may you and the Lord of resplendence severally watch, keep a vigil all around and cast forth your weapons at the malignant demonic person and smite all of them with bolt who attack in disguise. 25

NOTES OF BOOK NO. 7

Hymn-1

For verse I, See Nir. V. 10.

Vasistha is the Ṛsi or seer of all the hymns of Book VII of the Ṛgveda. The word vasistha (वसिष्ठ) for the first time occurs in Book I (वसिष्ठम्—I.112.9); then again in Book II (वसिष्ठ: —II.9.1). Most of the references of this word are from Book VII and a few ones from Book X. The word is used in singular and plural forms both. As vocative, the singular form, वसिष्ठ, is used at VII.23.I; 33.10; 11; 88.1; 96.1 and, the plural form, वसिष्ठा:, at VII.33.3; 4; 8. The word further occurs as follows :

वसिष्ठ (non-vocative), vasistha, VII.1.8

वसिष्ठ:, vasisthah, II.9.1; VII.9.6; 18.4; 21; 22.3; 26.5; 33.6; 12; 14; 42.6; 59.3; 73.3; 95.6; X.65.15; 66.15; 95.17; 150.5; 181.1.

वसिष्ठम्, vasistham, I.112.9; VII.13.13; 70.6; 86.5

वसिष्ठस्य, vasisthasya, VII.33.5

वसिष्ठा:, vasisthah, VII.7.7; 8.7; 12.3; 33.1; 7; 9; 37.4; 76.6; 77.6; 80.1; 90.7; 91.7; X.15.8; 122.8

वसिष्ठै:, vasisthai, VII.39.7; 40.7; 76.9

The etymology of the word vasistha has not been given by Yaska in his Nirukta; Dayananda derives this word as follows: (i) अतिशयेन वसो—the superlative of vasu, the dweller or abode—VII.1.8; (ii) अतिशयेन धनाढ्य:—exceedingly rich or opulent—VII.9.6; (iii) अतिशयेन वसु:—excessive wealth, VII.18.4; (iv) अतिशयेन विद्यासु कृतवास:—exceedingly abiding in learning, VII.26.5; (v) अतिशयेन वसुमान्, exceedingly possessing wealth, VII. 33.12.

1. Didhitibhih, by the attrition process(दीधितीभि: प्रदीपिकाभि: क्रियाभि:—Daya.); with the fingers (दीधितयोऽङ्गुलयो भवन्ति । धीयन्ते कर्मसु । Nir.V.10).

From two sticks, men with fingers, have produced fire by attrition by the motion of their hands; a fire glorious, seen at a distance, lord of the house and active.

Aranyoh; from two sticks (अरणी प्रत्यृत एन अग्नि: । समरणाज्जायत इति वा—Nir.V.10)

Hastacyuti : by the motion of their hands; by the circular movement of their hands (हस्तच्युती हस्तप्रच्युत्या—Nir.V.10; हस्तयोप्रच्युत्या भ्रामणक्रियया—Daya.).

Atharyum, always active, constantly and continuously accessible (अथर्युं अतन्वन्तम् V.10; अथर्युं आगम्यतनवन्तं वा—Sayana; the one who desires to perform yajna, an act of non-violence(अहिंसां कामयमानम्—Daya.).

3. Surmya—Surmi is a hole, a statue, an art(सूर्म्या सच्छिद्रया मूर्त्या कलया वा—Daya.); by the flame (ज्वालया—Sayana); by the fuel-stick, the kindled wood (सूर्मि समित्काष्ठं), Mahidhara; an iron stake or red-hot post; figuratively, flame. Yv. XVII. 76.

6. Yuvatih, young damsel; perhaps referring to ladle in the fire-ritual (युवति: अग्निना नित्ययुक्ता, associated always with fire—Sayana; प्राप्तयौवना कन्या—Daya.).

Ghrtaci=night (घृताचीतिरात्रिनाम—Nigh. 1.7); melted butter (घृताची घृतमञ्चतीति घृताची जुहू:—Sayana). Also see I.167.3; III.6.1; 30 7; IV.6.3; V.28.1; 43.11; VI.63.4.

7. Jarutham, the harsh-voiced, threatening (जरूथं परुषशब्दकारिणं राक्षस, गृणातेरूथन् प्रत्यये सति जरूथ शब्द निष्पत्ति:—Sayana); also a hymn; it is derived from √gṛ, √गृ, to invoke. (जरूथं गरूथं गृणातेः—जरूथं हन्यक्षि राये पुरन्धि, (VII, 9.6) addressing the hymn, sacrifice to the wise one for wealth. Nir. VI. 17; गृणाति अर्चति कर्मणा Nigh. III. 14).

Jarutham also means old or aged dry wood; old famished things; worn-out things; (जरूथं जरावस्थां प्राप्तं जीर्णं काष्ठम्—Daya.).

Catayasva, drive away, destroy completely(चातयस्व नाशं प्रापय—Daya.; प्रकर्षेण नाशय—Sayana); चतति: denotes an action, चततिर्गतिकर्मा, Nigh. II.4; See शिरिम्बिठस्य सत्त्वभिस्तेभिष्ट्वा चातयामसि X 155.1; the verb चातय means to destroy; frighten; चातयतिर्नाशने Nir. VI.30: We frighten thee away with those heroes (lit. beings) of the cloud.

8. Anikam, to the army (अनीकं सैन्यं—Daya.); glory or lustre (तेजं—Sayana).

Vasistha, O the best one, O the eminent; see also verse 9. (वसिष्ठ श्रेष्ठ—Sayana; अतिशयेन वसो—Daya.); used as an attribute of Agni;—not a proper name.

10. Vṛtra-hatyesu, in the battles (वृत्रहत्येषु संग्रामेषु—Sayana; Daya.) (See also Vṛtra-hanam, I.59.6; Vṛtra-turye, Nigh. II. 17 as a synonym of battle; (संग्राम=वृत्रतूर्ये). For Vṛtra-hatyesu, वृत्रऽहत्येषु, see I.53. 6; VII. 1.10; 19.3; 32.15; X.65.2); see also वृत्रऽहत्याय—V.29.7; VI.18.9; वृत्रऽहत्ये—I.52.4; 109.5; IV.19.1; 24.2; VI.23.2; 25.1; 8; 36.2; 47.2; VII.19. 10; वृत्रऽहत्येन VIII. 24.2.

11. Sune, in the rapid-moving army (शू: सद्य: करणं विद्यते यस्मिंस्तस्मिन् सैन्ये। शू इतिक्षिप्रनाम—Nigh. II.15; शु=आशु=instantaneous, quick, speedy=क्षिप्रनाम: तस्माप्यामादित्वान्मत्वर्थीयो न: प्रत्यय:—Daya.; in the empty house, deserted by sons and relations (शूने शून्ये पुत्रादिरहिते गृहे—Sayana).

Asesasah, one without children (अशेषस: अपुत्रा: । तोकम=शेष:=अपत्यनाम,—Nigh. II. 2; Sayana); complete or whole in itself (अशेषस: नि:शेषा:—Daya.).

Durya, O the resider in the house(दुर्य गृहेषु वर्त्तमान—Daya.); an epithet for Agni; since established in homes for the benefit of homes (दुर्य गृहेभ्योहित हे अग्ने—Sayana); see also दुर्य: —I.154.14; II.38.5; दुर्य—VIII.74.1; दुर्यान् I.91.19; X 40.12, and दुर्यासु IV.1.9; 18; 2.12; VII. 1.11.

14. Vilupanih, the one having hands as their strength (वीलुपाणि: वीलु-बलं पाणयो यस्य सः—Daya.; the one with strong hands (वीलुपाणि: दृढहस्त:—Sayana); see Nigh. II.9; वीलु=च्यौत्नम्=बलनाम.

Aksara, waters (अक्षरा उदकानि । अत्राकारादेश: अक्षरात्युदकनाम—Nigh.I.12—Daya.); by the imperishable praise (अक्षरा अक्षरेण क्षयरहितेन स्तोत्रेण—Sayana).

17. Ubhay vahatu, the two employing means. i.e. prayer and praise (उभौ वहतू वहनहेतू स्तोत्रं शस्त्रं च—Sayana.); the two means, the householder and priest (उभौ यजमानपुरोहितौ वहतू प्रापकौ—Daya.).

20. Ubhayasah, the two chanters of praises and sastra or priests and employer (उभयास: स्तोत्रिण: शस्त्रिणश्च, अथवा स्तुवन्तो यजमानाश्च—Sayana); the educated and non-educated (विद्वांसोऽविद्वांसश्च—Daya.).

Ratau, munificence (रातौ दाने—Daya.).

22. भृमात्=भ्रान्ते:, even in error (अत्र वर्णव्यत्ययेन रस्य स्थाने ऋकारो वा-च्छन्दसीति सम्प्रसारणं वा—Daya.; भृमाच्चित् भ्रमादपि, अत्र सम्प्रसारणं छान्दसम् । प्रमादा-दपीत्यर्थ:—Sayana).

Nasanta, may not come to us; fall upon us (नशदिति व्याप्तिकर्मा, Nigh, II.18; Daya.; Sayana).

23. Yam surih arthi pṛcchamanah eti, to whom the divine solicitant inquiring applies (Wilson); the inquirer is supposed to ask, either where is the liberal giver of the wealth for which he prays, or who is that Agni to whom the petition is to be addressed.

24. वहा=वह (अत्र द्व्यचोतस्तिङ इति दीर्घ:—Panini, VI.3.134).

25. Ubhayasah, the two, donor and acceptor (उभयास: दातृग्रहीतार:—Daya.; priest and employer: see VII.1.20.

Hymn-2

For verse 2; see Nir. VIII. 7.

This Apri hymn may be compared with the similar other Apri hymns : II.3; X.70 and X.110; also the Apri hymn of the Atharva-veda, V. 12.

1. Samidham, the wood or wood-sticks for the fire-ritual (समिधं काष्ठविशेषं—Daya.); Kindled=samiddham : here as usual, it implies one of the Apris or forms of fire, although used as an epithet (आप्रशब्दोक्तत्वादिदं तनूनपाद् रहितम् । समिद्धाद्या अग्निविशेषाः प्रत्यृचं देवता उक्ताः—Sayana).

2. Ubhayani havya, both kinds of oblations of ghṛta (clarified butter) and libations of medicinal herbs like Soma ete. (उभयानि सौमिकानि च हविः संस्थादीनि च हव्या हव्यानि—Sayana); the feeds useful for the health of body and mind both (शरीरात्मपुष्टिकराणि हव्यानि—Daya.).

For the verse, see Nir. VIII. 7. Of these, the gods, who are skilful, pure, meditative, and who enjoy both kinds of oblations, we will praise the greatness of the adorable Narasamsa with sacrifices. Both kinds of oblations are Soma and others, or the mystical and supplementary ones (ये सुकर्माणः शुचयो धियं धारयितारः स्वदयन्तु देवा उभयानि हवींषि । सोमं चेतराणि चेति वा चातापिकानि चेति वा—Nir. VIII. 7).

Narasamsah, "it (नराशंसः) is sacrifice", says Katthakya; "seated men (narah, नराः) praise (√शंस्) gods in sacrifice". "It is Agni", says Sakapuni, he is to be praised by me."(नराशंसो यज्ञ इति कात्थक्यः । नरा अस्मिन्नासीनाः शंसन्ति । अग्निरिति शाकपूणिः । नरैः प्रशस्यो भवति । तस्यैषा भवति—Nir. VIII. 6).

For narasamsah, नराशंसः, see I.142.3; II.3.2; 38.10; III.29.11; V.5.2; X. 70.2; 92.11; 182.2. Also narasamsam, नराशंसम्, I.13.3; 18.9; 106.4; IX.86.42; X.64.3, and narasamsasya, नराशंसस्य, VII.2.2.

3. The Apri hymn (आप्री सूक्त) refers to the following group of elevens (usually, the names of fire or agni) :

(i) samiddhah, समिद्धः; (ii) tanunapat, तनूनपात् or narasamsah, नराशंसः (iii) idah, इलः; (iv) barhih, बर्हिः, (v) devirdvarah, देवीर्द्वारः ;(vi) usasa-nakta, उषासानक्ता(vii)devyau-hotarau-pracetasau, दैव्यौ होतारौ प्रचेतसौ;(viii)tisro devyah, Sarasvati, Ila and Bharati, तिस्रो देव्याः सरस्वती, इला, भारती (ix) tvasta, त्वष्टा, (x) vanaspati, वनस्पति (xi) Svahakrtis, स्वाहाकृतयः See the Apri Sukta II.3: VII.2; X.70 and X.110. In the present hymn tanunapat is eliminated (आप्रशब्दोक्तत्वादिदं तनूनपाद्रहितम्—Sayana).

The Nirukta has the following description of the Apri deities : From what root is Apri (आप्री) derived ? From the root √आप्, to obtain (आप्नोतेः); or from √प्री, to please (प्रीणातेर्वा). There is also a Brahmana passage : (आप्रीभिराप्रीणाति), one pleases them with Apri hymns (Ait. Br. II. 4; Kaus Br. X.3.2; also Tait Br., II.2.8.6 for आप्रीभिराप्नुवन् ।

(i) Of these idhma or fuel comes foremost. Idhma is so called from being kindled (सम्√इध्)—इध्म:, समिन्धनात्. For this, see समिद्धो अद्य, X.110.1; Nir. VIII.4.

(ii) (a) Then comes tanunapat, तनूनपात्, which means one's own son. (It is clarified butter, according to Katthakya, (तनूनपात्-आज्यमिति कात्थक्य:). The word napat (नपात्) is a synonym of offspring, which does not immediately succeed a person (i.e. a grandson). It is very much propagated downwards. In this case, the cow is called tanu, because delicious things are prepared (tatah) from her. Milk is produced from the cow, and the clarified butter is produced from milk (and hence butter is the grandson of the cow); नपादित्यननन्तराया: प्रजाया नामधेयम् । निर्णततमा भवति । गौरत्रतनूरुच्यते । तता अस्या भोगा: । तस्या: पयो जायते । पयस आज्यं जायते—Nir. VIII.5.

Tanunapat is Agni according to Sakapuni ; waters are here called tanu, because they are spread in the atmosphere. Herbs and trees are produced from waters and this fire is produced from herbs and trees : अग्निरिति शाकपूणि: । आपोऽत्र तन्व उच्यन्ते । तता अन्तरिक्षे । ताभ्य ओषधिवनस्पतयो जायन्ते । ओषधि वनस्पतिभ्य एष जायते । तस्यैषा भवति । See तनूनपात्पथ०—X.110.2; Nir. VIII.5.

(b) Narasamsa is sacrifice, according to Katthakya; seated men (नरा:) praise (√शंस्) gods in sacrifice; नराशंसा यज्ञ इति कात्थक्य: । नरा •स्मिन्नासीना: शंसन्ति. But narasamsa is fire according to Sakapuni; "he is to be praised by men; अग्निरिति शाकपूणि: । नरै: प्रशस्यो भवति। See नराशंसस्य महिमान०—X.110.3;—Nir. VII.6. (iii) Ilah or Idah (ईला:) is derived from √ईड्, meaning to praise or from इन्ध्, to kindle : ईलईहे: स्तुति कर्मण:, इन्धतेर्वा। See आजुह्वमान ईडयो—X. 110.3; Nir. VIII.7. (iv) Barhih (grass) is so called from growing rapidly; बर्हि: परिवर्हणात्; see प्राचीनं बर्हि:—X.110.4. (The grass in the eastern direction is strewn at the day break),—Nir. VIII.8.

(v) Devir-dvarah, देवीद्वरि:–Here द्वारा: (dvarah), door, is derived from √जू, to press forward, or from द्रु, to move, or from the causal of वृ, to exclude : द्वारो जवतेर्वा, द्रवतेर्वा, वारयतेर्वा; see व्यचस्वती0—X.110.5 for the word देवीद्वारि:—Nir. VIII.9 (vi) Usasa-nakta, उषासानक्ता=days and nights= अक्तोरुषस:—VII.39.2 Nir. V.28; Usa or dawn, is so called because it shines (√vas,√वस्); it is the time subsequent to night(उषा: कस्मात् । उच्छतीति सत्या: । रात्रेरपर: काल: see रात्र्युपसेयोनिमारैक् (I.113.1)—Nir. II.18).

The word nakta is a synonym of night: it anoints beings with dew; or else it is called night, because its colour is indistinct: (नक्तेति रात्रिनाम। अनक्ति भूतान्यवश्यायेन। अपि वा नक्ताव्यक्तवर्णा. See, आ सुष्वयन्ती यजते उपाके उषासानक्ता— X.110.6, Nir. VIII. 10).

(vii) Daivya-hotara, दैव्या होतारा=daivyau-hotarau; it means the two divine sacrificers, this, the terrestrial, and that, the atmospheric Agni (दैव्या होतारा दैव्यौ होतारौ अयं चाग्निरसौ च मध्यम:। see दैव्या होतारा प्रथमा०—X.110.7; Nir. VIII.11).

(viii) Tisro- devih, तिस्रोदेवी:, means the three goddesses, Bharati, Ila and Sarasvati; तिस्रोदेवीर्बर्हि:—X.110.8; Nir. VIII.12. The Sun is called Bharata, भरत, and hence its light is called bharati, भारती।

(ix) Tvasṭṛ, त्वष्टृ; it is so called because it pervades quickly (according to etymologists); it may be derived from √त्विष्, meaning to shine, or from त्वक्ष्, meaning to do (त्वष्टा तूर्णमश्नुत इति नैरुक्ता:। त्विषेर्वा स्यात्। दीप्तिकर्मण:। त्वक्षतेर्वा स्यात्। करोति कर्मणा। See त्वष्टारमिह यक्षि विद्वान्—X.110.9; Nir. VIII.13).

(x) Vanaspatih, वनस्पति: ; he is so called "the lord of forests", because he is the protector or benefactor of forests.

Vanam, वनं=forest, is derived from √वन्, to win (वनस्पत इत्येनमाह। एष हि वनानां पाता वा पालयिता वा। वनं वनोते:—Nir. VIII. 3; see मेधन्तु ते० II.37.3. Now, who is the lord of forests or herbs ? It is the sacrificial post, यूप yupa, says Katthakya; but "it is Agni" says Sakapuni(तत्को वनस्पति:। यूप इति कात्यक्य:। अग्निरिति शाकपूणि:—Nir. VIII. 17; see अञ्जन्ति त्वामध्वरे देवयन्तो वनस्पते— III.8.1

(xi) Svahakṛti, स्वाहाकृति or consecrations by saying "hail"; they are so called because the word "Svaha, स्वाहा, is uttered in them; or speech herself said, "Well, ho !" or one addresses himself, or one offers oblation consecrated with Svaha ("hail !") (स्वाहाकृतय:। स्वाहेत्येतत्सु आहेति वा। स्वा वागाहेति वा। स्वं प्राहेति वा। स्वाहुतं हविर्जुहोतीति वा ; See स्वाहाकृतं हविरदन्तु देवा: — X. 110.11.

For Apri hymn, see also Av. V.12, and Yv. XXIX. 25—36.

4. Abhijnu, bending on knees; upon their knees (अभिज्ञ विदुषां सन्निधौ कृते अभिमुखे जानुनी यैस्ते—Daya.; अभिगत जानुकं—Sayana).

7. Vipra yajnesu manusesu karu manye—I am minded to adore you two sages, the ministrants at sacrifices of men (Wilson); I am minded to adore you two, men and women of intelligence, the specialists of arts and crafts at the good acts of public activity of men (विप्रा विप्रौ मेधाविनौ स्त्रीपुरुषौ यज्ञेषु सत्सु कर्मसु मानुषेषु मनुष्य सम्बन्धिषु कारू शिल्पविद्याकुशलौ पुरुषार्थिनौ मन्ये—Daya.).

8. Devaih Manusyebhih, with gods and men; gods are those excellent persons who abide by truth, and men are those who abide by untruth; (सत्यमेवदेवा अनृतं मनुष्याः—S. Br. I.1.1.4; देवैः सत्यवादिभिर्विद्वद्भिः; मनुष्येभिः अनृतवादिभिर्जनैः—Daya.).

10. Vanaspate, the protector or Lord of vana, herbs, forests, or rays, i.e. the sun, or an enlightened person (वनस्पते वनानां किरणानां पालक सूर्य इव विद्वान्—Daya.).

11. Aditih suputra svaha, hail the Aditi, the mother of excellent sons with respects (अदितिः माता सुपुत्रा शोभना पुत्रायस्याः सा स्वाहा सत्यक्रियया—Daya.)

Hymn-3

1. Ṛtava, the observer of truth (ऋतावा यज्ञवान् सत्यवान् वा—Sayana) ; the discriminator of truth or water (ऋतावा सत्यस्य जलस्य वा विभाजकः — Daya.).

2. Yavase, upon the forage; on the food or grass(यवसे घासे—Daya; Sayana) See also I.38.5; V.9.4; 53.16, VI.2.9; VII.3.2; 87.2; X.25.1; 99.8; 100.10; 115.2.

3. अच्छा=अच्छ (अन्नसंहितायामिति दीर्घः —Panini VI.1.70).

4. Pajah, strength (पाजः बलं; Nigh, II.9); lustre (पाजः तेजः —Sayana).

7. Satam purbhih ayasibhih, hundred cities or fortifications of iron (पूर्भिः नगरीभिः आयसीभिः अयसः निर्मिताभिः —Daya.).

1u. Vatema, may possess or be favoured with (वतेम सम्भजेम। अत्र वर्णव्यत्ययेन तस्यस्थाने तः ; वतेम=वनेम—Daya.; सम्भजेमहि—Sayana).

Stotṛbhyo gṛnate, for the praiser; for the householder (स्तोतृभ्य· ऋत्विग्भ्यः गृणते स्तावकाय—Daya.; स्तोतृभ्यः उद्गातृभ्यः गृणते शंसते—Sayana).

Hymn-4

For verses 7 and 8, see Nir. III.2 and III.3 respectively.

2. Sam yah vana yuvate, one who attacks the forests (Wilson; यः अग्निः शुचिदन् दीप्तदन्तः वना वनानि संयुक्ते आत्मना संयोजयति—Sayana; वना वनानि किरणानि सूर्य इव युवते युनक्ति—Daya.).

Suci-dan, the bright-toothed (शुचिऽदन् दीप्तिदन्तः—Sayana; पवित्रदन्तः—Daya.).

4. Sahasvah, full of strength; mighty (सहस्वः प्रशस्तबलयुक्त—Daya., vocative). See also sahasavan, सहसावन् in verse 6 of this hymn.

7. The treasure of the stranger is indeed to be avoided; may we be masters of eternal wealth. (The child) begotten by another is no son; he is so far the fool only. O Agni, do not corrupt our paths.

Rekna, रेक्ण, is a synonym of wealth; it is left by the deceased (√रिच्). May we be masters of eternal wealth of the parental property.

The word Sesas, शेषस्, is a synonym of offspring; this is what remains of the deceased. That is a child for the fool; i.e., insane only (परिहर्तव्यं हि नोपसर्तव्यम् । अरणस्य रेक्णः अरणोऽपार्णो भवति । रेक्ण इति धन नाम । रिच्यते प्रयतः । 'नित्यस्य रायः पतयः स्याम' । पित्र्यस्येव धनस्य । न शेषोऽग्ने अन्य जातमस्ति । शेष इत्यपत्य नाम । शिष्यते प्रयतः । अचेतयमानस्य तत्प्रमत्तस्य भवति । मा नः पथो विदुदुष इति—Nir. III.2.)

Aranasya, of the one in which there is no conflict (अरणस्य अविद्यमानो रणः संग्रामो यस्मिंस्तस्य —Daya.); of the one not in debt (अरणस्य अनृणस्य —Sayana, who also quotes Nir. III. 2 and gives the alternative meaning).

8. "The stranger, however delightful, should not be adopted, begotten in another's womb; he should not be regarded (as one's own) even in thought. To his own abode, he certainly goes back. Let the new (hero) impetuous and irresistible, come to us." On this the Nirukta comments : The stranger should never be adopted, although he may be the most delightful man The child begotten in another's womb should not be regarded as "this is my son", even in thought. Now he goes back to the same abode from whence he came. Okah (ओकः) is used as a synonym of abode or dwelling-place. Let the newly-born (hero), impetuous, i.e. swift and overpowering his rivals, come to us; he alone is the real son (न हि ग्रहीतव्यो ग्ररण: सुसुखतमोऽपि । ग्रन्योदर्यो मनसापि न मन्तव्य: । ममायं [पुत्र:] इति । ग्रथ स ग्रोक: पुनरेव तदेति यत ग्रागतो भवति । ग्रोक इति निवास नामोच्यते । एतु नो वाजी वेजनवान् । ग्रभिषहमाण: सपत्नान् । नवजात: स एव पुत्र इति—Nir. III.3).

Aranah, not one pleasing or delighting (ग्ररण: ग्ररममाण: —Sayana; Daya.).

The verses 7 and 8 prohibit the practice of adoption, and confine inheritance either to direct descent through a son, or to collateral descent through the son of a daughter:—Nir. III. 3; the verse is considered as an explanation of the preceding, the drift of the two being the preference of lineal male descent.—Wilson.

9. Vanusyatah, of those who beg (वनुष्यत: याचमानान्—Daya.); against the malignant (वनुष्यत: हिंसकात्—Sayana).

10. This is the repetition of the verse VII.3.10, the last verse of the previous hymn.

Hymn-5

1. Amrtanam, of immortals like the souls or the Prakrti, the primordial matter (in the causal form) (ग्रमृतानां नाशरहितानां जीवानां प्रकृत्यादीनां वा—Daya.; of gods, देवानाम्—Sayana).

Vaisvanarah, fire of the universal usage (वैश्वानर: विश्वनरहितोऽग्नि: —Sayana; विश्वेषु नरेषु राजमान: —Daya.); the cosmic power.

2. Stiyanam, of waters (स्तियानां ग्रपाम् जलानाम्; स्तिया ग्रापो भवन्ति स्त्यायनादिति, Stiyah means waters, so called from being collected together Nir. VI.17; Daya.; Sayana).

3. Purave, for man (पूरवे मनुष्याय—Daya.; for the king, राज्ञे—Sayana). According to Wilson, the word occurs as an epithet of Sudas, one who fills or satisfies with offerings. See also पुरोवज्जिन् पुरुकुत्साय दर्द: बर्हिर्नघत् सुदासे ।—I.63.7).

4. Vaisvanara. fire; the leader of people (वैश्वानर: कस्मात् । विश्वान्नरा- न्यति । विश्व एनं नरानयन्तीतिवा—he leads all men, or all men lead him, or else, Vaisvanara may be a modified form of Visvan-ara, i.e. who pervades all created beings.—Nir. VII.21; Sayana); world-citizen.

5. Kṛstinam, of the cultured persons; of persons in general (Kṛstayah, कृष्टय: —मनुष्य नाम;Nigh. II.3—Daya.); of people(प्रजानां—Sayana).

Haritah, cardinal directions (हरित: दिश: —Daya.; हरित्=दिङ् नाम—Nigh. I.6); horses (हरित: अश्वा:—Sayana).

Ghṛtacih, nights (घृताची: रात्रय: —Daya.; घृताची=रात्रिनाम—Nigh. I.7); accompanied by butter and other oblations (घृताची: घृतमञ्चन्त्य: । हविषा सहिता इत्यर्थ:—Sayana).

Dhunayah, dispensers of iniquity (धुनय: पापं धुन्वाना:—Sayana); airs or winds; breaths (धुनय: वायव: —Daya.). (Dhunih, shaker is derived from√धु to shake; and hence wind also. Nir. V.12; X.89.5).

Vaisvanaram, pertaining to Visvanara, विश्वनर (वैश्वानर विश्वनर हितं —Sayana); the one enlightened like fire (अग्निमिव —Daya.).

7. Vyoman (विअ्योमन्), all-pervading like sky (व्योमन् व्योमवद् व्यापके—Daya.); in the midspace, in the heaven (अन्तरिक्षे—Sayana) [cf. ऋचो अक्षरे परमे व्योमन्—I.164.39; parame, the highest].

8. Jatavedah, all-knowing, knower of all that is born; epithets for Agni, which is also known as Vaisvanara.

Hymn-6

1. Darum Vande, I salute the demolisher (of cities) (दारुं पुरां भेत्तारं वन्दे—Sayana); the demolisher of pains (दु:ख विदारकं—Daya.).

Samrajah, the universal sovereign (सम्राज: सर्वस्य भुवनस्येश्वरस्य—Sayana).

Vandamanah asurasya prasastim pumsah, glorifying the excellence of the powerful male.

Asurasya, of the strong one (असुरस्य बलवत: —Sayana); of the one strong as clouds (असुरस्य मेघस्येव वर्त्तमानस्य—Daya.).

2. Purandarasya, the demolisher of the cities of enemies (पुरन्दरस्य शत्रूणां पुरां विदारकस्य—Daya.; पुरां दारयिता—Sayana).

For Puramdara, see पुरम्ऽदर—I.102.7, VIII.1.7; पुरम्ऽदरः—II.20.7; III.54.15; V.30.11; VIII.1.8; 61.10; पुरम्ऽदरम्—VI.16.14; VIII.61.18; पुरम्ऽदरस्य—VII.6.2; पुरम्ऽदरा—I.109.8.

4. Sacibhih, by speech; by words (शचीभिः उत्तमाभिर्वाग्भिः —Daya; शची=वाङ्नाम, Nigh. I.11; शचीभिः ताभ्यो दत्ताभिः प्रज्ञाभिः—Sayana.; by the benefits (Wilson).

5. Nahusah, Lord bound by discipline, eternal law or truth (नहुषः सत्येबद्धः —Daya.; Nahusa, the name of a king—Sayana).

Other references for Nahusa are : नहुषः—I.122.8; 10; 11; VII.6.5; VIII.8.3; X.49.8; 80.6; 99.7; नहुषस्य—I.31.11; V.12.6; नहुषा—VI.26.7; नहुषे—VIII.46.27; नहुष्यस्य—X.63.1; नहुष्याणि—IX.88.2; नहुष्येभिः —IX 91.2.

According to Nigh. II.3, Nahusah, नहुषः, is a synonym of man. Dayananda in his commentary on I.31.11 writes : नहुषस्येत्यत्र सायणाचार्येण नहुष नामक राजविशेषो गृहीतस्तदसत् । कस्यांचिन्नहुषस्येदानीं तम त्वाद् वेदानां सनातनत्वात्तस्य गाथात्र न संभवति । निघण्टौ नहुषस्येति मनुष्यनाम्नः प्रसिद्धेश्च; i.e., Sayana's contention that Nahusa is the name of a king is not admissible, since the Veda deals with eternal topics, and not the historical facts; Dayananda agrees with Yaska.

Yahvah, the great one (यह्वः महान्—Daya).

Dehyo anamayat, has bowed or humbled; baffled the devices of the asuras, learning the sciences of the asuras (देह्यः देहीरूपचिताः आसुरीर्विद्याः —Sayana; देह्यः उपचेतु वर्धयितुं योग्यः अनमयत् दुष्टान् नम्रान्कारयेत्—Day a).

Matinam, in the midst of men (मतीनां मनुष्याणां मध्ये—Daya); of the desires (मतीनां अभिमतानां कामानाम्—Sayana).

2. Abhisasteh, from malevolent foes (अभिशस्तेः अभिशंसकात् शत्रोः — Sayana); from the self-conceit (अभिशस्तेः आभिमुख्येन स्वप्रशंसां कुर्वतो दम्भिनः — Daya.).

Hymn-14

1. Namasvinah, we the possessors of food or adorations (नमस्विनः नमोऽन्नं सत्कारो वा विद्यते येषां ते—Daya.; laden with oblations, हविष्मन्तः —Sayana).

3. Vesat-Kṛtim, a pious or sacred action (वषट् कृतिं सत्यक्रियां—Daya.) sanctified oblations (वषट् कृतिं हविः —Sayana).

For vasat, see the following :

वषट्, vasat—VII.99.7 ; 100.7 ; X.115.9 ;

वषट्कृतम्, vasat-kṛtam—I.162.15; II.36.1; X.17.12 ;

वषट्कृतस्य, vasat-kṛtasya—I.120.4 ;

वषट्कृताः, vasat-kṛtah—VIII.28.2 ;

वषट्कृतिः, vasat-kṛti—I.14.8 ;

वषट्कृतिम्, vasat-kṛtim—I.31.5; VII.14.3; 15.6.

Vasat, वषट्, may be derived from √वह्, vah, cf. vat (वट्) and vausat, वौषट्. Vat is an interjection or exclamation used in sacrificial ceremonies along with Svaha, see Tait. Sam. III.2.8: To the flying eagle, Svaha, vat ! To the support, the law, Svaha, Vat ! etc.

Vausat, वौषट्, is probably a lengthened form of Vasat, वषट्, which is also an exclamation or formula used on offering an oblation to the deva and the pitṛ with fire. These are the exclamations uttered by the hotṛ priest at the end of the sacrificial verse; on hearing which the adhvaryu, अध्वर्यु, priest casts the oblation offered to the deity into the fire; it is joined with a dative, e.g. पूष्णे वषट्. The exclamation occurs with Kṛ (कृ) in the Vedic literature (वषट् करण), the utterence of Vasat; वषट्कर्तृ, the priests who make the oblation with vasat ; वषट्कार, the exclamation vasat (also personified as a deity); also vasatkṛta, वषट्कृत, offered in fire with vasat; vasatkṛti, वषट्कृति etc.

1. Upasadyaya milhuse; of him who bears to us the nearest relationship (used for the fire) (उपासद्याय उपसदनीयाय मीलहुषे कामानां वर्षित्रेऽग्नये तस्मेत्यर्थम्—Sayana; उपसद्याय समीपे स्थापयितुं योग्याय मीलहुषे वारिणेव सत्योपदेशैस्सेचकाय —Daya.).

The words derived from milhuh are :

मीलहु:ष्टमाय—I.43.1.

मीलहुषां—VIII.20.3.

मीलहुषी—V.56.9

मीलहुषे—I.122.1; 136.6 etc.

मीलहुष्मन्त:—VI.50.12.

Midhustama (मीढुष्=मीलहुष्) means most bountiful or liberal and midhusmat (मीढुष्मत्) means bountiful, liberal or kind. In mythology, midhusa(मीलुष) is the name of a son of Indra by Paulomi. Midhusi (मीलुषी) is the name of a Devi (the wife of Isana, ईशान)—Apastamba Gṛ.

2. Panca-carsanih, five classes of people (cf. panca-janya, deva, pitṛ, manusya, gandharva and asura (पञ्चचर्षणी: पञ्चजनान् मनुष्यान्—Sayana).

9. Havyadatim, the yajamana; donor of the oblations (हव्यदातिं हव्यानि ददातीति हव्यदातिर्यजमानः—Sayana; see also यजमानो वै हव्यदातिः—S.Br.I.4.1.24).

Sudaya, encourage, inspire to work (सूदय कर्मसु प्रेरय—Sayana); destroy (सूदय विनाशय—Daya.).

10. Asvya, appearing amongst prominent ones (अश्व्या महत्सु भवानि—Daya.) ; also means of transport (अश्व्या अश्वात्मकानि—Sayana).

This is a term of frequent occurrence in the Ṛgveda :

Asvyah, अश्व्यः —I.32.12; 74.7; VIII.46.21; 66.3

Asvyam, अश्व्यम्—I.112.10; 117.22; 119.9; IV.28.5; V.52.17; 61.5; VII.92.3 etc.

Asvyasya, अश्व्यस्य—IV.41.10; VIII. 24.14; 46.22

Asvya, अश्व्य—V.79.7 ; VII.16.10; 67.9 ; VIII.27.6; 34.14.

Asvyanam, अश्व्यानाम्—VIII.25.23

Asvyani, अश्व्यानि—VI.44.12 ; VII.18.19

Asvye, अश्व्ये—VIII.13.22

Asvyena, अश्व्येन—X.87.16

Asvyaih, अश्व्यैः —VI.60.14; VIII.73.14; 15

The term means anything pertaining to horse or a quick transport. Dayananda explains the term according to the contexts :

Asvyam, अश्व्यं अश्वेषु भव (शिरः) I.117.22; तुरङ्गेषु वेगादिषु वा साधुं (वीरजनं)—I.112.10; अश्वेषु व्याप्तविद्येषु साधुं (मनः = विज्ञानं)—I.119.9;—अश्वेभ्योहितं (राधः = धनं) Yv. XXVII.27; Asvyah, अश्व्यः अश्वेषु आशुगच्छत्सु: साधुरत्यन्त वेगकारी (विद्वज्जनः)—

I.74.7; योऽश्वेषु वेगादिगुणेषु साधुः (वीरजनो मेघो वा)—I.32.12; Asvya, अश्व्या=महत्सु भवानि (राधांसि=धनानि)—VII.16.10; अश्वेभ्योहितानि (राधांसि=धनानि)—VII.79.7.; Asvyani, अश्व्यानि=अश्वानां महतामिमानि (शीर्षाणि=शिरांसि·—VII.18.19. (अश्वशब्दात् साध्वर्थे भवार्थे वा यत् प्रत्ययः)

Sravasah, reputation, fame; also food (श्रवसः अन्नस्य—Daya. ; यशसः —Sayana).

Hymn-18

For verses 5, 15 and 21, see Nir, VI.6; VII.2 and VI.30 respectively.

1. Gavah, instincts of wisdom (also cows, गावः धेनवः —Daya.).

Asvah, vital powers (also horses, अश्वाः महान्तस्तुरङ्गाः —Daya.).

Ena vo agnim, एना वो अग्निं, with this (एना), to us, O Agni! (Nir. III.21)—Aya (अया) and ena (एन) are synonyms of reference (अयैनेन्युपदेशस्य); ena for the neuter gender, as in the present case: and aye for the feminine; अयाते अग्ने समिधा विधेम IV.4.15. With this (अया) faggot, we worship thee, O Agni (IV.4.15).

2. Yojate visva-bhojasa, may he harness protecting (steeds) (विश्वभोजसा विश्वस्य पालयितारावश्वौ or विश्वस्य रक्षकेण योजते युज्यते—Sayana). The two steeds or the motive powers are water and fire (अश्वाविव जलाग्नी; विश्वभोजसा विश्वस्य पालकौ—Daya.).

Susami, doer or accomplisher of great deeds (सुशमी शोभनकर्मा —Daya.).

Subrahma, adorable; the knower of the wisdom of all the four Vedas; or the possessor of immense food or wealth (सुब्रह्मा शोभनानि ब्रह्माणि धनान्नानि यस्य, यद्वा सुष्ठु चतुर्वेदवित्—Daya.) or the adorable (सुब्रह्मा सुस्तुतिः —Sayana).

Yajnah, one worthy of honour (यज्ञः यष्टव्यः Sayano; पूजनीयः—Daya).

The verses 1 and 2 of this hymn occur in the blended form in the Yajurveda (Yv. XV.32-34) : (अरुषा अरुषौ रोषरहितौ साधू । विश्वभोजसा विश्वं भुजते तौ विश्वभोजसौ । सर्वस्य भोक्तारौ ॥ सुब्रह्मा ब्रह्मपदं सर्वर्त्विगुपलक्षणम् । शोभनो ब्रह्मा ऋत्विग्यत्र शुभऋत्विग्युक्तः । सुशमी । शमीति कर्मनाम । शोभनानि कर्माणि यत्रेति सुशमी शोभनकर्मवान्—Mahidhara).

Vasunam devam radho jananam—May the sacrificial wealth of worshippers (proceed to) that deity who is the giver of abundant food etc. (Sayana), and also may Agni, who harnesses etc. be regardful of the brilliant wealth of the worshippers amongst riches (Sayana).

Agni goes quickly where the worship of Vasus, Rudras and Adityas is celebrated and the sacrificial wealth of worshippers is offered (Mahidhara).

3. Arusasah, the flames, the fiery(अरुषासः ज्वालाः —Daya.; आरोचमानाः —Sayana).

5. Pota, the assistant priest; the one who sanctifies (पोता पवित्रकर्त्ता—Daya.).

Yaksi, conveying the oblations to Nature's bounties (यक्षि यजसि सङ्गच्छसे—Sayana).

Vesi, consume yourself; pervade (वेषि व्याप्नोसि—Daya.).

5. Sudase, faithful devotee (सुदासे सुष्ठु दातव्यव्यवहारे, one who is liberal as a donor—Daya.).

16. Ksam, earth; ground (क्षां=भूमिम्—Nigh. I.1.)

17. पेत्वेना=पेत्वेन (संहितायामिति दीर्घः —Panini VI.1.70).

18. Bhedasya, of one who breaks or separates; an unbeliever; a nastika or an atheist; or the name of an asura, hostile to Sudas (भेदं नास्तिकं भेदनामकं वा सुदासः शत्रुम्—Sayana) ; (विदारणं, भेदभावं वा—Daya.).

19. Yamuna; the regulator (यमुना नियन्तारः—Daya.); the name of a river (इन्द्रं यमुना आवत् अतोषयत्। तत्तीरवासी जनः सर्वोऽप्यतोषयदित्यर्थः, i.e. the dwellers on the Yamuna and the Tṛtsus glorified Indra when he killed Bheda in battle—Sayana). The word Yamuna occurs at three places in the Ṛgveda V.52.17; VII.18.19; and X.75.5.

Ajasah, people belonging to a district Aja, (अजासः अजाः जनपदाः—Sayana); the throwers of arms and ammunition (शस्त्रास्त्र प्रक्षेपकाः—Daya.); also see VI.55.6 (अजासः पुष्टिकर्त्तारः अश्वाः—Daya.).

Yaksavah, people of the Yaksa district (यक्षवः जनपदाः—Sayana; those ones who accompany; सङ्गन्तारः—Daya.)

Sigravah, people of Sigru district (शिग्रवः जनपदाः—Sayana); the one who speaks inarticulate words (शिग्रवः अव्यक्तशब्दकर्त्तारः—Daya.). The word occurs nowhere else in the Ṛgveda.

20. Sambaram, cloud; nescience (शम्बरं मेघं—Daya.). See other references: शम्बरम् I.51.6; 54.4; 59.6; 101.2; 130.7; II.12.11; IV.30.14; VI.18.8; 26.5; 43.1; 47.21; VII.18.20; IX.61.2; शम्बरस्य—I.103.8; II.14.6; 19.6; IV.26.3; VI.31.4; 47 2; VII.99.5; शम्बरऽहत्ये I.112.14; and शम्बराणि II.14.2.

21. Parasarah, the subduer of wicked (पराशरः दुष्टानां हिंसकः—Daya.);

see also VII.104.21. (These are the only two places where the word occurs.)

Parasarah means a seer, born from the old and exhausted Vasistha(पराशर: पराशीर्णस्य वसिस्ठस्य स्थविरस्य जज्ञे;—the seer Vasistha surrounded by a hundred demons. (Nir. VI.30); Indra is called parasara also; he is the destroyer of other demons (इन्द्रोऽपि पराशर उच्यते । पराशातयिता यातूनाम्; for this see इन्द्रो यातूनामभवत्पराशर:—VII.104.21).

Parasara is mentioned with Satayatu and Vasistha in the Ṛgvedic hymn celebrating Sudas victory over the ten kings. According to the Nirukta (VI.30), he was the son of Vasistha but the epic version makes him a son of Sakti and grandson of Vasistha. Geldner (Vedische Studiem II.132) thinks that he is mentioned in the Ṛgveda along with Satayatu (शतयातु), perhaps his uncle and his grandfather Vasistha, as the three sages who approached Indra and won his favour for Sudas. He is erroneously credited with the authorship of the Ṛgveda by the Anukramani (A. A. Macdonell and A. B. Keith).

22. Dva vadhumanta, with two mares; with two wives (वधूमन्ता प्रशस्ते बध्वौ विद्येते ययोस्तौ—Daya. ; वधूमन्त: वधूसंयुक्तौ द्वाद्वौ, रथारथौ—Sayana); the donor of two hundred cows, and of two chariots with two wives—Wilson.

Devavatah, one with divine or learned attributes (देववत: प्रशस्तगुण विद्वद्युक्तस्य—Daya.).

Devavanta is mentioned in a Dana-stuti ("Praise of Gifts") in the Ṛgveda, as the ancestor of Sudas, apparently his grandfather, or if Paijavana is accepted as Sudas' father, and Divodass as his grandfather, then this great-great-grandfather and father of Vadhryasva (वध्र्यश्व). The succession in the latter case would then be Devavanta→ Vadhryasva→Divodasa→Pijavana→Sudas (A. A. Macdonell and A. B. Keith).

Paijavanasya, of the kind-hearted; of Paijavana (पैजवनस्य वेदयुक्तस्य—Daya.); the one devoted to knowledge. The references of this word are VII.18.22; 23; 25, all the three in this hymn. Paijavana, according to historians means the descendent of Pijavana. It is the patronymic of Sudas (I.94 6. II.52: IV 9.3. VII.16 5 IX.67 22. It seems most probable that Pijavana intervened in the line of succession between Divodasa and Sudas, because the two kings have, according to tradition, quite different Purohitas, the former being served by the Bharadvajas as his priests, the latter by Vasistha and Visvamitra; this is more natural if they were divided by a period of time than if they had been, as is usually supposed, father and son. Geldner, however, identifies Divodasa and Pijavana. (A A. Macdonell and A. B. Keith: Vedic Index).

Paijavanasya, of the one moving with speed (पैजवनस्य वेगयुक्तस्य—Daya.; also of the son of the one endowed with forgiveness or of the one who is considerate and kind-hearted (पैजवनस्य क्षमाशीलस्य पुत्रस्य—Daya.).

23. Krsaninah, the one who possesses immense gold (कृशनिन: कृशनं बहु हिरण्यं विद्यते येषान्ते—Daya. कृशनं=हिरण्यं=gold,' Nigh. I.2.); one possessing gold ornaments (हिरण्यालंकारवन्त:—Sayana).

24. Yudhyamadhim, the war-monger; the enemy who gets infected with disease in war (युध्यामधिं यो युधि संग्राम श्रामं रोगं दधाति तं शत्रुं—Daya.); hame of an enemy (युध्यामधिं युध्यामधिनामकं सपत्नं—Sayana).

The word occurs nowhere else in the Ṛgveda.

25. Divodasam, Lord divine; the giver of enlightenment (दिवोदासं विद्याप्रकाश दातारम्—Daya.).

Sudasah, faithful servant, the gift of learning (सुदास: उत्तम विद्यादान: —Daya.).

Paijavanasya, see earlier notes on this hymn (verses 22, 23) प्रविष्टना=प्रविष्टन (संहितायाम् —Panini. VII.1.70).

Hymn-19

1. Tigma-Srngah, one with sharp horns (तिग्मशृंग: तीक्ष्णशृंग:—Sayana) ; one with bright rays, penetrating as the horns (तिग्मशृंग: तिग्मानि तेजस्वीनि शृंगानि किरणा यस्य सूर्यस्य स:—Daya.). This refers to the Sun

23. Asvayantah, those who like the company of learned scholars (अश्वायन्तः महतोविदुष: कामयमाना: —Daya.; (and of horses, अश्वानिच्छन्तः —Sayana).

Gavyantah, persons fond of divine speech ; or good land, (गव्यन्तः आत्मनो गां सुशिक्षितां वाचमुत्तमां भूमिं वेच्छन्तः —Daya.; गा इच्छन्तः —Sayana).

25. भवा=भव

26. Kratum, wisdom, intellect, discriminating good from bad (क्रतुं अस्मै प्रज्ञां—Daya.).

Hymn-33

For verses 8, 10, and 11, see Nir. X.1.20 ; VI.7 and V.14 respectively.

The devatas or the divinities of the first nine verses of this hymn are the sons of Vasistha and Vasistha is the seer. In the last six, Vasistha is considered to be the divinity, and his sons as the seers. Here is a dialogue between Indra and Vasistha including his sons

1. Svityancah, those who attain promotion (श्वित्यञ्चः ये श्विर्ति वृद्धिमञ्चन्ति प्राप्नुयन्ति ते—Daya) ; white-complexioned accomplishers of holy ceremonies (श्वित्यं श्वेतवर्णमञ्चन्तीति श्वित्यञ्चः । श्वेतवर्णा इत्यर्थः —Sayana) white-coloured ; an epithet for Vasistha.

Daksinatah-kapardah, the Brahmacarins wearing the lock of hair on the right side (दक्षिणतस्कपर्दाः । दक्षिणतः कपर्दा जटाजूटा येषां ब्रह्मचारिणां ते—Daya.; दक्षिणे शिरसो भागे कपर्दाश्च चूडा येषां ते दक्षिणतस्कपर्दाः —Sayana, Kaparda or Cuda चूडा is the single lock of hair left on the top of the head at tonsure, which, according to Sayana, has been the practice in the family of Vasisthas (दक्षिणे शीर्षोभागे).

2. Durat indram anayan—Sayana quotes a legend to interpret it: When the sons of Vasistha had undertaken a Soma sacrifice to Indra on behalf of Sudas, they found that he was present at a similar solemnity instituted by the king Pasadyumna (पाशद्युम्न), the son of Vayata (वायत), on which they abused the king, broke off his sacrifice, and by their mantras, compelled Indra to come to that of their patrons.

Vaisantam, related to the person entering (वैशन्तं वेशन्तस्य विशतो जनस्येमम्—Daya.) ; the ladle for holding the Soma juice (वैशन्तं । वेशन्तः पल्वलम् । अत्र वेशन्तशब्देन सोमाधारश्चमसो लक्ष्यते—Sayana). The word does not occur anywhere else in the Ṛgveda.

Pasa-dyumnasya, the one who has acquired wealth and glory (पाशद्युम्नस्य पाशात्प्राप्तं द्युम्नं यशोधनं येन तस्य —Daya.).

Vayatasya, of Vayata ; the enlightened (वायतस्य विज्ञानवतः)

Vasisthan, those who are exceedingly fond of enlightenment, and accept it for their life (वसिष्ठान् अतिशयेन विद्यासु कृतवासान्—Daya.).

3. Bhedam ebhih jaghana, he easily slew his foe.

Bhedam, worth being broken to pieces ; worth crushing to pieces (भेदं भेदनीयं विदारणीयं, जघान हन्यात्—Daya.).

Bheda may be a proper name too ; (भेदनामकं शत्रुं, एभिः वसिष्ठैः —Sayana).

Dasarajne, in the war with ten kings (दाशराज्ञे दशभिः राजभिः सह युद्धे प्रवृत्ते—Sayana) ; for the king who gives comforts (दाशराज्ञे यो दाशति सुखंददाति राजा तस्मै—Daya.). See also दाशराज्ञे परियताय॰ VII, 83.8, and अर्णांसि चित्पप्रथाना, VII.18.5 for defence of Sudas.

4. Pitṛnam, पितृणाम्, of parents etc. This word in genitive case (plural) may be used honorifically implying father, i.e., Vasistha (Wilson ; पारोक्ष्येण वसिष्ठस्यैव कीर्तनम्—Sayana).

Aksam avyayam, pervading and endless (अक्षं व्याप्तं अव्ययं नाशरहितं —Daya.) ; I cause to move the axle of the car, ascribing the words to Vasistha, as announcing his intention to return to his hermitage (Wilson).

5. Tritsubhyah, for the Tritsus, defenders against the enemies (तृत्सुभ्यः शत्रूणां हिंसकेभ्यः —Daya.).

Dasarajne, for the king of liberal givers (दाशराज्ञे दाशानां दातॄणां राज्ञे —Daya) ; in the war with ten kings (दशानां राज्ञां संग्रामे—Sayana).

Bharatah, those who take a good care of body and its maintenance (भरताः देहधारकपोषकाः —Daya.).

Bharata has been a historic king also, who derived his name from the word occurring in the Ṛgvedic text, bharata, with the etymological meaning as given by Dayananda or in the Nirukta.

Macdonell and Keith have given a good summary of the history that goes under the name of Bharata and the family (Vol.II ; 94-95): "Bharata is the name of a people of great importance in the Ṛgveda and other literature. In the Ṛgveda, they appear prominently in the Third and the Seventh Mandalas in connexion with Sudas and the Tritsus, whilst in the Sixth Mandala, they are associated with Divodasa. In one passage (VII.8.4), the Bharatas are like the Tritsus, the enemies of the Purus (पूरु) : there can be little doubt that Ludwig's views of the indentity of the Bharata and Tritsus is practically correct. More precisely Oldenberg considers that the Tritsus are the Vasisthas, the family singers of the Bharatas ; while Geldner recognizes, with perhaps more probability, in the Tritsus the royal family of the Bharatas. That the Tritsus and Bharatas were enemies, as Zimmer holds, is most improbable even on geographical grounds, for the Tritsus in Zimmer's view occupied the country to the east of the Parusni river (Ravi) and the Bharatas must, therefore, be regarded as coming against the Tritsus from the west, whereas the Ṛgveda recognizes two Bharata chiefs on the Sarasvati (सरस्वती), Apaya (आपया) and Dṛsadvati (दृषद्वती)—that is the holy land of India, the Madhyadesa (मध्यदेश)...The Satapatia Brahmana mentions Bharate Dauh-Santi (भरत् दौःषन्ति) as a king, sacrificer of the Asvamedha and Satanika Satrajita (शतानीक सात्राजित) as another Bharat who offered that sacrifice (SBr.XIII.5.4). The Aitareya Brahmana (VIII.23 and 21) mentions Bharata Dauhsyanti (भरतः दौःष्यन्ति) as receiving the kingly coronation from Dirghatamas Mamateya (दीर्घतमस् मामतेय) and Satanika as being consecrated by Somasusman vajaratnayana, (सोमशुष्मन् वाजरत्नायन्), a priest whose name is of quite late origin. "Bharata kings also won victories over the Kasis and made offerings on the Yamuna and the Ganga."

6. Tritsunam visah, people of the disreputed (तृत्सूनां विशः अनादृतानां

प्रजा मनुष्यान्—Daya.) ; the people of the Tritsus.—The Tritsus are the same as Bharatas. A story is narrated in the Mahabharata: Samvarana, (संवरण), the son of Rksa (ऋक्ष), the fourth in descent from Bharata, the son of Dusyanta (दुष्यन्त), was driven from the kingdom by the Pancalas (पांचाल), and obliged to take refuge with his tribe amongst the thickets on the Sindhu until Vasistha came to them, and consented to be the Raja's Purohita, when they recovered the territory (Wilson).

7. Trayah Krnvanti retah, three shed moisture. The three are fires, terrestrial, interspatial, and celestial ; or the triad of earth, water and fire ; (त्रय: विद्युद् भौम सूर्याख्याऽग्नयो भूम्यप्तेजांसी वा—Daya.). Sayana quotes Satyayana (शाट्यायन) for the explanation of this verse: the three who send rain on the three regions of earth, air and heaven, are Agni, Vayu and Aditya, and they also diffuse warmth ; their offsprings are the Vasus, the Rudras, the Adityas, the latter of whom are the same with jyotis, light. (Wilson) : त्रय: कृण्वन्ति भुवनेषु रेत इत्यग्नि: पृथिव्यां रेत: कृणोति वायुरन्तरिक्ष आदित्यो दिवि तिस्र: प्रजा आर्या ज्योतिरग्रा इति वसवो रुद्रा आदित्यास्तासां ज्योतिर्यद्सावादित्यस्त्रयो घर्मास उषसं सचन्त इत्यग्नि रुषसं सचते वायुरुषसं सचत आदित्य उषसं सचते"
—शाट्यायन.

Aryah, people of excellent qualities, actions and behaviour (आर्या: उत्तमगुणकर्मस्वभावा:—Daya.).

Gharmasah, sins (घर्मास: पापानि—Daya.) ; light and warmth, or shining ones (घर्मास: दीप्यमाना: —Sayana).

8. Their splendour is dazzling like the sun, their greatness is unfathomed like that of the ocean, their speed is like that of the wind. Your hymn, O Vasisthas, cannot be imitated by any other." This is panegyric (Nir.XI.20).

9. Ninyan Hrdayasya praketaih sahasravalsam—In the innermost centre of ourselves, we have innumerable seedlings of various disciplines of knowledge (निण्यं निर्णीतान्तर्गतं हृदयस्य आत्मनो मध्ये प्रकेतै: प्रकृष्टाभि: प्रज्ञाभि: सहस्रवल्शं सहस्राण्यसंख्या वल्शा अंकुरा इव शास्त्रबोधा यस्मिंस्तं विज्ञानमय व्यवहारम्—Daya.) ; the hidden thousand-branched world (निण्यं तिरोहितं दुर्ज्ञानं ; निण्यं अन्तर्हितनाम, hidden, *Nigh.*III.25 ; सहस्रवल्शं सहस्रशाखं संसारम्—Sayana).

Sayana refers to world or Samsaram, the revolving world of various living beings or the succession of many births. Perhaps an allusion is intended ; i.e. , a reference to the repeated births of Vasistha (a plural here being put for the singular).

Yamena tatam paridhim vayantah apsarasah upa seduh vasisthah— (यो अप्सरसो यमेन सह ततं परिधिं वयन्तः वसिष्ठाः : prose order by Daya.) .

Yamena, by the presiding Lord ; by the regulator of all (यमेन नियंत्रा जगदीश्वरेण—Daya.) ; कारणात्मना सर्वनियन्त्रा—Sayana.

Apsarasah, they who move in water or interspace. (अप्सरसः या अप्स्वन्तरिक्षे सरन्ति गच्छन्ति ताः —Daya.).

tatam, spread, pervaded, extensive (ततं व्याप्तं—Daya ; विस्तृतं —Sayana).

vayantah, permeating, spreading over ; weaving (वयन्तः व्याप्नुवन्तः —Daya.).

paridhim, circumscribing line of the world ; cover (परिधिं सर्वलोकावरणम्—Daya. ; वस्त्रं—Sayana). Wilson translates the line as : The apsaras sit down (उपसेदुः), wearing the vesture spread out by Yama. According to Wilson, the word Vasisthah has no business in this part of the construction, and must be connected with the first word in the verse, te (ते)—ते वसिष्ठाः i.e. these Vasisthas or that Vasistha.

Wilson sees in this line an allusion to Urvasi, उर्वशी, a nymph, who sat down or approached in the capacity of a mother (जननीत्वेन), wearing that vesture, which she was destined by former acts to wear.

10. Agastyo yat tva visah ajabhara, in as much as Agastya bore thee from thy abode.

Agastye, the one who has got rid of his shortcomings ; a faultless person (अगस्त्यः अस्तदोषः —Daya).

Vasistha, O eminently learned (वसिष्ठ प्रशस्त विद्वन्! —Daya.).

Visah, people (विशः प्रजाः —Daya.). We two, Mitra and Varuna, will beget (निवेशनात् मित्रावरुणौ आवां जनयिष्याव: —Sayana).

Ajabhara, surrounding from all sides (आजभार समन्ताद् बिभर्ति —Daya. ; आजहार—Sayana).

Apasyatam, the two divinities determined this Vasistha shall be begotten by us (अपश्यताम् । आवाभ्यामयं जायेतेति समकल्पतामित्यर्थ:).

The alternative meanings proposed by Sayana are: (i) "When Agastya took thee from the former condition, we two, Mitra and Varuna, will beget or (ii) the two divinities determined this Vasistha shall be begotten by us."

We have another plausible interpretation of this verse ; where Agastya is the sun, Vasistha represents the widely present water(vapour or liquid) : O widely present water, Mitra and Varuna gases, having left their original form under an electric spark, see you (वसिष्ठ! विद्युत: ज्योति: परिमञ्चिहानं यत् त्वा । मित्रावरुणौ अपश्यतां) that you are born of them, therefore one of your names is janma (तत् ते एकं जन्म) ; and the one whom the Sun has produced for the sake of people (उत यत् त्वा अगस्त्य: विश: आजभार), is of the name janma (see Nigh. जन्म=जलनाम I.12 ; which is a synonym of water).

The same theme is taken up by the next verse.

O Vasistha ; thou art a son of Mitra and Varuna. O Brahmana, thou wert born from the mind of Urvasi, (thou art) the drop that fell in divine fervour. All the gods received thee in the atmosphere.

Drop ; it is well nourished, it is to be absorbed. All the gods supported thee in the atmosphere. Puskaram means atmosphere ; it nourishes (पोषति) created beings. Water is called puskaram, because it is a means of worship (पूजाकरम्), or to be worshipped (यज्). The other meaning of puskara is lotus also, derived from the same root. It is a means of decorating the body (वपुष-करम्) ; अप्यसि मैत्रावरुणो वसिष्ठ: । उर्वश्या ब्रह्मन् मनसोऽधिजात: । द्रप्सं स्कन्नम् । ब्रह्मणा दैव्येन । द्रप्स: संभृत: । प्सानीयो भवति । सर्वे देवा: पुष्करे त्वाधारयन्त । पुष्करमन्तरिक्षम् । पोषति भूतानि । उदकं पुष्करम् । पूजाकरम् । पूजयितव्यम् इदमपीतरत्पुष्करमेतस्मादेव । पुष्करं वपुष्करं वा—Nir.V.14).

Maitra-varunah—the knower of prana and udana vital forces

(मैत्रावरुण: मित्रावरुणयो प्राणोदानयोरयं वेत्ता—Daya.).

Vasistha, O fully accomplished scholar (वसिष्ठ ! पूर्ण विद्वन्! —Daya.).

Urvasyah, of special knowledge (उर्वशीति पदनाम—Nigh.IV.2; —Daya).

Puskara, in the midspace (पुष्कर=अन्तरिक्षनाम Nigh.I.3).

Drapsam, charming, attractive (द्रप्सं कमनीयं—Daya.).

Brahman, O the knower of the Veda or divine knowledge (ब्रह्मन् सकलवेदवित्—Daya.).

12. Yamena, by the air or lightning (यमेन वायुना विद्युता वा—Daya.).

Apsarasah, out of air or wind flowing in the mid-space (अप्सरस: अन्तरिक्षचराद् वायो: —Daya.).

Vasisthah, prominently present (वसिष्ठ: अतिशयेन वसुमान्—Daya.).

13. Satre—In a prolonged or big sacrifice (सत्रे दीर्घे यज्ञे—Daya. ; बहु कर्तृके यागे—Sayana).

Kumbhe, in the pot (कुम्भे कलशे—Daya.) ; in vasativara (vessel —Sayana) ; the ocean is the pot from which rises the sun.

Retah, moisture ; vital fluid ; enlightenment (रेत: उदकमिव विज्ञानम् —Daya.).

Tatah, from that (pot, the vasativare, तत: वासतीवरात् कुम्भात् —Sayana).

Manah, measure (मान: शयीप्राण:—Sayana) ; one which measures or who agrees (यो मन्यते स:—Daya.).

Manah (मान:) is also said to be the name of Agastya (the Sun) with reference to his being of the measure of a span at his birth (उदियाय ततोऽगस्त्य: शम्यामात्रो महातपा: । मानेन समितो यस्मात्तस्मान्मान्य इहोच्यते । यद्वा कुम्भादृषि जात: कुम्भेनापि हि मीयते । कुम्भ इत्यभिधानं च परिमाणस्य लक्ष्यते । ततोऽप्सु गृह्यमाणासु वसिष्ठ: पुष्करे स्थित: । सर्वत: पुष्करे तंहि विश्वे देवा अधारयन्).

Then Agastya, of great glory, arose being of the length of a peg (शम्या). Because he was meted with a measure, he is here called manya (मान्य) ; or else because the seer was born from a jar. For measurement is made with jar also. By jar the designation of a measure of capacity (परिमाण) is indicated. Then as waters were being taken up (गृह्यमाण), Vasistha was found standing on a lotus (पुष्कर). There on every side the all gods supported the lotus. (Brhaddevata, V.152-155).

14. Pratrdah, the dispeller of ignorance and other evils (प्रतृद: प्रकर्षेण विद्यादिदोष हिंसक: —Daya.).

According to Sayana, Pratrd is same as Trtsu (प्रतृद इति तृत्सव एवाभिधीयन्ते नामान्तरेण—Sayana).

Gravanam, abhisavana, the pressing stone (ग्रावाणं अभिषवणं —Sayana) ; like the Sun or the cloud (सूर्यं मेघमिव—Daya.).

Uktha-bhrtam, the adept in or the one who adopts the Rgveda (उक्थभृतं य ऋग्वेदं बिभर्त्ति—Daya. ; शस्त्राणां संभक्तारम्—Sayana); the reciter of the prayer.

Sama-bhrtam, the adept in the Samaveda (सामभृतं यो सामवेदं दधाति —Daya. ; उद्गातारं बिभर्ति—Sayana) ; the chanter of the hymn.

Hymn-34

For verses 16, 17 and 22, see Nir. X.44; X.45 and VI.14 respectively.

1. Sutastah, constructed by a good mechanic or carpenter (सुतष्ट: उत्तमेन शिल्पिना निर्मित:—Daya.) ; well-constructed ; well-ordained (सुसंस्कृत:—Sayana).

Manisa, praise (मनीषा स्तुति:—Sayana) ; supreme wisdom (प्रज्ञा —Daya.).

2. Adhah ksarantih apah prthivya divo janitram viduh—The flowing waters know the origin of earth and heaven. See Manu. (I.8), where it has been stated that water was the first thing created: अप एव ससर्जादौ तासु बीजमवासृजत ।

11. राष्ट्रानां=राष्ट्राणां, of the kingdoms (अत्र वा छन्दसीति णत्वाभाव: —Daya.).

13. Rapah, sins, blemishes (रप: अपराधम्—Daya. ; पापं देवा:—Sayana).

15. Sajuh devebhih, along or associated with learned people ; along with the gods or Nature's bounties (सजू: सहवर्तमान: देवेभि: विद्वद्भि-दिव्यो पृथिव्यादिभिर्वा—Daya.).

Apam napatam, grandson of waters (i.e. fire); the one who does not cause the fall of waters, i.e. clouds (अपां जलानां नपातं यो न पतति न नश्यति तं मेघमिव —Daya.).

Apam napat, is explained by the offspring of the self (tanu-napat). See X.30.4 also (अपांनपान्मधुमतीरपो दाद्याभिरिन्द्रो वावृधे वीर्याय)—For Tanunapat, see earlier references. Nir.VIII.5-6.

16. Budhne; बुध्ने—"With hymns, thou singest the praise of Ahi, born in the waters, sitting in the lowest parts of the rivers, in vapours."

Here budhnam, (बुध्नम्) means atmosphere: waters are held bound in it; the other word budhnam (body) is derived from the same root also i.e. breath is held bound in it. He, who is Ahi, is budhnya, i.e. a dweller in atmosphere, budhnam, meaning atmosphere. (बुध्नमन्तरिक्षम्। बद्धा अस्मिन्धृता आप [इति वा]। इदमपीतरद् बुध्नमेतस्मादेव। बद्धा अस्मिन्धृता: प्राणा इति। Nir. X.44).

षीदन्=सीदन्=तिष्ठन् (Daya.).

17. Ahirbudhnam, (अहिर्बुध्नम्)—"May Ahi, who dwells in the atmosphere not put us to hurt. May the sacrifice of this man, the lover of sacred rites, never fail." (Nir.X.45).

2. Birite, in the midspace (बीरिटे अन्तरिक्षे—Daya.; Nir.V .28).

For them he twisted the grass soft to tread, in the atmosphere they appear like lords of all creation. At night, at dawn, at men's earliest call, may Vasu and Pusan come with their teams for our welfare.

Biritam, means atmosphere; it is full of fear or light. Or else, it is used for the sake of comparison, i.e. they appear like kings, lords of all, in a great multitude of men. At the termination of night, at the earliest call of men, may Vayu and Pusan come with their teams for our welfare, i.e. protection (Nir.V.28). With his team, i.e. niyutvan, one whose steeds are yoked. "Yoked" is so called, from being restrained or yoked. (बीरिटमन्तरिक्षम्। भियो वा भासो वा ततिः। अपि वोपमार्थे स्यात्। सर्वपती इव राजानौ। वीरिटे गणे मनुष्याणाम्। रात्र्या विवासे पूर्वस्यामभिहूतौ। वायुश्च नियुत्वान्। पूषा च स्वस्त्ययनाय। नियुत्वान्नियुतोऽस्याश्वाः। नियुतो नियमनाद्वा। नियोजनाद् वा।—Nir.V.28).

3. श्रोता=श्रोत (शृणुत)-(द्व्यचोऽतस्तिङ इति दीर्घः Panini.VI.3.134). The verse has been quoted by Nir.XII.43.

The divine Vasus have here enjoyed themselves with earth (jma, ज्मा, means earth, Nigh.I.1). The bright ones have embellished themselves in the wide atmosphere. O you, moving in extensive space, make your paths hitherward.

Listen to this our messenger, i.e. Agni, who has started on his journey.

Urujrayah, swift moving (उरुज्रय: बहुगन्तार:—Daya., Swift moving Vasus and Maruts, प्रभूतगमना वसुवो मरुतश्च—Sayana).

4. Umah, guardians (ऊमा: रक्षादि कर्त्तार:—Daya.; रक्षका:—Sayana).

Nasatyas—tan adhvara usatah yaksi agne Srusti bhagam nasatya purandhim—O Agni, sacrifice quickly for them, i.e. wise Bhaga and Nasatyas, who are longing for it, in this sacrifice, i.e. Bhaga and Nasatyas, i.e. Asvins. "They are ever true and never false," says Aurnavabha. "They are promoters of truth", says Agrayana, or else they are so called, because they are nose-born (nasatye from nasa, nose, nasika (नासत्यौ चाश्विनौ। सत्यावेव नासत्यावित्यौर्णवाभ:। सत्यस्य प्रणेता रावित्याग्रायण:। नासिकाप्रभवौ बभूवतुरिति वा—Nir.VI.13).

Purandhih—purandhi (पुरन्धि) means very wise. With reference to this, who is very wise? Some think it to be the epithet of Bhaga, who is placed prior to it (in this verse); according to others, it refers to Indra; he is of manifold activities, and the most dreadful shatterer of cities. Others take it to mean Varuna, i.e. who is praised with regard to his intelligence. (पुरन्धिर्बहुधी:। तत्क: पुरन्धि। भग: पुरस्तात्तस्यान्वादेश इत्येकम्। इन्द्र इत्यपरम्। स बहुकर्मतम:। पुरां च दारयितृतम:। वरुण इत्यपरम्। तं प्रज्ञया स्तौति—Nir.VI.13).

5. For Agni, Varuna, Indra, Mitra, Aryaman, Visnu, Sarasvati, and Maruts, see our earlier notes.

6. धाता=धात (दधाति) (द्व्यचोऽतस्तिङ इति दीर्घ: —Panini VI.3.134).

7. Candrah, the conferers of joy (चन्द्रा: आह्लादकरा:—Daya.).

Arkam, praise, honour, food, thought (अर्कं सत्कर्त्तव्यं मंत्रं विचारं वा —Daya.; food, अन्नं—Sayana; Nigh.II.7).

Hymn-40

1. Srustih. satisfaction (श्रुष्टि: सुखमस्मात्—Sayana); speedy in action (ग्राशुकारी—Daya.).

O, vocative (ग्रो सम्बोधने—Daya.; ग्रो ग्रा—Sayana).

Vidathesu, in the yajna, sacrifice, battle, or assembly (विदथेषु संग्रामादिषु व्यवहारेषु भवा—Daya.).

Ratninah, of the wealth-bestowing persons or deities (रत्निनः बहूनि रत्नानि धनानि विद्यन्ते येषु तान्—Daya. ; रमणीय धनवतः—Sayana).

Vibhage, in the apportionment (विभागे दाने—Sayana) विशेषेण भजनीये व्यवहारे—Daya.).

2. For Mitra, Varuna, Rodasi, Indra, Aryaman, Aditi, Vayu and Bhaga, see our earlier notes. (मित्रः सखा, वरुणः जलसमुदायः , रोदसी द्यावापृथिवी, इन्द्रः परमेश्वर्यो राजा, ग्रर्यमा न्यायकारी, देवी विदुषी, ग्रदितिः स्वरूपेणाखण्डिता, वायुः पवनः , भगःऐश्वर्यवान्—Daya.).

3. Prsat-asvah—O, the ones whose steeds are spotted-deers (हे पृषद् ग्रश्वाः ! पृषच्छब्देन केचिन्मृगविशेषा उच्यन्ते । त एवाश्वा वाहा येषां ते—Sayana; this refers to Maruts); those who use a transport, or a fast-driven car driven by water, steam, fire, etc. (पृषदश्वाः सिक्तजलादिनाऽऽशुगामिनो महान्तः —Daya.).

4. Neta, the leader in a sacrificial act of public service. Varuna is the leader of the eternal law (ऋतस्य नेता).

Anarva, unopposed (ग्रनर्वा केनाप्यप्रतिगता—Sayana; ग्रविद्यमानाश्व गमनेव —Daya.).

5. Milhusah, see earlier notes, I.155.4; 169.6; 173.12; II.8.1; IV.15.5; VI.66.3; VII.16.3.

Vayah, branches or ramifications (वयाः शाखा इव भवन्ति—Sayana); the attainers (वयाः प्रापकः—Daya.).

According to traditionalists, all the deities are as it were, branches of Visnu (अन्ये देवा: शाखा इव भवन्ति; विष्णु सर्वदेवता:—*Ait.Br.*I.1).

6. Parijma vatah, the circumambient Vata, the supreme wind, परितो गन्ता वायु:—Sayana; परिज्माय: परितस्सर्वतो गच्छति स: , वात: वायु:—Daya.).

7. For Rodasi, Vasistha; Varuna, Mitra, Agni, Chandrah, and Arka, see earlier notes. (रोदसी द्यावापृथिव्या इव; वसिष्ठैः अतिशयेन धनाढ्यैः ; ऋतावान् सत्यस्य प्रकाशिका: : वरुण: जलमिव; मित्र: सखेव प्रियाचार: ; अग्नि: पावक इव प्रकाशितयशा: ; चन्द्रा: आनन्ददा: ; अर्कं सत्कर्तव्यं धनधान्यम् —Daya.).

For the entire hymn, see Yajurveda, XXXIV.34—40.

For Agni, Indra, Mitra, Varuna, Asvins, Bhaga, Pusan, Brahmanaspati, Soma, and Rudra, see our previous notes.

The entire hymn is an invocation to Bhaga and Dawns.

7. Asvavati, the possessor and bestower of horses;

Gomatih, the possessor and bestower of cows, cattle (or rays).

Viravatih, the possessor and bestower of males progeny and brave descendants.

Hymn-42

1. Brahmanah—persons, well-versed in the four Vedas (ब्रह्माण: चतुर्वेदविद: —Daya.).

Angirasah—pervious to all disciplines of knowledge like vital breaths (अङ्गिरस: प्राणाइव सद्विद्यासु व्याप्ता—Daya.); seers of this clan (एतन्नामका ऋषय:—Sayana).

Krandanuh; the invoker; the evoker (क्रन्दनु: आह्वाता—Daya.); synonym of parjanya or cloud (क्रन्दनु पर्जन्य:—Sayana); (क्रदि , to cry or roar, क्रदि आह्वाने रोदने च).

Dhenavah, cows, words or speech, rivers (धेनव: प्रीणयित्र्यो नद्य: —Sayana; दुग्धो दात्र्यो गाव इव वाच: —Daya.).

2. Rohitah, like rivers (रोहिता नद्य इव—Daya.; रोहित=नदी—Nigh.I. 13). Also red like blood (रोहित: लोहितवर्णा:—Sayana); ruddy horses.

Haritah, like a cardinal direction (हरित:=दिक्—Nigh.I.6.) (दिश इव हरित: —Daya.); also green (हरित: श्याम वर्णा: —Sayana).Also the hay.

3. Namobhih, by foods (नमोभि: अन्नादिभि:—Daya.). The yajamans, or the reciters offering salutations (नमोभि: नमस्कारैर्युक्ता इमे स्तोतारो वा यजमाना वा —Sayana).

4. Durone, in the house (दुरोणे गृहे—Daya. ;—Sayana).

Atithih, fire, the guest of all (अतिथि: सर्वेषामतिथि भूतोऽग्नि:—Sayana); the preceptor of truth (अतिथि: सत्योपदेशक:—Daya.) Also the visitor without an appointment of date or time (अतिथि: अनियततिथि:—Daya.); a preceptor public servant, or mendicant always mobile (महाविद्वान् भ्रमणशील उपदेष्टा परोपकारी मनुष्य:—Daya.; on I.73. 1.; always in transit, that is fire or agni (सततगन्ता अग्नि:—Daya. on III.2.2) (derived also from अतति गतिकर्मा—Nigh.II. 14; अत सातत्यगमने धातेर् इथिन् प्रत्यय:).

5. Nakta, night (नक्ता रात्रिम्—Daya.).

Usasa, along with day (उषसा दिवसश्च—Sayana; दिनेन—Daya.).

कृधी=कृधि (अत्र द्वयच० दीर्घ: Panini, VI.3.134).

6. Vasisthah, superb among Vasus (वसिष्ठ: अतिशयेन वसु:—Daya.); i.e. the richest one; a seer of this name (Sayana).

Vajam, food or learning (वाजं विज्ञानमन्नं वा—Daya.).

Hymn-43

1. Visvak, everywhere (विष्वक् विषु व्याप्तं अञ्चतीति—Daya.; from all sides (विष्वक् विश्वत: —Sayana).

Viprah, the learned or intellectual men (मेधाविन:—Sayana).

2. Ghrtacih, the night (घृताची: या घृतमुदकमञ्चति ता रात्री:—Daya.); ladle, घृताची: स्रुच:—Sayana); a synonym of night (Nigh.I.VII). (see III.30.7) —घृताची सुखप्रदा रात्रीव—Daya.; the flame which receives, या घृतमुदकमञ्चति प्राप्नोत्यनयाऽऽदानक्रियया सा—Yv. II. 6 ;—Daya.

For reference, see

घृताच्या — III.27.1.

4. A gantana samanasah, come here with one accord (आगन्तन प्राप्नुत समनस: समान विज्ञाना:—Daya.). This is followed with words यति स्थ (yati-stha) Wilson's note on this is: "Stha may be the second person. of as, to be; but it is difficult to assign a meaning to yati, unless it is intended, or an error, for yadi, if, when the sentence may be rendered, "if you are of one mind."

Also (यति प्रयतन्ते यस्मिन् तस्मिन् स्थ भवत्—Daya.; the one in which one makes an effort).

5. एवा=एव (निपातस्यचेति दीर्घ: Panini, VI.3.135).

Hymn-44

1. The following renderings may be helpful for understanding this verse. Dadhikra, दधिक्रा, cyclonic force; asvina, अश्विना, twinsdivine; usasam, उषसं, dawn; agnim अग्निं, fire divine; bhagam, भगं, the gracious one; indram, इन्द्रं, the lightning; Visnum, विष्णुं, the pervading one; pusanam, पूषणं, the sustainer; brahmanaspatim, ब्रह्मणस्पतिं, one superintending the universe; adityah, आदित्या:, the months; apah, आप:, oceans; and svah, स्व:, the sun.

According to Sayana, dadhikra is the deity of horse (दधिक्रां अश्वाभिमानिनीं देवतां); Dayananda derives it thus: दधिक्रां यो धारकान् क्रामति or the one who successively works through all sustaining forces; or the one who gives the periodic movements to earth etc. (पृथिव्यादि धारकाणां क्रमितारम्).

2. Bodhayantah, arousing (बोधयन्त:).

Ut-iranah, (उत्ऽईराणा:); the one possessing the highest knowledge (उदीराणा: उत्कृष्टं ज्ञानं प्राप्ता:—Daya.); animating ones (उदीराणां प्रेरयन्त:—Sayana).

3. Babhrum, sustainer (बभ्रुं धारकं पोषकं वा—Daya.); also the brown horse (बभ्रुंपिंगलवर्णमश्वम्—Sayana).

यावयन्तु=यवयन्तु (संहितायाम्—Panini, VI.1.70); to separate (यवयन्तु पृथक् कुर्वन्तु—Sayana ; दूरी कुर्वन्तु—Daya.).

4. Adityebhih, by months; (आदित्येभि: संवत्सरस्य मासै:—Daya.).

Suryena, by the sun (सूर्येण सविता—Daya.).

Vasubhih, by the Vasus, the abodes, or planets (वसुभि: पृथिव्यादिभि: —Daya.).

Angirah-bhih, by vital winds (अंगिर:र्भि: वायुभि:—Daya.).

5. Amurah, those who are never perturbed, never perplexed ones (अमूरा: अमूढा: विद्वांस:—Daya.; अमूढा:—Sayana).

Hymn-45

1. Nivesayam ca prasuvam ca bhuma,

Tranquillising and animating living beings (Wilson); according to Sayana, bhuma means living beings (भूम भूतानि); nivesayam, placing at one's own station during night (निवेशयञ्च रात्रिषु स्वे स्थाने स्थापयञ्च—Sayana).

Prasuvam, animating during the day (प्रसुवञ्च अह: सु प्रेरयंश्च—Sayana).

According to Dayananda, however, bhuma is bhavema, भवेम, may we be so. May we become like the sun, who whilst entering animates (निवेशयन् प्रवेशयन् प्रसुवन् प्रसुवन्ति यस्मिन् तदैश्वर्यम् ; भूम भवेम—Daya.).

2. Surah cit asmai anu dat apasyam, may the sun impart energy to him. Here sura means the sun, and asmai (him) stands for Savita अस्मै सवित्रे—Sayana); or for a learned person (Daya.).

Apasyam, the desire for acts (अपस्यां आत्मन: कर्मेच्छां—Daya.; —Sayana).

4. Vayah, food (वय: अन्नम् –Sayana); life (वय: जीवनं or life span —Daya.).

Ayuh, is a synonym of food (Nigh.II.7); hence vayah=ayuh= annam=food.

Hymn-46

For verses 1 and 3, see Nir. X.6 and X.7 respectively.

1. Rudra, he is so called because he bellows (रौति); or because he runs (द्रवति) vociferating (int. of ru), or it is derived from the causal of tne verb rud, to roar (Nir.X.5): रुद्रो रौतीति सतः। रोरूयमाणो द्रवतीति वा। रोदयतेर्वा। यदरुदत् तद् रुद्रस्य रूद्रत्वम् (Kathakas. XXV.1); यद अरोदीत् तद् रुद्रस्य रुद्रत्वं (Taitt.S. I.5.1.1) (Nir.X.5).

Bear these songs to Rudra of strong bow and swift arrows, the god rich in food, irresistible, the assailant, the disposer, armed with sharp weapons; may he hear us.

The word tigma (तिग्म) is derived from tij (√तिज्), meaning to sharpen (तिग्मं तेजते:).

Ayudham, (weapon) is so called from killing (आयुधमायोधनात्—Nir. X.6).

3. May that bright weapon of thine which is hurled down from heaven, i.e. from beyond heaven, flies on earth, avoid us. O god of authoritative speech, thou hast a thousand medicines; dost thou not hurt our sons and descendants.

Didyut, दिद्युत् (bright weapon) is derived from the root do (to cut), दिद्युत् द्युतेर्वा, द्योततेर्वा or from dyu, to assail, or from dyut, to shine.

Ksma, क्ष्मा, means earth; it flies on it or along it; or else it flies, bringing destruction (क्ष्मया चरति। क्ष्मा पृथिवी। तस्यां चरति। विक्ष्मापयन्ती चरतीति वा)

Sahasram te svapivata bhesaja—O god of authoritative speech, a thousand medicines belong to thee; (सहस्रं ते स्वाप्तवचन भेषज्यानि).

Do thou not injure our sons and grandsons.

Tokam, (offspring) is derived from the verb tud, (√तुद्) (to push) —तोकं तुद्यते: ।

Tanayam, (son) is derived from the verb tan, (√तन्), to spread. —Nir. X.7.

Dayananda translates tokam as a newly-born baby, and tanaya, as a young boy (तोकेषु सद्योजातेष्वपत्येषु , तनयेषु सुकुमारेषु).

Hymn-47

For verse 3, see Nir. V. 6.

1. Apah, waters (water-god, हे आप: अब्द देवता:—Sayana; learned persons like waters, जलानीव विद्वांस:—Daya.).

Ilah, speech (इल: वाच:—Daya.; Nigh. I.11). Sweet essence of the earth (इल: इलाया: भूम्या: सम्भूतं—Sayana).

Ariparam, faultless; without sin (अरिप्रं निष्पापं निर्दोषं—Daya. ; पापरहितं —Sayana).

Urmim, name of Soma juice (ऊर्मिं सोमाख्यं—Sayana); the wave, wave-like (तरङ्गमिव उच्छ्रितं—Daya.).

Ghrtaprusam, rain-shedding (घृतप्रुषं वृष्टि लक्षणमुदकं सिञ्चन्तं—Sayana; घृतेनोदकेनाज्येन वा सिक्तं, drenched with butter or water—Daya.).

Indrapanam, beverage of Indra (इन्द्रपानं इन्द्रेण पातव्यं); anything worth attaining by the self or soul (इन्द्रस्य जीवस्य पातुमर्हम्—Daya.).

3. Sata-pavitrah svadhaya madantih, शत पवित्रा: स्वधया मदन्ती: ; here the word pavitram is derived from √पू , to purify (पवित्रं पुनाते:);

(i) Mantra, or stanza is called pavitra as in the Samaveda II.652 (येन देवा: पवित्रेणात्मानं पुनते सदा , the stanza with which the gods always purify themselves);

(ii) Rays are also called pavitram (रश्मय: पवित्रमुच्यन्ते) as in गभस्तिपूत: (purified by rays, fragment of—Yv.VII.1);

(iii) Water is also called pavitram (आप: पवित्रमुच्यन्ते), as in this present verse, having a hundred waters (i.e. streams rejoicing with food). Besides fire, air, Soma, the sun and Indra are also called pavitram (अग्नि: पवित्रं समापुनातु वायु: सोम: सूर्य इन्द्र: । पवित्रं ते मा पुनन्तु an untraced quotation)—Nir. V. 6.

4. Gatum, a path by which waters (or clouds) could flow or issue (गातुं मेघेभ्यो निर्गमन साधनं मार्ग—Sayana); also the earth (Daya., Nigh.I. 1).

For verse 2, see Nir. V.2.

1. The words ṛbhu, Vibhu and Vaja have different connotations in different contexts. As architects and technicians, they are connected with roadways, airways and waterways (Rv.40.IV.33.9; 34.1.). Ṛbhu (or ṛbhuksin) is associated with Indra i.e. with midspace (i.e. airways and spacecraft); Vaja was the artificer of the gods (their chariots and roadways); and vibhvan is associated with Varuna or oceans (i.e. the waterways and ships). See Hymns IV.33 to 37.

In another context, vibhu indicates a person devoted to high values of life, moral and spiritual; ṛbhu is an intellectual academician, whilst vaja represents a person devoted to physical wellbeing, — good, stout and strong in person.

One senior and elder is known as ṛbhuksa (ऋभुक्षेत्यृभूणां ज्येष्ठस्याख्या); and vaja is the junior and younger in rank (वाज इति तु कनिष्ठस्य—Sayana).

In the present verse, the word Vibhu does not occur, but being plural, by implication, it completes the group of three (अत्र "ऋभुक्षणो वाजाः" इति बहुवचनेन ऋभवस्त्रयो गृह्यन्ते—Sayana).

Ṛbhu, Vibhu and vaja are three brothers as if.

2. Ṛbhu, the word has been derived from uru the great (ऋभुः उरु भवन्तीत्यृभवः. Similarly, vibhu from vibhava, rich or powerful(विभ्वः विभवश्च सन्तः—Sayana).

Indrena yuja tarusema vṛttram, accompanied by Indra, may we slay vṛttra, (See Nir.V.2).

The words vanusyati and tarusyati both mean "to slay"; the grammatical forms may not be known (वनुष्यतिर्हन्तिकर्मा । अनवगत संस्कारो भवति । "वनुयाम वनुष्यतः" I.132.1; VIII.40.7. "दीर्घं प्रयज्युमति यो वनुष्यति वयं जयेम" VII.82.1; "तरुष्यतिरप्येवं कर्मा—Nir.V.2).

3. Uparatati, in a battle won with the help of missiles (उपरताति उपरतातौ पलैः मेघास्त्रादिभिः योद्धव्ये संग्रामे—Daya.) Upara is upala, a stone and hence in the war that is waged with weapons like stones (उपरैः उपलैः पाषाण-सदृशैरायुधैस्तायते विस्तार्यत इत्युपरिताति युद्धम्—Sayana).

Aryah, enemies (अर्यः अरीञ्छत्रून्—Sayana); a lord, a master (अर्यः स्वामी —Daya.).

Aryah Satroh, the subduers of enemies (अर्यः शत्रूणामभिगन्तारः सन्तः शत्रो: सम्बन्धि—Sayana).

4. Vasavah, those who indulge in learning and scholarship (वसव: ये विद्यायां वसन्ति ते—Daya.) the exalted ṛbhus (वसव: प्रशस्या ऋभव:—Sayana);

Vasu, being an epithet of ṛbhu.

नू=नु ; कर्त्तना=कर्त्तन ऋचितनुघेति दीर्घ:—Panini VI.3.132; and संहितायम्—VI.1.70.

Hymn-49

1. Samudra jyeṣṭhah, those amongst whom sea is the eldest or supermost (समुद्रज्येष्ठा: समुद्रा: ज्येष्ठो यासां ता: —Daya.); waters, with their ocean — chief (समुद्रोऽर्णवो ज्येष्ठ: प्रशस्यतमो यासामपां ता: —Sayana).

Salilasya madhyat, from the midst of the firmament (सलिलस्य अन्तरिक्ष नामैतत् । अन्तरिक्षस्य मध्यात् माध्यमिकात् स्थानात्—Sayana; अन्तरिक्षस्य मध्यात् —Daya.).

Rarada, sends forth; pours down; rains (रराद विलिखति वर्षयति —Daya.; लिखति—Sayana).

2. Khanitrima, (whose channels) have been dug (खनित्रिमा: खननेन निर्वृत्ता: —Sayana; या: खनित्रेण संजाता:—Daya.; the digging implement is khanitra.).

This stanza is a proof of the practice of irrigation (Wilson); formed, or perhaps stopped, by digging canals or reservoirs.

Samudrarthah, those that seek the ocean (समुद्रार्था: समुद्रायेम:—Daya.; समुद्र एवार्थो गन्तव्यो यासां ता: समुद्रार्था: —Sayana).

3. Satyanṛte avapasyan jananam, discriminating the truth and falsehood of mankind. (जनानां प्रजानां सत्यानृते सत्यं चानृतं च अवपश्यन् जानन्नित्यर्थ:

—Sayana; जनानां जीवानां सत्यानृत आचरणे अवपश्यन् यथार्थं विजानन् याति प्राप्नोति—Daya.).

4. Yasu, in which (यासु अन्तरिक्षे जलेषु प्राणेषु—Daya.; which standing for midspace, waters or vital breaths); in waters (यासु अप्सु—Sayana).

Hymn-50

1. Kulayayat, making a place or nest (कुलायं स्थानं तत्कुर्वत्—Sayana); whilst aspring for the well being of Kula or family (कुलाययत् कुलायं कुलोन्नतिं कामयमान: —Daya.).

Visvayat, specially increasing (विश्वयत् विशेषेण वर्धमानं—Sayana). Sayana supplies the substantive visam, the poison; let not the insiduous (कुलाययत्) and spreading (विश्वयत्) poison reach me (न आगन्).

Ajakavam, malignant (from ajaka, a disease अजकावम् अजकानाम रोगविशेष: , तद्वत् and thus malignant—Sayana.); to the one which inflicts pain or injury to creatures, (योऽजान् जीवान् कावयति पीडयति तम्—Daya.).

Duh-drsikam, undiscernible venom (दुःऽदृशीकम् दुर्दर्शनं विषं—Sayana; दु:खेन द्रष्टुं योग्यं—Daya.).

Tsaruh, the tortuous; what goes stealthily or crookedly (त्सरु: कुटिलगति: —Daya.; छद्मगामी ; जिह्मग: सर्प:–Sayana); an epithet for snake.

Padyena rapasa, from sin worth attaining (पद्येन प्राप्तुं रपसा पापेन —Daya.); by the sound of the foot-step (पद्येन पादभवेन रपसा शब्देन—Sayana; रपि: शब्दकर्मा).

2. Vijaman parusi, in the variously-born joints of trees and others (विजामन् विविध जन्मनि परुषि वृक्षादीनां पर्वणि—Sayana; it refers to the poison which is generated in the manifold knots of trees and the like.

Vandanam yat, a poison of this name (यत् विषम्).

Asthivantau kulphau, the poison which is smeared upon the knees or ankles (यच्चविषं ग्रष्ठीवन्तौ जानुनी कुल्फौ गुल्फौ च परिदेहत् उपचितं कुर्याद् —Sayana; ष्ठीवनं कफादिकमत्यजन्तौ—Daya.).

3. Salmalau, in the Salmali tree; the silk-cotton tree.

Salmala Malabarica. For Salmali, see:

शल्मलिम्—X.85.20.

शल्मलि—Yv.XXIII.13.

4. Asipadah bhavantu, communicating not disease. Sipada may be the name of a malady; cf. slipada, श्लीपद, the cochin leg. (ग्रशिपदा: । शिपदं नाम रोगविशेष: —Sayana); Dayananda derives from ग्रशि , food, ग्रशिपदा: भोजनादि व्यवहाराय प्राप्ता:).

Asimidah bhavantu, unproductive of harm (ग्रशिमिदा: । शिमिर्वधकर्मा । ग्रहिंसाप्रदा: —Sayana; भोजनादिस्नेहकारिका: भवन्तु—Daya.).

Simi, शिमि, means badha, बध, or killing; from this ग्रशिमिदा: =ग्र+शिमि+दा: not+killing+which gives=ग्रहिंसाप्रदा: not doing harm or injury.

Hymn-51

In this hymn, the deities (देवता:) are the Adityas, the suns (the twelve months of a year); born of, or associated with the Mother Infinity, Aditi.

1. Adititve, in the infinity (ग्रदितित्वे ग्रखण्डितत्वे—Daya.); also in independence (ग्रदितित्वे ग्रदीनत्वे—Sayana).

Adityanam, learned persons of the highest or supermost rank (ग्रादित्यानां पूर्णविद्यानां विदुषाम्—Daya.).

Anagastve, in sinlessness (अनागास्त्वे अनपराधत्वे—Sayana; अनपराधित्वे —Daya.).

2. Bhuvanasya gopah, guardians of the world (Bhuvanam is also a synonym of water, Nigh.I.12; भुवनस्य जलादेर्लोक समूहस्य—Daya.).

3. Adityah, twelve months of a year; the learned persons.

Marutah, mortal beings: cloud-bearing winds.

Ṛbhavah, the intellectuals (ऋभव: मेधाविन:—Daya.); the architects.

Indrah, the lightning; the resplendent; the king; the self.

Asvina, a pair of the sun and moon (अश्विना सूर्याचन्द्रमसौ—Daya.).

Hymn-52

1. Aditayasah, आदित्यास:, O Lord of celestial world, or months; O suns (here vocative by inversion, the first syllable is not udatta, व्यत्ययेनाद्युदात्तत्वाभाव: । यद्वा । आदित्यानामिम आदित्या: —Sayana).

Vasavah, वसव:, O Lord of cosmic life; O Vasus; (वसव: वासकादेवा: —Sayana); also whilst dwelling or residing वसव: निवसन्त: —Daya.).

Mitravaruna, O Mitra and Varuna; O prana (inbreath) and O udana, the upbreath.

Puh, पू:, protection (पालनं—Sayana); also a city (पू: नगरीव—Daya.).

Devatra, amongst gods or learned persons (देवत्रा देवेषु वर्त्तमाना:—Daya.; देवेषु—Sayana).

Aditayah, unbroken, independent (अदितय: अखण्डनीया: —Sayana; अखण्डिता: —Daya.).

2. Mitrah-varunah, the foremost amongst the gods of day and night (मित्र: वरूण: अहर्निशाभिमानिनौ देवावेतदाद्या: —Sayana). Mitra is friend like breath (प्राणइव सखा) and Varuna is sustainer like water (जलमिव पालक: —Daya.).

Tokaya-tanayaya, for our children and grandchildren (तोकाय अस्मदीयाय पुत्राय तनयाय तत्पुत्राय—Sayana).

मामहन्त=ममहन्त (तुजादीना दीर्घोऽभ्यासस्य—Panini VI.1.7).

3. Angirasah, vital processes (अंगिरस: प्राणा इव—Daya.); seers of this name (Sayana).

Turanyavah, prompt in doing or in actions, i.e. in sacred works (तुरण्यव: यज्ञादिकर्मसु त्वरिता: —Sayana; क्षिप्रं कर्त्तार: —Daya.).

Savituh, of or from the creator of the universe (सवितु: सकलजगदुत्पादकस्य परमेश्वरस्य—Daya.).

4. Samanasah, alike favourably minded (समनस: समान मनस्का: —Sayana; समानं मनोऽन्त:करणं येषां ते—Daya.).

Hymn-53

1. Sabadha, living or existing along with pain or obstacle (सबाध: बाधेन सह वर्त्तमान: —Daya.); attended by a group or a concourse (of priests) बाधा सहित: ; ऋत्विजां संबाधयुक्त इत्यर्थ:—Sayana).

Devaputre, of whom the learned are the sons; gods are the sons (देवपुत्रे देवा विद्वांस: पुत्रा: पुत्रवत् पालका: ययोस्ते—Daya.; देवा: पुत्रा: ययोस्ते—Sayana).

2. Rtasya sadane, in the halls of sacrifice, in the abodes of truth (सदने सीदन्ति ययोस्ते । ऋतस्य सत्यस्य—Daya.; ऋतस्य यज्ञस्य सदने स्थानभूते—Sayana).

Navyasibhih-girbhih, with new songs or new praises (नव्यसीभि: नवतराभि: स्तुतिरूपाभिर्वाग्भि: —Sayana).

Purvaje pitara, the previously born parents and the like (पूर्वजे पूर्वस्माज्जाते पितरा मातृ पितृवद् वर्त्तमाने); the ancient of all beings parents (पूर्वजे पूर्वं प्रजाते पितरा पितरौ विश्वस्य मातापितृभूते द्यावापृथिव्यौ—Sayana).

Dyava-pr̥thivi, a pair of earth and lightning (द्यावापृथिवी भूमिविद्युतौ —Daya.).

Varutham, status, stature; protecting wealth (Wilson); worth selection (अस्माभिर्वरणीयं—Sayana); nice residence (वरूथं वरं गृहम्—Daya.).

3. Yuyam pata svastibhih sadanah, यूयं पात स्वस्तिभि: सदा न: , may you all ever cherish us with your blessings. For these termining lines, see the following also (mostly in the Book VII of the R̥gveda).

Ratnadheyani, precious wealth (रत्नधेयानि रमणीयानि धनानि—Sayana); रत्नानि धीयन्ते येषु तानि—Daya.).

Hymn-54

1. Vastospate, lord or promoter of the house (वास्तो: वासहेतोर्गृहस्य पते स्वामिन्—Daya.; गृहस्य पालयितर्देव त्वम्—Sayana).

भवा=भव (अत्र द्वयचो० इतिदीर्घः —Panini VI.3.134).

2. Gayasphanah, promoter of the house (गयस्फानः गृहस्य वर्धकः—Daya); augmenter of our wealth. (गयस्य अस्मदीयस्य धनस्य स्फाययिता प्रवर्धकः —Sayana).

For gaya=wealth , धनं (Nigh.II.10).

Indo, O bestower of bliss (इन्दो आनन्दप्रद—Daya.); O Indra, exhilarating like Soma (हे इन्दो सोमवद् आह्लादक—Sayana).

3. Kseme, in preserving what has been acquired (क्षेमे प्राप्तस्यरक्षणे —Sayana; क्षेमे रक्षणे—Daya.).

Yoge, in earning or acquisition of what one has not (योगे अप्राप्तस्य प्रापणे—Sayana; अनुपात्तस्योपात्तलक्षणे— Daya.).

For the pair of Ksema and Yoga, see V.37.5; VII.54.3; 86.8; X.89.10.

For verse 1, see Nir. X.17.

There are two anecdotes regarding this hymn. One in the Bṛhaddevata (बृहद्देवता) is as follows:

During the night, Vasistha in a dream approached the house of Varuna. He then entered. A dog there ran at him, barking. Pacifying the hound which was making a din and running up with intent to bite, he lulled him to sleep with ihe two stanzas (यदर्जुन० and स्तेनं राय० 2,3). He sent him as well as the other attendants of Varuna to sleep. Then king Varuna bound him with his fetters, Bound thus, Vasistha praised his father (Varuna) with the four hymns (धीरा त्वस्य महिना० etc. VII 80;89). Then his father released him. As soon as the stanza, ध्रुवासु त्वासु० VII.88.7, had been uttered, the fetters dropped from him. (Bṛhad.VI.11.15).

Sayana reproduces another story from the Nitimanjari: Vasistha had passed three days without being able to get any food; on the night of the fourth, he entered the house of Varuna to steal something to eat, and had made his way to the larder, the Kosthagara, when the dog set upon him, but was put to sleep by these verses, wherefore they are to be recited on similar occasions by thieves and burglers.

This verse has been annotated by Yaska (Nir.X.17).

" O Lord of house (वास्तोष्पते), thou art the killer of disease (अमीवहा), wearing all forms (रूपाणि आविशन्). Be our very kind friend (सुखा सुशेव एधिनः)."

The word seva (शेव) is a synonym of happiness (शेव इति सुखनाम). The verb √शिष् takes the suffix va (व), which replaces the letter next to the penultimate (i.e. ष्) and optionally takes guna (शिष्यते: । वकारो नामकरण: । अन्तस्यान्तरोपलिङ्गी । विभाषितगुण: —Nir.X.17).

The word Siva (शि) is derived from the same root. He becomes the deity of all those forms that he longs for. (शिवमित्यप्यस्य भवति । यद् यद् रूपं कामयते तद् तद् देवता भवति—Nir X.17).

2. Arjuna Sarameye, white dog, born of mother.

Sarama, the bitch of gods, particularly Indra; therefore, known as Sarameya (हे अर्जुन श्वेत; हे सारमेय । सरमानामदेवशुनी तस्याः कुलोद्भव—Sayana). Sarameya is known as arjuna, i e. white and pingala i.e. tawny, too.

(पिशङ्ग केषुचिदङ्गेषु पिङ्गलवर्णवं भूत हे शुनक—Sayana).

The following are the references of Sarama (सरमा) in the Ṛgveda:

सरमा—Sarama—I.62.3; 72.8; III.31.6; IV.16.8; V.45.7; 8; X.108.1.

सारमेय—Sarameya (vocative): VII.55.2;3.

सारमेयौ—Sarameyau (a pair of offsprings of Sarama): X.14.3 Dayananda derives the word sarameya as the progenitor or producer of objects of reality and significance (सारमेयं साराणां निर्मातः). He also translates it as a learned woman (सरमा समान रमणा—V.45.7; सरानाप्तान् मानयति सा—V.45.8); as mother, the instinct by which right and wrong is discriminated (सरान् विद्याधर्मबोधान् मिमीते तया-I.62.3); the straightforward policy (या सरति सा सरला नीतिः —IV.16.8); one who measures the moving objects (या सरान् गतिमतः पदार्थान् मिनोति सा (माता, III.31.6).

Sarama, is derived from √सृ, moving (सरमा सरणात्—Nir.XI.24; Rv.X.108.1); with what desire has Sarama attained this place? Sarama and Sarasvati are both derived from the same root √सृ, to move. It is discriminating instinct which effuses out in inner consciousness. It crosses the waters of the Rasa, the divine stream of spirituality. (रसाया अन्तरः पयांसि—I.108.1).

Sarasvati, (Nir.II.23) is one of the 57 synonyms of speech (Vac, वाच्, to speak). The word is used in the sense of a river and in the sense of speech (तत्र सरस्वतीत्येतस्य नदीवद् देवतावच्च निगमा भवन्ति, Nir.II.23). We have a passage. Let us worship Sarasvati who sweeps what is far and what is near alike, with well-composed hymns for our protection. (पारावतघ्नीमवसे सुवृक्तिभिः सरस्वतीमा विवासेम धीतिभिः (VI.61.2).

This Sarasvati is not a mundane river; she is a divine stream that flows out of the pure consciousness and protects us in every way. Sarama is a bye-stream emerging out of the same source.

Vi-iva, like a bird (वीव पक्षीव—Daya.); exceedingly (वीव विशेषेण —Sayana).

Datah, teeth (दत: दन्तान्—Daya ; Sayana).

Srakvesu, in the gums; in the corner of the mouth (स्रक्वेषु स्रक्वासु भासन्ते। स्रक्वाश शब्द श्रोष्ठ प्रदेश विशेष वाचीत्यर्थ: , the corner of the mouth, the jaw —Sayana; M. Williams).

Ṛstayah, lances (ऋष्टय: श्रायुधानि—Sayana) you display your teeth against me, bristling (भ्राजन्ते) like lances (ऋष्टय:) in your gums (स्रक्वेषु).

Vapsatah, whilst eating (वप्सत: भक्षयत:—Daya.; भक्षयतस्तव दन्ता: —Sayana).

Ni su svapa, go quitely to sleep (निषुस्वप शयस्व—Daya.).

3. Stenaṃ, thief (स्तेनं चोरं—Daya.); one who steals privily or hidden property.

Taskaram, wicked person in the habit of openly carrying off others property (तस्करं दस्य्वादिकम्—Daya.).

Stotṛn indrasya rayasi kim, स्तोतॄन् इन्द्रस्य रायसि किम्—why do you shout at the worshippers of Indra?

4. Sukarasya, one who performs good actions (सूकरस्य य: सुष्ठु करोति —Daya.); to hog or the boar (सूकरस्य वराहस्य , द्वितीयार्थे षष्ठी—Sayana).

Tvam sukarasya dardṛhi tava dardartu sukarah, may you help in enhancing the prosperity of one who performs good actions, and the one who performs good actions would then wish you prosperity.

Alternatively,—Do you rend the hog; let the hog rend you (Wilson).

5. Sastu vispatih, may the householder sleep; literally, vispati is master of all (विश्पति: विशां जनानां पालको गृही), the householder, the promoter of every one in the house—Sayana; the same as prajapati, (प्रजापति: —Daya.). Sayana translates it as son-in-law also (विश्पति: जामाता).

7. Sahasrasṛngah vṛsabhah, the sun, the showerer of benefits, with a thousand rays. According to Sayana, through the worship of the sun, at a later date, Kumara was the patron of housebreakers.

Sahsrasṛngah, one with a thousand rays (सहस्रशृंग: सहस्रकिरण: —Sayana).

Vṛsabhah, वृषभ:, the showerer of benefits.

Yah, य: , it represents the sun.

8. Striyah yah punyagandhah, the women who were decorated with garlands of fragrant flowers on festival occasions, as at marriages and the like (स्त्रिय: पुण्यगन्धा: मङ्गल्यगन्धा: —Sayana).

Talpasivarih, lying on the bed (तल्पशीवरी ; तल्पशया: —Sayana; यास्तल्पेषु शेरते ता: —Daya.).

Prosthesayah, lying on the courtyard (प्रोष्ठेशया: प्राङ्गणे शयाना: —Sayana; या प्रोष्ठे अत्यन्त प्रोढे गृहे शेरता ता: —Daya.).

Vahyesayah, lying in litter (वह्येशया: वह्यं वाहनं , तस्मिन् शयाना: —Sayana; या वह्ये प्रापणीये शेरते ता: —Daya.).

Hymn- 56

1. Vyaktah, (vi+aktah) narah, the resplendent chiefs or leaders (व्यक्ता: विशेषेण प्रसिद्धा: कमनीया: नर: नेतारो मनुष्या: —Daya.; कान्तियुक्ता: नेतार: —Sayana).

Sanilah, dwellers in one abode (सनीला: समानं नीलं प्रशंसनीयं गृहं येषां ते —Daya.; समानौकस: —Sayana).

Maryah, friends of men (मर्या: मनुष्या: —Daya. ; मर्येभ्यो नृभ्यो हिता: —Sayana).

2. Vidre, know or obtain by themselves (विद्रे लभन्ते—Daya. ; स्वयमेव विदन्ति—Sayana).

3. Svapubhih, go together by their own sacred paths (स्वपूभि: शयानै-स्स्वकीयै: पवित्राचरणै: सह—Daya. ; स्वकीयै: पवनै: संचरणै: स्वयमेव सञ्चरन्त: —Sayana).

4. Ninya, white is complexion (निण्य: निण्यानि श्वेतवर्णानि—Sayana); definite (निश्चितानि—Daya.).

Prsnih, midspace (the mother of Maruts, मरुतां जननी—Sayana); steady and vast or deep like the midspace (पृश्नि: अन्तरिक्षमिव गम्भीराशयोऽक्षोभ: —Daya.).

Mahi, earth (मही पृथिवी—Daya.); great or vast (मही महती—Sayana).

5. Nrmnam, manly strength; wealth (नृम्णं धनम्—Daya. ; Nigh.-II.10; नृम्णं धनंबलं वा—Sayana).

Vit, people (विट् प्रजा—Daya.).

7. Turisman, to be prosperous or strong (तुविष्मान् बलवान्—Daya. ; वृद्धिमान्—Sayana).

8. Susmah, strength (शुष्म: बलम्—Sayana); strong body (बलयुक्तो देह: —Daya.).

11. Isminah, one desiring; one possessing food (इष्मिण: इच्छान्नादियुक्ता: —Daya.); one rapid in motion (गन्तार: —Sayana).

Suniskah, wearers of brilliant or gold ornaments (सुनिष्का: शोभना- लंकारा: —Sayana; शोभनानि निष्काणि सौवर्णानि येषां ते—Daya.). Later on, niska became a particular coin.

12. Ṛta-Sapah, the observer of law and order (ऋतसाप: ये ऋतेन सपन्ति प्रतिज्ञां कुर्वन्ति , i.e., those who promise to abide by truth—Daya.); since ṛta also means water, therefore ṛtasapah means shedders of water (ऋतसाप: ऋतमुदकं स्पृशन्तो मरुत: —Sayana).

Sucayah, pavakah, suci-janmanah, pure or shining, purifying and of pure birth (शुचय: दीप्यमाना: पावका: शोधका: शुचिजन्मन: शोभनजनना: —Sayana).

13. Khadayah, those who eat (खादय: ये खादन्ति ते—Daya.); particular ornaments (अलंकार विशेषा: —Sayana). (Amsesu Khadayah, अंसेषु खादय:, bright ornaments on your shoulders).

Vaksah su rukma, gold or shining pendants (of necklaces) on your breast. The text has only the word rukma, shining (रुक्म देदीप्यमाना: —Daya.; रोचमाना: —Sayana). Sayana supplies the word hara (हार) or necklace. Elsewhere the Maruts are said to have golden cuirasses on their breasts; rukma also probably implies the same (Wilson)

Rukma-vaksasah, रुक्मवक्षस: —II.34.2; V.55.1; 57.5; VIII.20.22; X.78.2.

The other references of rukma are :

रुक्मा इव, rukma-iva—V.61.12;

रुक्मम, rukmam—I.117.5; V.1.12.

रुक्मा:, rukmah—I.166.10; V.54.11; VII.56.13;

रुक्मान्, rukman—1.64.4;

रुक्मिभिः, rukmibhih—IX.15.5.

रुक्मी, rukmi—I.66.3.

रुक्मेभिः, rukmebhih—V.56.1.

रुक्मेषु, rukmesu—V.53.4.

रुक्मैः, rukmaih—V.52.6; VII.57.3.

In Nir. VIII.11, we have सुरुक्मे सुरोचने, shining beautifully (X.110.6).

14. Budhnyah, celestial; clouds of midspace (बुध्न्याः बुध्न्येऽन्तरिक्षेभवा मेघाः —Daya; बुध्न्यान्यन्तरिक्षे: —Sayana). (See Nir.X.44; 45; XII.33. He who is Ahi, is budhnya, dweller in atmosphere or midspace, budhnam meaning atmosphere—योऽहिः स बुध्न्यः । बुध्नमन्तरिक्षम्—X.44).

Namani tiradhvam, here namani means water (नामानि उदकानि।नामानि पांसून नमयन्तीति ; तिरध्वं वर्धयत्—Sayana; waters that beat down the dust).

Sahasriyam, multiplied a thousand-fold. How can one portion become thousandfold? Sayana answers by quoting an obscure text: यावदेका देवता कामयते यावदेका तावदाहुतिः प्रथते न हि तदस्ति यत्तावदेव स्याद्यावज्जुहोति, the amount of an offering is computed, not by its actual number, but by that assigned to it by the divinity to whom it is offered. (Tait, Br, III.2.6.4).

Prayajyavah, most adorable (प्रयज्यवा प्रकर्षेण संगेतारः —Daya.; प्रकर्षेण यष्टव्या मरुतः —Sayana).

5. यता=यत्र

Syenah na diyan anu eti pathah, he travels the path (or mid-space), darting along like a hawk (दीयन् गच्छन्—Sayana). Like a flying falcon, he sweeps down the atmosphere; here pathah (पाथः) means mid-space or atmosphere (पाथोऽन्तरिक्षम्—Nir.VI.7); as in this verse. Water is also called pathas, पाथस्, from pa (पा), to swallow (पाथोऽन्तरिक्षम्, उदकमिवपाथ उच्यते पानात्, Nir.VI.7; as in आचष्ट आसां पाथो नदीनाम्, VII.34.10; pathah is also food (अन्नमपि पाथ उच्यते पानादेव—Nir.VI.7; as in देवानां पाथ उपवक्षि विद्वान्—X.70.10).

Thus pathah (पाथ:) has three meanings, midspace, water and food.

Hymn-64

1. Rajasah, of water (रजस: उदकस्य—Sayana).

Pra vam ghrtasya nirnijo dadiran, impelled by you the clouds assume the form of rain; वां युवाभ्यां प्रेरिता मेघा: घृतस्य निर्णिज: उदकस्य रूपाणि ददीरन् ददते प्रयच्छन्ति—Sayana; alternatively, ghrtasya may mean butter, and in that case, oblations of butter are given to you (वां युवाभ्यां घृतस्य निर्णिजो रूपाणि। घृतानीत्यर्थ: । तानिददीरन् दीयन्ते—Sayana).

Hymn-68

1. Svasva, full of vital energies; good horses स्वश्वा=सु+अश्वा, शोभनाश्वौ। अश्वः कस्मात्। अश्नुतेऽध्वानम्। महाशनो भवतीति वा—Nir.II.27; : asva is so called because it trots on the road, or it eats too much. Nighantu gives 26 synonyms of asva (horse) of which the last eight are always used in plural (अव्यथयः, श्येनासः, सुपर्णाः, पतङ्गाः, नरः, शर्याणाम्).

Vitam, eat; participate in enjoying; partake (वीतं भक्षयतम्—Sayana; खादतम्—Venkata).

Yuvakoh, your adorer (युवाकोः युवां कामयमानस्य मम—Sayana: सेवमानौ युष्मत्कामस्य—Venkata).

2. Aryah, enemies (अर्यः अरेरस्मद् विरोधिनः —Sayana; शत्रून्—Venkata).

3. Manojava, swift as thought (मनोजवा, मनोवेगः —Sayana; Venkata).

Suryavasu, O dawn, the one who stays with the sun on the chariot (हे सूर्यावसू ! सूर्यायाः सह रथे वसन्तौ—Sayana; हे सूर्याया वासयितारौ—Venkata).

4. Valgu, the fair; the charming one (वल्गू सुन्दरौ इमाम्—Sayana; वल्गनशीलौ—Venkata).

5. Atraye, for Atri; for the one free from three involvements, for cyavana.

Nyatraye mahisvantam yuyotam, you have liberated Atri from the cave (see earlier references also), you separated the Mahisvata from Atri; mahisvat may be a synonym of ṛbisom, ऋबीसं, a word amongst the 132 or 134 words, at the end of the Nighantu of which there is no explanation (Nigh.IV.3; महिष्वन्तम् ऋबीसं—Sayana; महत्त्वयुक्तं –Venkata).

On an earlier occasion (Mandala I) ṛbise (ऋबीसे) is explained by Sayana as अपगत प्रकाशे पीडयन्त्र गृहे -i.e. in a dark house of implements of torture. According to Sayana elsewhere, it is equivalent to Agni or tusagni (तुषाग्नि) or fire of chaff. Although the word does not occur, the incident is alluded to more than once in Mandala I.112.7, where the commentary by Sayana says: Atri was thrown into a machine-room with a hundred doors, where he was roasted, and again I.118.7, the same explanation occurs (शतद्वारे पीडयन्त्रगृहे...तुषाग्नि शीतेनोदकेन अवरयेथम्, you extinguished with cold water the chaff fire by which Atri was burnt when thrown into the house of machines of torture with a hundred doors. (See also X.39.2)—Wilson.

6. Cyavanaya, for cyavana, an old famished person, (see earlier references).

7 Yuvakuh, devoted to both of you (युवकयो: युवां कामयिता—Sayana).

Bhujyum; the saviour.

8. Vṛkaya, for the crooked or wicked one, (see earlier references); for the greedy, or malignant (वृकाय धनादात्रे । अभिलषत इत्यर्थः —Sayana; also वृकवद् हिंसकाय—Sayana).

Sayave, शयवे for Sayu, the lazy; (also a seer, शयु, of this name).

Saciblih, by cures and efforts; by devices (शचीभिः युष्मदीयैः कर्मभिहे अश्विनाविति—Sayana).

Pari ghramsam omana vam vayah gat, the oblation has reached you everyday with protection (पर्यगाद्वां घ्रंसमहरवनायान्नम्—Nir.VI.4); the food has, reached you both; O Asvins, from all sides with protection, Ghramsa means day, (Nigh.I.9).

The twelve synonyms for day (अह:) are : वस्तो: , द्यु: , भानु: , वासरम् , स्वसराणि , घ्रंस: , घर्म: , घृण: , दिनम् , दिवा , दिवेदिवे and द्यविद्यवि ।

Omana, with protection (ओमना अवनेन रक्षेण निमित्तेन—Sayana).

7. Bhiyyuh, the Saviour (see earlier references).

Hymn-70

1. Sunaprsthah, horse with delightful or broad back (शुनपृष्ठः सुखपृष्ठः —Venkata; सुखकरपृष्ठभागः । अत्यन्त विपुलत्वान् असूढानां सुखकर पृष्ठभागः —Sayana).

Asvo na vaji, speedy (or strong) as a horse (वाजी वेगवान् अश्वः —Sayana; अश्व इव बलवान्—Venkata).

A yat sedathuh dhruvase na yonim, as firmly as in a dwelling. The comparison is explained "like a place for durable soil"—(ध्रुवसे ध्रुवाय निवासाय योनिं न योनिं स्थानमिव—Sayana).

2. Gharmah, cauldron, the ewer.

Atapi gharmo manuso durone, the ewer has been heated (अतापि) in the dwelling of the man, the yajamana, or householder. Sayana connects it with pravarga (घर्मः प्रवर्गश्च) See Tait. Ar. V.I.5—यत् घ्रां इत्यपतत्तद्- घर्मस्य घर्मत्वम् ।

4. Canistam devau osadhisu apsu yat yogyah, O divines, the two Asvins, in as much as you accept that which is most acceptable in the plants or waters (चनिष्टं इच्छन्तं हे देवौ ! तासु ओषधीषु अप्सु च यदा अश्नवैथे व्याप्नुथः योग्याः स्तुतीः —Venkata; हे देवादेवौ युवां ओषधीषु ओषधिविकारांश्चरु पुरोडाशादिकान् अप्सु सोमरसान् चविष्टं अत्यन्तकमनीयतमं कामयेथाम्—Sayana); here canistam is the most acceptable or the most covetable (चनिष्टं अत्यन्तकमनीयतमम्).

Osadhisu, means the preparations from the plants, like the cakes of meal, and apsu, in the waters, means the Soma juices offered in sacrifices (Sayana).

Ni dadhatau purvani yugani anu cakhyathuh, as you have favoured former couples (पूर्वाणि युगानि मिथुनानि जायापति रूपाणि अनुचरुयथु: ख्यातवन्तौ —Sayana).

5. Brahmani, praises, prayers; spiritual efforts (ब्रह्माणि परिवृढानि कर्माणि स्तुतिलक्षणानि—Sayana).

6. Kṛtabrahma, offered praises (कृतब्रह्मा कृतस्तोत्ररूपकर्मा—Sayana).

Hymn-72

2. Yuvoh hi nah sakhya pitryani, the friendship between you and us is from our forefathers (युवोर्हि न: सख्या पित्र्याणि).

Samanah bandhuh, our bonding (ancestry) is common (a common ancestor is ours; उत अपि च युवयोर्मम च बन्धु: बन्धक: पितामह: समानं एकमेव —Sayana).

Tasya vittam, may you acknowledge that (तस्यवित्तम् । तस्येति कर्मणि षष्ठी । तं बन्धुं तद्बन्धुत्वं+वा वित्तं जानीतम्—Sayana).

It has been said that Vivasvat and Varuna were both sons of Kasyapa and Aditi. The Adityas are the sons of the former, Vasistha of the latter, and thus they became first cousins. Sayana quotes verses from the Bṛhad devata (VI.162; 163; VII.1—6) in this connection, giving a mythological cosmogeny of no value.

We have the following in the Bṛhad devata in this connection.

अभवन् मिथुनं त्वष्टुः सरण्यूस्त्रिशराः सह ।
स वै सरण्यूं प्रायच्छत् स्वयमेव विवस्वते ॥ (VI.162)
ततः सरण्यवां जाते ते यम-यम्यौ विवस्वतः ।
तावप्युभौ यमावेव ह्यास्तां यम्या च वै यमः ॥ (VI.163;)
सृष्ट्वा भर्तुः परोक्षं तु सरण्युः सदृशीं स्त्रियम् ।
निक्षिप्य मिथुनं तस्यामश्वा भूत्वा प्रचक्रमे ॥ (VII.1)
अविज्ञानाद् विवस्वांस्तु तस्यामजनयन् मनुम् ।
राजर्षिरासीत् स मनुर्विवस्वानिवतेजसा ॥ (VII.2)
स विज्ञाय अपक्रान्तां सरण्यूमात्मरूपिणीम् ।
त्वाष्ट्रीं प्रतिजगामाशु वाजी भूत्वा सलक्षणः ॥ (VII.3)
सरण्यूस्तु विवस्वन्तं विज्ञाय हयरूपिणम् ।
मैथुनायोपचक्राम तां च तत्रारुरोह सः ॥ (VII.4)
ततस्तयोस्तु वेगेन शुक्रं तदपतद् भुवि ।
उपाजिघ्रश्व सा त्वश्वा तच्छुक्रं गर्भकाम्यया ॥ (VII.5)
आघ्राण मात्राच्छुक्रं तत्कुमारौ संबभूवतुः ।
नासत्यश्चैव दस्रश्च यौ स्तुतावश्विनावपि ॥ (VII.6)

In short, Tvastṛ had twin children, Saranyu and Trisiras; Saranyu was married to Vivasvat. By their marriage were born Yama and Yamī, the twins; Yama was elder of the two, Saranyu created a body, similar to herself, and entrusted to her Yama and Yami, and she herself became a mare.

Through this lady, taking her to be Saranyu, Vivasvat begot a child, who was a royal seer, and came to be known as Manu.

Afterwards, as the myth goes, when Vivasvat knew the mystery, he himself became a horse. The two mated together, and gave birth to Nasatya and Dasra; this pair came to be known as Asvins (अश्विनौ).

Since asva means a horse and asvin means a mare also, this myth has been concocted.

5. Pascat, from the back; purastat, from the front; adharat, from below; udaktat, from the above.

6. Visvapisa, multimobile; multifunctional; of multi-forms; every-way moving (विश्वपिशा बहुरूपेण—Sayana; Venkata).

7. Rujad drlhani, breaks up the rigidity of gloom (दृळ्हानि अत्यन्तं स्थिराणि तमांसिरुजद्भिनत्ति—Sayana) disperses the solid (gloom)—Wilson.

Satya, Satyebhih mahati mahadbhih, true with truthful; great with the great. This may be applicable to rays (किरणै:) of the morning; or to anyaih devaih (अन्यै: देवै:) i.e. with other deities, or nature's bounties, associated with whom the Dawn is true, mighty and adorable—Sayana; Wilson.

8. Barhih, noble works; sacrifices (बर्हि: यज्ञै: —Sayana).

Purubhojah, plenty of food (पुरुभोज: बह्वन्नम्—Sayana).

Hymn-76

For verse 1, see Nir. XI.10.

1. Ut um jyotih amrtam visvajanyam visvanarah savita devah asret, visvanara, the divine stimulator has lifted up the all-impelling immortal light.

The meaning is that Visvanara (विश्वानरः), the god (देवः) who stimulates (सविता) has lifted up (उद् अश्रेत् उदशिश्रियत्) the all-impelling (विश्वजन्यं सर्वजन्यं) immortal (अमृतं) light (ज्योतिः)—Nir.XI.10.

For Vishvanara, see Nir. VII.21 (our earlier notes); he leads all men, or all men lead him (विश्वान् नरान् नयति । विश्व एनं नरा नयन्तीति वा). Or else, vaisvanara may be a modified form of visvan - ara, विश्वान्+अर i.e. who pervades all created beings (cf. I.98.1).

For Savitṛ, see Nir. X.31; 32 (सविता सर्वस्य प्रसविता); सविता वै देवानां प्रसविता —S.Br. I.1.2.17) the stimulator of all; the creator of all. For this see X.149.1. (सविता यन्त्रैः पृथिवीमरम्णादस्कम्भने सविता द्यामदृंहत्, i.e. Savitṛ has fixed the earth with supports; Savitṛ has fastened heaven in unsupported space).

2. Harmyebhyah adhi, above high dwellings; to high altitudes; above high places (हर्म्येभ्यः अधि उच्छ्रितेभ्यः प्रदेशेभ्यः। हर्म्यशब्द उन्नतप्रदेशोपलक्षकः — Sayana).

3. Yatah pari jarah-iva acaranti, like a wife repairing to an inconstant husband; as in the world, a virtuous woman is not seen abandoning a bad and vagrant husband, nor herself going astray (Sayana—जार इव पत्याविव आचरन्ती समीपे सञ्चरन्ती साध्वी नारीव जारे रात्रेर्जरयितादि सूर्ये सञ्चरन्ती त्वं दृश्यसे। यथा लोके दुष्टं भ्रमणशीलमपि पतिमत्यज्यैव साध्वी सञ्चरति तद्वत् तमविमुञ्चती त्वमित्यर्थः।)

Punah yativa, as no more to leave him (पुनर्यतीव यती पतिं परित्यज्येतस्ततः सञ्चरन्ती व्यभिचारिणीव सूर्यमपरित्यजन्ती त्वम्—Sayana).

4. Satyamantrah, impulses of truth (सत्यमन्त्रा: सत्यस्तुतय: सन्त:), reciters of sincere prayers. Sayana refers to two verses in this context: (i) तुरीयेण ब्रह्मणाविन्ददत्रि: V.40.6; (ii) अत्रयस्तमन्व विन्दन्—V.40.9.

Anvavindan, discovered (अनु अविन्दन् लब्धवन्त. मन्त्रसामर्थ्यात् ते—Sayana).

5. Samane urve adhi, on a common calamity (of stolen cows); when the common herd (of cattle had been stolen) (समाने सर्वेषां साधारणे ऊर्वे गोसमूहे पणिभिरपहृते पुनर्लब्धव्ये सति । अधि इत्यनर्थक: —Sayana).

Wilson gives the following note : What this means is not very obvious; it is literally, in the common vast assembled they agree, nor do they strive mutually, they injure not the observance of the gods, not harming, going with treasures, or with the Vasus. (वसुभि: वासकैरुषसां तेजोभि: —Sayana).

6. Usarbudhah, the one waking at morn (उषर्बुध: उषसि बुध्यन्त: —Sayana).

Vajapatni, queen of viands (वाजपत्नी अन्नस्य पालयित्री—Sayana).

Hymn-77

1. Akah jyotih badhamana tamansi, the light (ज्योति:) dispels (अक:) the obstructing (बाधमान:) darkness (तमांसि ; समिद्ध: सन् तमांसि अन्धकारान् बाधमाना बाधमानं बाधक ज्योति: तेज: संघं अक: अकार्षीत् । अथवा औपसं ज्योतिस्तमांसि बाधमाना बाध्यमानान्यक: अकरोत्—Sayana).

2. Gavam mata, mother of cow or speech; parent of sounds (Wilson); productress of light: Go may here mean speech or articulate sound which at dawn is uttered by men and birds or in its usual sense of "cow", it may refer to the going forth at dawn of cattle to pasture. It may also mean "productress of sun beams" (गवां वाचा गवामेव वा माता निर्मात्री। उप: काले हि पक्षिमनुष्यादीनां वाचो निर्गच्छन्ति । गवामपि तस्मिन् काले संचारात् तन्निर्मातृत्वम्; अथवा

3. Svetam nayanti sudrsikam asvam, leading her white and beautiful courser of steed (that is the sun)—(अश्वं सदागन्तारमादित्यं, the sun who always appears to be moving relative to us);(श्वेतं श्वेतवर्णोपेतं सूर्यम्—Sayana). This means, making the sun manifest (प्रकाशयुक्तं कुर्वतीत्यर्थः).

Visvam anu-prabhuta, mighty over all; risen on account of the whole world (विश्वमनु सर्वं जगदनुलक्ष्य प्रभूता प्रवृद्धा । सर्वं जगद् व्यवहाराय—Sayana; सर्वभूतजातं लक्ष्यीकृत्य प्रादुर्भूत—Venkata).

Citramaghah, distributress of wonderful wealth (चित्रमघा विचित्रधना—Sayana).

4. Gavyutim, the land, the pasture land; the track of cow; earth (गव्यूतिं भूमिं—Sayana; गोमार्गम्—Venkata).

Urvim, wide (उर्वीं विस्तीर्णां—Venkata).

Antivama, possessor or bearer to us of wealth worth having (अन्तिवामा । अन्ति अस्मदन्तिके वामं वननीयं धनं यस्याः सा अन्तिवामा—Sayana; सन्निकृष्टधना—Venkata).

Dure amitram uccha, keep our non-friend away from us.

Hymn-86

1. Dvita nunude, appointed to their two-fold task of gravitational stability and light (dvita, of giving light by day through the sun and by night through stars, द्विता द्वैधं प्रनुनुदे प्रेरयति स्म । अहनि सूर्यं दर्शनीयं प्रेरयति रात्रौ नक्षत्रं तथेति द्विप्रकारः —Sayana).

Urvi, vast (उर्वी विस्तीर्णे—Sayana).

Ṛsvam, glorious (ऋष्वं दर्शनीयम्—Sayana).

5. Damnah, from tether or rope (दाम्नः रज्जोः —Sayana).

Na tayum pasutṛpam, like a thief nourishing the stolen animal (पशुतृपं न तायुं स्तैन्यं - प्रायश्चित्तं कृत्वावसाने घासादिभिः तर्पयितारं स्तेनमिव—Sayana).

For tayum, a sinner who offers penance, a thief, see I 65.1;

IV.38.5; VII.86.5.

Drugdhani, (of, द्रुग्ध: V.40.7) dreads caused by animosity or anger.

There are two comparisons in this verse: (i) Liberate Vasistha (i.e. me) in the like manner as a thief is liberated, who having performed his penance for theft he has committed at its termination, feeds the animals with fodder, and (ii) like a calf from its tether.

Vasistham, the self.

6. Wilson regards this text as a Vedic authority for the transmigration of the soul and as the destiny, accrued by our actions during the past life.

Na sa svo dakso dhrutih : the condition appointed by destiny at the time of birth in the cause of the committal of sin, not our own power or will (हे वरुण, स: स्वो दक्ष: पुरुषस्य स्वभूतं तद्बलं पापप्रवृत्तौ कारणं न भवति। किं तर्हि ध्रुति: स्थिरा उत्पत्ति समय एव निर्मिता दैवगतिः कारणम्—Sayana).

Sura, intoxication, literally wine (सुरा प्रमादकारिणी)

Manyu, wrath.

Vibhidakah, gambling (विभीदक: द्यूतसाधनोऽक्ष:, since the dice is made of vibhitaka fruit).

Acittih, carelessness, ignorance (अचित्ति: अविज्ञानमविवेक कारणम्—Sayana).

Asti jyayan kaniyasah up-are, there is a senior by the side of the junior. The tiny little helpless man is the junior; superior God is the senior. Sayana is inconsistent when he says that the senior God impels the junior soul to commit sins on the basis of the Kausitaki text: एष ह्येवासाधु कर्मकारयति तं यमधो निनीषते—III.8.

Svapnah cana it anṛtasya pra-yota—Several sinful acts are committed during dreams (स्वप्ने कृतैरपि कर्मभिर्बहूनि पापान् जायन्ते किमु वक्तव्यं जाग्रति कृतैः कर्मभिः पापान्युत्पद्यन्त इति—Sayana). And hence the sins committed indeliberately by me be excused by you, O Varuna. (अतो मामपराधो दैवागत इति हे वरुण त्वया क्षन्तव्यः).

Anṛtasya prayota, promoter of the untrue.

7. Anagah, liberated from sin (अनागाः अपापाः)

Kavitarah, sagacious.

Gṛtsam, worshipper.

8. Svadhavah, self-sustained.

Hymn-87

This is one of the most significant hymns relating to Varuna, the Lord Almighty. He prepares an apparent path for the sun to traverse. The same Varuna sets free the waters of the rivers, which rise in the firmament by terrestrial evaporation through the solar rays (1) Wind is the spirit of Varuna (2). Varuna's spies behold all the worlds, heaven and earth (3). To human beings, Varuna provides speech with 21 appellations. Varuna unfolds the mysteries of His own enlightenment (the Veda) to us (4). The three heavens, are deposited in Him and so are three earths with six seasons (5). Varuna has placed on His bed the ocean white as a drop of water (6). Varuna is merciful and compassionate to us even when we commit sins against Him, for He does not like us to be sinful (7).

1. Avanih, nights (अवनीः रात्रीः)

Ahabhyah, from days (अहभ्यः अहोऽभ्यः —Sayana).

Varuna divides great nights from days. Setting of the sun indicates the end of a day and beginning of night.

2. Atma te vatah, the spirit is the wind. Varuna sends wind everywhere which provides a medium of breath of all living beings.

3. Spasah, envoy, the spies (स्पशः स्पशन्ति स्पृशन्तीति स्पशश्चराः — Sayana); also rays and reins (रश्मयः).

Smadistah, of excellent movement (स्मदिष्टाः प्रशस्तगतयः) or despatched together (स्मदित्येतत् प्रशस्यार्थे—Sayana).

4. Medhiraya, to intelligent (मेधिराय मेधाविने—Sayana).

Trih-Sapta, three into seven; twenty-one, the 21 synonyms of the word gauh (गोः) or aghnya, given in the Nighantu: गोः। ग्मा। ज्मा। क्ष्मा। क्षा। क्षमा। क्षोणी। क्षितिः। अवनिः। उर्वी। पृथ्वी। मही। रिपः। अदितिः। इला। निर्ऋतिः। भूः। भूमिः। पूषा। गातुः। गोत्रम्. Speech (vac) is also gauh; it is bonded at three stations in the body—breast, throat and head: seven Vedic metres, each with three stations give the numeral 21 (the seven metres are Gayatri, Usnik, Anustup, Bṛhati, Pankti, Tristup, and Jagati).

Twenty-one sacrifices are also known.

Trih-sapta, is a common usage, three and seven being important prime-number giving to the important number 360 (Atharva I.1.1) 3X7 = 21, sum of 3 to 7 (i.e.3 + 5 + 7 = 15) and 3 + 7 = 10; (21 +15) X 10 = 360 (days in a year or degrees in a circle).

For trih-sapta combination see: I.72.6; 191.12; 14; VII.87.4; VIII.46.26; 69.7; 96.2; IX.70.1; 86.21; X.64.8; 90.15.

Prenkham, oscillating like pendulum; undulating (प्रेङ्खं दोलावद् दिग्द्वयसंस्पर्शिनम्—Sayana).

Kam, pleasure; light (कं सुखम् ; शुभेकं दीप्त्यर्थम्—Sayana; cf. दिवि सूर्यमदधात्—V.85.2).

6. Dyauh iva, 'illuminating like the sun (द्यौरिव सूर्य इव दीप्तः — Sayana).

Drapsah na, like the water drops. (द्रप्सो न द्रवणशील उदबिन्दुरिव— Sayana).

Rajasah, of water; or regions.

Vimanah, like the birds (वि = bird; मानः, measure; of the type); the creator, or measurer (विमानः निर्माता—Sayana).

For rajaso vimanah, see (यो अन्तरिक्षे रजसो विमानः — X.121.5).

Agah, sin; fault (आगः अपराधं—Sayana; opposed to अनागा : अनागसोऽनपराधाः)

Mrlayati, becomes compassionate (मृलयाति उपदयां करोति तस्मिन्— Sayana).

6. Arvat-bhih, with horses (अर्वद्भि: अश्वै: ; अर्वा=अश्व—Nigh.I.14).

Hymn-91

The deity of this hymn, as of the previous hymn is Vayu, which is associated with white complexion, (श्वेत:) and Niyut steeds. He along with Indra is preserver of mankind (2); opulent persons are His favourites; well-fed (पीव:ऽअन्वान् , रयिवृध:). These worshippers, the leaders of rites perform all ceremonies, productive of excellent offsprings (नर: स्वपत्यानि चक्रु:) (3).

2. Masascha pathah, saradasya purvi, protect us through many months and years (पाथ: रक्षतन् , मासस्य मासान् , शरद: संवत्सरान् , पूर्वी: बह्वी: —Sayana).

3. See also Yv. XXVII.33.

Pivah-annan, well-fed (पीवोऽअन्नान् पीवांसि स्थूलानि प्रभूतान्यन्नानि येषां तान्, those who have plenty of food to eat).

According to Mahidhara, this is an epithet of Niyuts; but to Sayana, it refers to adhyajanan, the wealthy.

Hymn-94

The hymn is devoted to the pair of deities, Indra and Agni, the Lord resplendent and the Lord adorable, both being one and the same. It starts with the invocations of the worshipper - the spontaneous invocations, as if rain from a cloud (1). They are meant to recompence the pious acts of the devotee (2). The devotee does not wish to be subjected to wickedness, calumny or to the reviler (3). He needs spiritual food, wealth and protection —for which he prays (5,6). He wishes to remain aloof from the malice of any hostile mortal (8); cattle, gold or horses that he wishes are not the blessing of mundane life, which he so repeatedly begs for; — they represent the finer spiritual instincts, to be acquired while one is on his onward march (9). He offers his complete loving dedication, which in the Vedic terminology is known as Soma (10,11). He wants Agni and Indra to destroy the darkness within him, the ignorance, known as Vṛtra or the Satan (12).

3. Papatvaya, for sinfulness (पापत्वाय हीनभावाय); for inferior sentiments.

Nide, of the reviler (निदे निन्दकाय जनाय).

4. Dhiya, thoughts, prayer (धिया कर्मणा युक्ताः —Sayana).

Also who best slay the foeman (Griffith). (वृत्रहन्— slayer of foes, —तम, the superlative).

12. Raksasvinam, tormenter; the mighty wicked (रक्षस्विनं बलवन्तं —Sayana).

Martyam durvidvamsam, the wicked man (दुर्विद्वांसं दुर्विज्ञानं, मर्त्यं मनुष्यं शत्रुम्—Sayana).

Udadhim, pitcher for containing water (उदधिं लुप्तोपममेतत्। उपघानं कुम्भमिव । यथा कुम्भोऽनायासेन भिद्यत एवमनायासेनैव शत्रुमायुधेन युवां हिंस्तम्—Sayana).

(I slay the enemy with your weapon with that ease with which an earthen pitcher is broken). Griffith, however, renders it as "one who slays the waters." (Slay him who slays the waters, slay the serpent with your deadly dart).

Abhogam, rapacious (one who enjoys good things taken from worshippers (आभोगं आहृत्यास्मत्तोऽपहृत्य भोक्तारम्—Sayana).

Stanam, breast; sound-making; clouds rich in water, as breasts with milk (स्तनं शब्दायमानं स्तनवद् रसधारं वा मेघम्).

This verse is rendered thus by Sayana

"May we obtain the distended and loud-thundering (or breast-like) cloud of Sarasvat which is visible to all : (may we obtain) progeny and food".

Hymn-97

The hymn is devoted to Indra, Brahmanaspati and Bṛhaspati. The inner cavity of our consciousness is the heaven, or dyau-loka, from whence Lord descends to earth to enlighten us and to accept our devotions. He comes on His swift horses, since He takes no time to come to us in our inner vision; (1) Indra and Bṛhaspati are not two, they are the same, but appear in our consciousness, the way we invoke them. Brhaspati is like a father to the son (2).

As a lord of enlightenment, He is Brahmanaspati, whereas Indra is a lord of the prayers (3). Brhaspati is best beloved and desired by all; He gratifies all our desires, of riches and sons, and saves from injury (4); He is holy one of the house-holders (5); He is pure, and purifier; possesses hundreds of conveyances, a bountiful giver (7). Indra, the same as Brhaspati and Brahmanaspati, is worthy of our prayers; He protects our ceremonies (9); He in all forms is the Lord of celestial and terrestrial worlds (10). Heaven and earth become our Divine Parents, when energized by the creativity of Brhaspati (7).

Vayunani vidvan, वयुनानि विद्वान्, knowing all worth knowing; knowing all actions (cf I.72.7; 189.1—विश्वानि देव वयुनानि विद्वान्).

For verse 5, see Samaveda, II.976, with a little variation (हव्यमर्य: शंसामि for नामार्य: शंसामि.

6. Samithe, in the battles; in creative functions or activities

—Nigh.II.17.

Yad anya-rupah samithe babhutha, you have engaged under a different form in battle (Wilson). Wilson adds a note to it: "Visnu is said to have aided Vasistha in battle under an assumed form, and when questioned, to have said, I am Sipivista, a word to which two senses may be attached, one objectionable and the other unjectionable. In the preceding verse and in verse 7 of the former Sukta, the word is explained, "penetrated or clothed with rays" of light, rasmibhiravista (रश्मिभिराविष्ट, the radiant, the splendid: in common use, it means a man naturally without prepuce, in which sense it may be here interpreted as implying comparison in like manner as a man is so denuded. So is Visnu, according to his own declaration uncovered by radiation—tejasa anacchaditah तेजसा अनाच्छादित:); but this is a refinement, and it is probably to be understood as usual; the expression is curious".

Hymn-101

1. Tisrah, of three categories: Rk, yajuh and Saman, or the triad poem, prose and lyric (तिस्र त्रिविध: ऋग्यजु: सामात्मिका: स्तुतिरूपा: —Sayana).

Duhre=duhate, (दुह्रे=दुहते, दुहेर्लटि । 'लोपस्तआत्मनेपदेषु' (Panini VII.1.41), इति त लोप: । बाहुलको रुट् ।)

2. ईशे=ईष्टे

Trivartu, of particular light at the three seasons, spring, summer and autumn (or winter) (त्रिवर्तु त्रिषु ऋतुषु अतिशयेन वर्तमानम्; since we have in Taitt. Sam, त्रीणि वा आदित्यस्य तेजांसि वसन्ता प्रातर्ग्रीष्मे मध्यन्दिने शरदपराह्ले: the Sun is particularly bright in the mornings in the spring; during midday in summers, and during afternoon in winters or autumns).

Tridhatu, three metals; three-storied building (त्रिधातु त्रिभूमिकम् of three floors—Sayana).

Saranam, dwelling (शरणं गृहम्).

Sarma, felicity (शर्म सुखम्).

3. One form of parjanya is like a barren cow, the other produces offspring.

Yathavasam tanvam cakre, he takes whichever form he pleases: the firmament withholds or sends down rain at will.

Pituh payah prati grbhnati mata tena pita vardhate tena putrah—the father is sky (द्यौष्पिता), earth the mother (पृथिवी माता)who receives the rain from the former, which producing the means of offering libations and oblations (हविः); returns again to the parent heaven, as well as supports his offspring; i.e. , all living creatures.

4. Tisro dyavah, the three worlds.

Tredha sasruh, the three directions (east, west and south त्रेधा सस्रुः प्राची प्रतीच्योऽथवाच्यश्च सत्यो निर्गच्छन्ति;—Sayana); waters flow in these directions.

Trayah kosasah, the three water-shedding masses of clouds (east, west and north; प्रतीच्य, उदीच्यश्चेति त्रय: पौरस्त्य: त्रिप्रकारा: कोशास: मेघा: —Sayana).

5. Mayobhuvah, the joy - diffusing (मयोभुव: सुखस्य भावयित्र्य:) clouds (वृष्टय:).

Devagopah, the protector of clouds (देवगोपा: देव: पर्जन्यो गोपयिता रक्षिता यासाम्—Sayana) ; cherished by Deva or deity.

Osadhih, plants (ओषधी: ओषध्यश्च).

Supippila, one with excellent fruits (सुपिप्पलाः सफलाः —Sayana).

6. Vrsabhah, वृषभः, the showrer, the cloud (just as one covers several cows and impregnates, so the cloud be the perpetual impregnator of plants).

Hymn-102

1. Parjanyaye, for parjanya, the cloud. For parjanyah, see Nir. X.10. The word is derived from √तृप्, to be satisfied, by reversing the first and the last letter; (पर्जन्योस्तृपेः। आद्यन्तविपरीतस्य ; and is favourable to man (तर्पयिता जन्यः ; तृप + जन्य = पृत + जन्यः = पर्ज + जन्यः = पर + जन्यः); or called because he is the last conquerer or he is the best progenitor (परः + जन); or he is the bestower of juices (प्र + √ऋज). [परोजेता वा। परोजनयिता वा। प्रार्जयिता वा रसानाम् ; see also यत् पर्जन्यः स्तनयन्हन्ति दुष्कृतः ; V.83.2].

2. Parjanya, is the cause of impregnator of plants (ओषधीनाम्) cows (गवां), mares (अर्वतां) and women (पुरुषीणाम्).

3. Ilam, food (इलां = अन्ननाम, Nigh.II.7).

The sweetest or most savoury oblation is offered to him through the mouth of Agni, the fire, and then a good harvest of food is to be expected. The Agnihotra causes the purity of rains and thereby a good harvest.

For verse 1, see Nir. IX.6.

The theme of the hymn is Mandukah or frogs, which practise penace throughout the year like Brahmanas and utter praises to clouds (1); they hibernate throughout the year, and the moment clouds pour water, they wake up and croak (2). At the time of rains, one frog greets the other with croakings, as inarticulate as of a child (3). The speckled frog leaps up and greets the green one (4). They play in waters, with their body fully developed (5). They are of a variety of colours and their voices different; — some bellow like a cow and some bleat like a goat (6). Like the Brahmanas at the Soma and Atiratra rituals, these frogs croak around the lake replenished with water. (7) They appear to be reciting perennial prayer, like ministrant priests with the gharma offerings; and during the heat, they hide in holes (8). They come out only when rains return, and attain freedom from their hiding places (9).

According to certain scholars, the hymn is a satire on the priests, - the cow-toned, the goad-toned, green and speckled,— not a satire, but a beautiful analogy. It is a prayer for the welcome of rains, for which, sometime, we so long wait with eagerness; -in fact, nothing is so welcome as rains in due seasons.

1. Mandukah, frogs; the same as majjukah, i.e. divers so called from diving (मण्डूका मज्जूका मज्जनात्—Nir.IX.5): or the word may be derived from √मद्, meaning to rejoice (मदतेर्वा मोदतिकर्मण: or from √मन्द्, meaning to be satisfied (मन्दतेर्वा तृप्तिकर्मण.). It is derived from √मण्ड्, to decorate, say the grammarians (मण्डयतेरिति वैयाकरणा:). (Since the frogs are adorned with variegated lines on their skin by Nature-Durga) or else their abode (ओकस्) is in water, mande (मण्ड एषामोक इति वा); mande (मण्ड, water) is derived from √मद्, to rejoice; or from मुद्, to be merry (मण्डो मदेर्वा मुदेर्वा) (Nir.IX.5).

Sleeping for a year, the frogs have uttered forth speech, impelled by the cloud like Brahmanas engaged in religious rites, i.e., who have taken the vow of silence (व्रतचारिणोऽब्रुवाणा: Nir.IX.6). Or else, a simile may have been intended, i.e. (uttered speech) like Brahmanas who are engaged in religious rites (अपि वोपमार्थे स्यात्). The frogs have uttered forth speech, which has been impelled by the cloud (वाचं पर्जन्यप्रीतां प्रावादिषुर्मण्डूका:). See also Av.IV.15.13; cf. Brh.D.VI.27.

We have further a reference in the Nirukta, that Vasistha desirous of rain, praised the cloud. Frogs applauded him. On seeing the applauding frogs. he praised them We have in the Ṛgvidhana Khanda: O frog, join me. O swimmer invoke rain. Float in the middle of the pond, having spread your foot: (VII.103).

उप प्र वद मण्डूकि वर्षं मा वद तादुरि ।
मध्ये ह्रदस्य प्लवस्य विगृह्य चतुरः पदः ॥ (Av.IV.15.14)

2. Suskam, Sarasi, dry pond; dry lake (शुष्कं नीरसं सरसी महत्सरः सरस्याम्).

Dṛti, water-skin (leather bag for carrying water).

Vatsininam, when joined by their calves (वत्सिनीना वत्सयुक्तानाम्—Sayaṇa).

Mayuh, bellowing of cows (मयुः गवां शब्द इव—Sayana).

Vagnuh, croaking of frogs (मण्डूकानां वग्नुः शब्दः).

3. Akhkhali Kṛtya, croaking (his congratulations) (अख्खलीकृत्या। अख्खल शब्दं कृत्वा—Sayana).

4. Pṛsnih, speckled (पृश्निः पृश्निवर्णः).

Haritena, with the green-one frog (हरितेन हरितवर्णेनान्येन मण्डूकेन—Sayana).

5. Saktasya, of the teacher (शाक्तस्येव शक्तिमतः शिक्षकस्य).

5. Siksamanah, the learner, the pupil (शिक्षमाणः शिक्ष्यमाणः शिष्यः—Sayana).

Vadati=anuvadati, imitates (वदति अनुवदति अनुकरणं करोति).

6. Gomayuh, bellowing of a cow (गोऽमायुः गोर्मायुरिव, मायुः शब्दो यस्य तादृशो भवति—Sayana).

Ajamayuh, bleating of a goat (अजमायु अजस्यमायुरिव मायुर्यस्य तादृशो भवति— Sayana).

Samano nama, more common appellation.

Pipisuh, show themselves (पिपिशु अवयवी भवन्ति प्रादुर्भवन्ति—Sayana).

Purutra, in numerous places (पुरुत्रा बहुषु देशेषु).

7. Atiratre Soma yage, atiratra, at a nocturnal ceremony when the priests recite songs throughout the night; since the croaking of frogs is heard throughout the night, and hence the appropriate comparison.

8. Sisvidanah, perspiring (the frogs as the adhvaryu priests perspire during the heat. There is a quibble upon the word gharminah, घर्मिण: , having or bearing the vessel, or performing the rite so termed, or suffering from gharma, heat, or the hot season (सिष्विदाना: स्विद्यद् गात्रा: , घर्मिण: घर्मेण प्रवर्ग्येण चरन्त: —Sayana).

Guhyah, remaining hidden in hot season (गुह्या: घर्मकाले विलेऽभिगूढा: —Sayana).

9. Deva-hitim, institutes of gods (Wilson); god-appointed order (देवहिंति देवै: कृतं विधानं, मस्यर्तोरयं धर्म इत्येवं रूपम्—Sayana); pertaining to the season's conditions.

Dvadasasya, of the year, consisting of twelve months.

Na pra minanti, do not disregard (मिनन्ति हिंसन्ति).

Taptah gharmah, heated kettles (Griffith); scorched and heated (Wilson),

Visargam, liberated, set free (विसर्गं विसर्जनं विलान्मोचनम्).

Pravṛsi, in the rainy season (प्रावृषि वर्षतौ—Sayana).

10. Adat, may give (अदात् ददातु).

Sahasra-srave, in the rainy season, when thousands of plants are fertilized; in the most fertilizing season (सहस्रस्रावे सहस्रसंख्याका ओषधय: सूयन्ते उत्पद्यन्त इति वर्षर्तु: सहस्रस्राव—Sayana).

Hymn-104

The enduring teachings of the Vedas are not a relic of the past, nor are they the exclusive preserve or the sole inheritance of Indians and Indo-Aryans. They belong to the common heritage of humanity and are relevant in our contemporary world and in our age. We owe it to ourselves and to the peoples and the nations of the world to share this precious heritage and to disseminate its message and meaning.

The Vedas have been translated into several languages. Scholars like Griffith, Wilson and Max Muller have written commentaries on the Vedas in English. But the need for bringing out an authentic and standard translation of the Vedas has been felt for quite sometime.

To meet the need of a modern, easy to understand English translation of the Vedas, the Veda Pratishthan of DAV College Managing Committee, New Delhi had been publishing complete translation of the four Vedas in twenty-two volumes since 1977.

This new 2008 edition has far superior production values and is priced at less then one-fourth of the price it was being sold so far.

ṚGVEDA SAMHITĀ

BOOK EIGHT

Hymn-41

May you offer priase to that opulent venerable Lord and to the vital principles. The venerable Lord protects men by His acts as the herdsman guards the cattle. May all our adversities vanish. 1

I praise him (the sun-divine), the venerable lord, with that song and hymn with which our ancient sages have been praying and with that song, repeated by a pain-despiser too. The lord of vapours rises up in the vicinity of rivers; there are seven streams (sisters) in the midst of them. May all our adversities vanish. 2

He embraces beautiful nights and with swift movements He encompasses the universe by His mysterious power. Visible over all is he. All who are desirous of his favour diligently offer him worship at three times a day (morning, noon, and evening). May all our adversities vanish. 3

He is visible above the earth and sustains the quarters of the horizon. He measures out (the entire space) which is the eternal abode of his venerability; he is our lord like the keeper of cattle. May all our adversities vanish. 4

He is the sustainer of all the regions, knows the hidden and secret names of the mysterious rays, He is a sage who cherishes the act of sages, as the heaven cherishes numerous forms. May all our adversities vanish. 5

In him all pious acts are concentrated like the nave set within the wheel. May you worship him, quickly, who pervades all the three worlds. As men assemble the cattle in their pasture, in the same manner, the horses have been gathered (to assail us) by our opponents. May all our adversities vanish. 6

He wraps these regions as a robe; he gives refuge to all the creatures. All Nature's bounties precede the chariot of the venerable Lord, while manifesting His glories at the time of worship. May all our adversities vanish. 7

He is the hidden ocean; swiftly he mounts the heaven as the sun ascends the sky. When He establishes the cosmic sacrifice in those regions, He demolishes with his brilliant radiance the devices of obstructing forces and ascends to heaven. May all our adversities vanish. 8

His bright far-seeing rays pervade all the three regions, and have further filled the three superior realms of heaven. Firm is the abode of the venerable Lord, who rules over the seven cosmic streams of firmament. May all our adversities vanish. 9

In his successive functions, he emits his bright rays (during day) or turns them dark (during the night). He measures out the eternal abode, and supports with the pillar of the firmament, both heaven and the earth. May all our adversities vanish. 10

The powerful venerable Lord, the possessor of all wealth, has fixed the heaven. He measures out the wide expanses of the broad earth, and presides over all worlds as a supreme monarch. All these are the holy operations of the venerable Lord. 1

May you glorify the mighty venerable Lord and revere this guardian of immortality. May He bestow upon us a triply-guarded habitation. May heaven and earth preserve us within their lap. 2

O evertrue twin-divines, the pious worshippers, with their songs, induce you to come hitherward to enjoy devotional elixir. May all our adversities vanish. 4

O evertrue twin-divines, as the triply detached sage has been eagerly calling you with his hymns to enjoy the devotional elixir, so I also invoke you. May all our adversities vanish. 5

As all the wise men have been invoking you for protection, O evertrue twin-divines, I also invoke you to come and enjoy our devotional elixir. May all our adversities vanish. 6

These reciters of praises invoke the fire-divine who is all-wise, creative and performer of uninterrupted cosmic sacrifice. 1

O all-beholding, all pervading fire-divine, I repeat earnest prayers to you for your delight. 2

O fire-divine, your fierce flames consume the forest, as the sharpened teeth of wild animals destroy (the plants). 3

Your consuming fire flames, urged by the wind, bannered with the smoke, rise and go aloft diversely to heaven. 4

These diversely-kindled fiery flames are all around made visible even as the ensigns of the dawn. 5

As this all pervading fire speeds along, the black dust is raised by its feet when this fire spreads upon the earth. 6

Making the plants its food the fire-divine consumes them and is never satiated, and falls upon the tender shrubs again. 7

Bending the trees down with all its tongues (flames), it flickers in its fiery glow; the fire-divine looks splendid in the woods. 8

O fire-divine, your original place is in the waters, yet you force your way into the plants and becoming their embryo, you are born anew. 9

O fire-divine, worshipped with offerings, your flames shine out from the sacred butter with kisses on the ladle's mouth. 10

Let us adore with hymns the fire-divine, who is fed on agricultural products, dairy products, and who bears the herbal plants on the back. 11

We solicit you, O fire-divine, the invoker of Nature's bounties and performer of sacred rites, with oblations and with fuel. 12

O divine, you are a fire, kindled by fire; you are a sage, kindled by a sage; you are a saint, kindled by a saint; and you are a friend, kindled by a friend. 14

O adorable lord, may you bestow upon the pious worshipper infinite riches, food and brave progeny. 15

O fire-divine, our brother, the source of strength, driven as if on red horses, performer of pure acts, may you be propitiated by our laudations. 16

My praises hasten to you, O fire-divine, as the cows enter their stalls to meet the lowing calf that longs for milk. 17

O fire-divine, most vital among vital forces, all people, howsoever rich, turn towards you for attainment of their desires. 18

The intellectuals, the wise and the sagacious, with their thoughts and actions propitiate the fire-divine for the furtherance of their prosperity. 19

While making preparations to adore you in their homes, the worshippers glorify you, O powerful fire-divine, the bearer of the oblations and the invoker of Nature's bounties. 20

You are the adorable lord, beholder of all people of the universe alike in all the regions. We invoke you to help us in our struggles. 21

We invoke you, O adorable, all-pervading Lord, listening to our prayers and driving away our adversities. 23

I pray to you, O adorable lord, the sovereign of men, the wonderful, the presiding lord of cosmic laws; may it listen to our invocations. 24

We adore that adorable lord, who inspires all people, whose strength is manifested in every vital force, who is noble, strong and benevolent. 25

O adorable lord, (the fire-divine), may you drive away the malignant forces, keep us free from adversities, destroy the violent opponents and blaze forth with your bright radiance. 26

O fire-divine, the chief of vital forces, whom men have been kindling like the ancient sages, may you hear my words. 27

O fire-divine, procured by mechanical strength, born in the heavens or in waters, we glorify you as such with praises. 28

The divine fire is extremely pure in creativity, and shines pure when invoked. 21

May my dedicated actions and devotional songs ever invigorate you; may you always think of our friendly bond. 22

O fire-divine, if I were you and you were I, your blessings here should come through. 23

O fire-divine, you are the giver of dwellings, the lord of wealth and rich in light; may we always enjoy your favour. 24

O fire-divine, observant of pious acts, our resonant songs of praise proceed to you as rivers hasten to a sea. 25

I glorify with hymns the ever-young fire-divine, the supreme lord of men, the all-wise, the all-consuming and inspirer of all sacred acts. 26

Let us seek with our hymns the fire-divine, the guide of all sacred sacrificial acts, strengthened with sharp-jaw of justice. 27

May my fellow brothers also be your worshippers, O adorable fire-divine, O purifier, give them happiness. 28

Verily you are wise, the sharer of oblations and ever wakeful as the seer (for our well-being). May you, O fire-divine, shine in the sky. 29

O wise fire-divine, giver of dwellings, may you prolong our lives before misfortunes or assailants fall on us. 30

The sages who enkindle ritual fire, continually purify their hearts; in case their close friend is the ever-young resplendent Lord. 1

Ample is their fuel to burn, many their hymns to sing and wide their splinters; in case their close friend is the ever-young resplendent Lord. 2

Though unequalled in power to combat, the brave devotee is sure to subdue his adversaries, howsoever equipped by their own forces, in case his close friend is the ever-young resplendent Lord. 3

As soon as born, the resplendent self, the destroyer of evils, seizes an arrow and asks the mother Eternity "who are the terrible, who are the renowned opponents?" 4

The powerful mother answers, "O son, he who seeks your enmity, fights as lightning in clouds." 5

O bounteous Lord, may you hear this: "surely you grant all what your devotees ask of you; whomsoever you make firm keeps firm." 6

When the resplendent Lord, the fighter, goes to battle borne by excellent vital energies, He is the foremost amongst the charioteers. 7

O Lord, the thunderer, may you repel all attacks coming on us from any directions; may you be to us a most abundant benefactor. 8

May the resplendent Lord, whom no wicked force can harm, set our chariot in foremost place for the aquisition of rewards. 9

O powerful Lord, may we escape our enemies; may we come to you for your generous rewards, rich in cattle. 10

O Lord, strong and resolute, may we slowly approach you to be rich in vital powers and be possessed of unrivalled treasure, and unharmed (by calamities). 11

Your exalted excellence gives day by day hundreds and thousands of precious and auspicious rewards to your worshippers. 12

O resplendent Lord, we know you as the winner of wealth and breaker of firm obstacles. You are the opener (of the gate of wealth) and (giver of shelter) as a house. 13

O all-wise, exalted and brave Lord, subduer of evil forces, when we solicit you, the barterer, may our adorations exhilarate you. 14

May you bring to us the treasure of that opulent person, who is unwilling to give, and who reviles you regarding your generosity of bestowing wealth. 15

O resplendent, these our friends, effusers, singers of devotional love, wait and look to you like men with fodder to the herd of cattle. 16

We invoke you here from afar for our protection, for you are not deaf; your ears are always open to hear. 17

O Lord of strength, we lean on you as old men lean on a staff. We entreat you to be always with us in the sacred works. 20

May you sing a song of praise to the resplendent Lord who is rich in wealth and bountiful and whom no one challenges in war. 21

When the prayers are repeated, I pour out the libation to you, O showerer, for your acceptance. May you accept it to your satisfaction and enjoy the exhilarating elixir of devotion. 22

Let not the fools or those who mock, beguile you, when they seek your protection; may you not favour the unbelievers and godless. 23

Let the worshippers exalt you here with sweet devotion and sincere dedication for the attainment of munificence. May you drink the elixir as Gaura deer drinks water from a pond. 24

Proclaim in our congregations those old and new riches which our Lord, the destroyer of evils, sends from afar. 25

The resplendent Lord displays His manly might, after a successful fight against thousands of armed obstructions, and accepting the exhilarating elixir from the gourd-pitcher. 26

He finds undeniable strength in intellectual people and also in those toiling and thereby He conquers against the day to day miseries. 27

I praise the universal Lord, the deliverer of our families, the destroyer of evils, and the bestower of food and cattle. 28

I praise through hymns the mighty resplendent Lord, the augmenter of waters, for the attainment of wealth and wisdom while the devotional worship is performed with prayers. 29

It is only He who cleaves the hill for the people of three regions so that the wide womb is formed to allow the cows in captivity to issue forth. 30

Whatever anger you incur in your exhilaration, whatever you plan in your mind, or think to penalize us, O resplendent Lord, please do it not, but be kind to bless us. 31

O resplendent Lord, whatever little has been done by you for us is renowned on the earth. May your kindness turn to us. 32

O resplendent Lord, when you are kind to us, yours shall be this eulogy, and yours shall be these hymns of praises. 33

O brave Lord, penalize us not for one sin, not for two, not for three, even not for many. 34

I am afraid of one like you only. You are terrible, the destroyer of evils and strong enough to endure all attacks. 35

O bounteous Lord, may I never live to see my friend or son in distress; may your mind remain ever favourable towards me. 36

"O mortals, which friend, has, without provocation, ever abused a friend? who again is one that leaves his friend in distress?" 37

O showerer of blessings, when the devotional prayers are offered, you have always been eagerly accepting them to your delight like a hunter rushing down to his victim. 38

I draw here towards you the two horses harnessed to a beautiful car and yoked by hymns, since you give precious wealth to the sincere devotees. 39

May you cleave asunder all the hostile forces, and frustrate their destructive attacks, and bring us that wealth which we long for. 40

O resplendent Lord, what is concealed in the strongholds of evil forces, and in places not easily accessible,—bring us that wealth which we long for. 41

O resplendent Lord, what all men recognize as given abundantly by you, bring us that wealth which we long for. 42

O possessor of resolute will-power, we know that truly you are the giver of nourishment and conferer of wealth to all. 2

O performer of various selfless deeds and possessor of hundreds of aids, the singers celebrate your majesty with their devotional songs. 3

Fortunate in life is that mortal whom the faultless Supreme Lord, who is also the Lord of vital principles, Lord of Justice, and the Lord of light, gives protection. 4

He, who is directed by mother Infinity, ever increases in wealth desired by all. He possesses abundant wisdom, vitality and brave children. 5

We solicit rewards from the resplendent Lord who is fearless and strong; we solicit wealth from the bounteous Lord. 6

Verily, in Him are combined all the protective measures; He is the Lord of vast wealth. May His gliding-steeds like blessings bear Him to the sacred place of devotion for his exhilaration. 7

That ecstacy of joy which is pre-eminent and which utterly destroys your enemies and which wins tributes from men and which is invincible in battles of cosmic life,— 8

—that ecstasy of yours, O well-worthy of praise, and the deliverer from enemies, (is remarkable). May you come to accept our oblations, O most mighty one, the giver of dwellings, may we obtain a treasure full of wisdom. 9

O lord of wealth, greatest of the great, may you, responding to our wishes for cows, horses and chariots, be gracious to us as ever. 10

O brave and bounteous Lord, I find no limit to your munificence. O Lord of resolute will-power, may you bestow your rewards on us and bless our offerings by giving us ample wealth and wisdom. 11

May the bounteous Lord, the destroyer of the evils of ignorance, be our champion and protector in critical struggles of our life. 13

O devotees, may you sing with a loud voice the sacred lores in the wild rapture of spiritual joy; may your wise and strong Lord, humbler of adversaries, be ever honoured by your praises. 14

O glorified by all (the resplendent Lord), may you give wealth, give treasure and vigour and provide abundant food in critical times of life-struggle just now, without delay. 15

May the Lord of all precious things, who according to His pleasure can change His charming forms, give us abundant wealth and wisdom just now, without delay. 16

We praise with oblations and hymns that blissful mighty Lord, showerer of bounties and very much wish that He comes. You are worshipped by every man, including cloud-bearing winds. May I adore you constantly with song and prayers. 17

We offer devotion to those loud-sounding clouds who rush along with streaming trains of rain showers; may we obtain in the worship the happiness which these loud roarers bestow. 18

O resplendent Lord, the mightiest, may you, O inspirer of intellect, bring to us suitable wealth that crushes men of evil minds. O inspirer, bring to us most excellent wealth. 19

O most bountiful, strong, wondrous, most splendid, excellent and supremely truthful; may you, by our prowess, O universal ruler, overpower them who attack us, and may you bring to us ample wealth for our enjoyment. 20

Let the new disciple, though not so divine, approach the one who has received the living gift of knowledge. May he, the God-dependent soul, the enjoyer of fruits, approach the loving Lord, the possessor of immense treasures, for enlightenment during the break of dawn. 21

I, the God-blessed wealthy person, thank Him for possessing sixty thousand horses, ten thousand cattle, twenty hundred camels, and a thousand brown mares with three red patches. 22

(Let me thank God and proclaim): "I have ten brown horses, who turn the wheel of my chariot with swift whirl; they are of high speed and mature vigour." 23

These are the gifts of the loving Lord, the possessor of immense treasures. He donates golden chariot and proves himself most liberal and wise. He Himself wins wide fame in the world. 24

Come to us, O Lord of vitality, to bestow upon us great wealth and glorious strength. We have been offering to you, O giver of abundant wealth, so that you give much to us; we are also just now offering the same to you, the giver of gifts. 25

He, the sun, comes speedily mounted on horses and invested with thrice seven times seventy (3x7x70=1470) golden rays of morning. He (the sun) comes to you, the Lord, with these healing herbs; and learned priests offer our invocations to you, the acceptor of loving devotion,—bright and pure. 26

Of His own sweet-will, He has been pleased to give me these honoured gifts. He is the performer of good works, and inspires men who are courteous, liberal, and determined to perform noble deeds on the basis of their preeminent good actions. 27

O Lord of vital energies, you are self-resplendent in your glorious form; you are bright like pure butter, you grant me the gifts of divine spirituality inspired by vital energies, willing efforts, and god-inspired love. Surely these are inspired by the blessings of our Lord. 28

May I enjoy these gifts worthy to be enjoyed by the beneficient kings, corresponding to sixty thousand bulls, vital and vigorous like horses. 29

As the cows approach the herd, in the same manner the castrated bullocks come for refuge; may the bullocks come to me for refuge. 30

He calls hundred camels (to be donated) when the herd has been grazing in the woods, and two thousand white cows from among the white herds. 31

O lady of the light (dawn), whatever ill dream that threatens the maker of gold ornaments or the maker of garlands, let us trasfer it to the remote distances of wide regions of subconsciousness, second and the third; your aids are void of harm and verily your aids are true aids. 15

O lady of the light, may you drive away the evil dream to the second and third regions (of subconsciousness),—such a dream, in which we appear to be creatures and souls of remote distances, who are ordained to enjoy or do what we enjoy and do while awake; your aids are void of harm and verily your aids are true aids. 16

As we throw off the nails of fingers and hoofs of animals (as insignificant parts) and as we discharge debt, in the same manner disburse all the evil dreams to the remote regions (places of our subconsciousness); your aids are void of harm and verily your aids are true aids. 17

O dawns, may we be free from evil dreams; may these dreams, which we were afraid of, depart from us and may we feel today victorious and happy; your aids are void of harm and verily your aids are true aids. 18

May I with wisdom and devotion enjoy the delicious and widely honoured health-giving food, which all godly men and divine powers proclaim to be sweet, and try to procure for eating. 1

O delightful elixir, you are divinely pure and as you enter within unimpaired, you avert the anger of the divine forces; may you, enjoying the friendship of the resplendent, carry us to wealth as a swift horse brings the chariot speedily (to riches). 2

As we drink the elixir of divine love, we become immortal; we attain the heavenly light, we have known the secrets of divine forces. Now what would the malignant do to harm us? O immortal, what mortal man's deception now to us? 3

O pure divine elixir, may you be sweet and blissful when absorbed into our hearts, as a kind father to his son, or as a friend to a friend. O pure elixir, worthy of wide praise, may you extend our years that we live long. 4

I have drunk these glorious drops of divine elixir which give me freedom. Closely they knit together my joints as bullocks drawing together a chariot falling in pieces. Let them protect my foot from slipping on the way. May they deliver me from sickness. 5

O divine elixir, kindle me like the fire produced by friction; give us a clearer insight and make us rich in enlightenment; I praise you now for exhilaration; come now, full of wealth and wisdom, to nourish us. 6

May we enjoy the pleasure you give with an enlivened spirit as men enjoy paternal wealth. O love divine, may you prolong our lives as the sun makes the universal days grow longer. 7

O elixir, the glorious one, bless us for our welfare; we are your worshippers; may you recognize it. O the shining one, may not the enemy become strong and fierce; may you not give us up unto our foeman's pleasure. 8

O divine elixir, you are the guardian of our bodies, you dwell in each limb as the beholder of men. When we offend you against your holy statutes, may you, as a kind friend, best of all, be gracious. 9

O Lord of vital energies, may I have a friend whose heart is tender, and who will never harm me even when intoxicated with power. May this elixir be deposited within me permanently; for this I pray to the resplendent Lord. 10

May these irremovable sicknesses lose their strength and vanish. Let these terrible pains, which have made us tremble, go away. May the mighty elixir getting active be effective to the climax. Let us feel that we have attained that draught by which men prolong life. 11

That elixir, drunken into our hearts, has entered, immortal into us, the mortals, so let us, O fathers, invoke this elixir with devotion, may we rest securely in his grace and favour. 12

O divine elixir, you spread yourself extensively through earth and heaven in association with our guardians. So let us serve you with devotion and become lords of riches. 13

O Nature's bounties, the protectors, may you give us your blessings. Let not dreams or idle talks overpower us. May we be ever-dear to the divine Lord, and along with brave sons around us, may we address the synod. 14

O divine love, may you provide life-giving food from all sides. You are the bestower of happiness, beholder of all men; may you enter us, and, rejoicing with your protecting powers, preserve us from behind and before. 15

I praise to you, O bounteous resplendent Lord, granter of all riches, and who, with thousandfold treasures, loves to help those who serve Him with dedication. 1

He, equipped with his punitive forces, gets a control over hundreds of armies of adversities. He destroys the enemies of His munificient and liberal worshipper, and grants in ample rewards swelling like a stream flowing out of a mountain. 2

The delightful devotional prayers reach you, O resplendent Lord, the lover of hymns. These prayful melodies seek and surround you as waters seek and flow to their accustomed lake where they finally rest. 3

May you drink the elixir of devotion which strengthens and gives eloquence, and which is the sweetest of the elixir for your exaltation. May you in your exhilaration bestow your reward of treasure on us, just as the mill-stone pours out dustlike flour. 4

O resplendent Lord, self-strong, may you come quickly to our place of prayers, urged on by the repeated praises which are sweet as milk. Among wise devotees, these are the gifts to glorify you. 5

Whether you are now busy at the place of cosmic sacrifice or whether you are on the earth, come from there with your speedy vital forces, O Lord of lofty counsel, powerful. May you come swiftly with your mighty forces. 7

Your vital cosmic forces are agile and swift, and overpowering like the winds; with them, you encircle the realm of human world and therewith the entire luminous heaven becomes visible as if. 8

O resplendent, from you we solicit prosperity and wealth and wisdom. As a bounteous Lord, you help mendicants of venerability, and in the field of learning you help the leading ascetics interested in intellectual pursuits. 9

O bounteous Lord, as you have been giving abundant kine and gold to the wise devotees and to the terrifiers of the wicked, as well as favouring men of matured wisdom and persons of all-round discipline, men spiritually advanced and of straight-forward nature (in the same way may you favour us also). 10

I glorify the far-famed, the bounteous, resplendent Lord for the sake of his protection, who gives precious wealth by thousands to the dedicated devotee and the offerer of hymns. 1

The resplendent Lord is equipped with hundred-edged forces, and destructive invincible weapons. He showers blessings on His liberal devotees like a mountain rich in springs. He bestows these rewards on His devotees when exhilarated by the devotional prayers. 2

When sweet devotional prayers exhilarate the loving Lord, my homage is offered abundantly to Him like flowing waters. O gracious Lord, may it please you as it is like sweet milch kine to the worshipper. 3

The matchless elixir of devotion that strengthens and gives eloquence is the sweetest of the beverage that is offered to you; in the ecstacy of joy, may you bestow your gifts upon us. O gracious Lord, with these hymns, we have established you in our prayers. 4

He rushes speeding like a horse towards our devotional prayers, offered to Him in our ceremonies, which are adorned by our sweet hymns. O lover of devotional sweet homage, here we have a call to citizens, whom you have been loving the best. 5

Whether you are at a far distance or on the earth or in heaven, O resplendent Lord of lofty counsel, one amongst lofties, may you harness your energies and come, O praise-worthy lord, the lofty one, with the lofty. 7

The vital powers which draw your chariot of universe are harmless; they surpass the impetuous strength of wind; through them you silence the evil forces against men, and with them you go round the sky. 8

O gracious hero, may we learn afresh to know you as you are. Surely you have been helping the vigilant men in the decisive battle, and giving aid to get control over even all round disciplined forces of enemies. 9

O bounteous Lord, as you have been giving help to the wise and pious in their sacred works, and to the man constantly engaged in efforts and the one resisting sensuous pleasure, may you in the same manner, O Lord of resolute will power, give me a herd of kine and cattle and wealth shining like gold. 10

O resplendent bounteous Lord, may you inspire the mind of the true seeker as in the past you have been inspiring leading ascetics of profound knowledge and mendicants of venerability as well as those possessing extrovert and introvert intellects. 1

The outspeaking teacher approaches the man of wisdom, lying crippled and decrepid. Aided by you, (O resplendent Lord), may the seer, deadly hostile to the wicked, desire to obtain thousands of kine (i.e. thousandfold wisdom). 2

May you glorify that resplendent Lord with the newest hymns who has been presently praised by sacred lores. He is wise and inspirer of sages, ever eager to enjoy. 3

It is He, who is established in sevenfold rays of the sun and in the three regions extending to the loftiest. He sends His divine roars down to all the living things and so displays His divine powers. 4

O gracious Lord, the one whom you help to give so that he gives to others, gets from you abundance of wealth and prosperity. Through devotional effection, we invoke you, the resplendent and the bounteous Lord, as you love to hear the devotional songs. 6

Never are you fruitless, O resplendent Lord, never do you desert the worshipper; now, O bounteous, your liberality as the enlightened giver, is poured out ever more and more. 7

You overpower the violence by your might and silence the exploiter with his own weapons. When he spreads abroad the distant sky and props it up, then the first dweller on earth is born. 8

You (the bounteous and resplendent Lord) are that wealth personified which is coveted by every generous master of riches, and even by the humblest miser. May that wealth be brought directly close to you, the energetic devotee. 9

The zealous seers glorify you with sweet prayers and affectionate dedication; may the wealth and strength spread among us and so too the spiritual delight. 10

O resplendent self, as you enjoy the spiritual knowledge originated in the mind, and as you relish the melodious songs of the threefold-free-sages, so may you enjoy the nearness of the universal law. 1

O resplendent self, may you be delighted in the proximity of such seekers who are full of spiritual joy, swift and strong as the cosmic wind, full of tenfold happiness, helpers of their dependents, brilliant as sun-rays and straight-forward. 2

It is He, who appropriates these sacred hymns for Himself, who bravely accepts sweet devotion, for whom the all-pervading sun himself comes striding his three wide steps and helps Him in a friendly way. 3

O performer of hundreds of selfless deeds, you are bountiful to him, whose praises and oblations you accept delightfully; seeking renown, we invoke you as the milk-man invokes the cow who yields abundant milk. 4

He gives riches to us as our father. He is so powerful that He can make anyone sovereign at His will. May He, the strong and bounteous Lord, give us immense wealth, cows and horses. 5

O provider of comforts, whomsoever you bless, he obtains wealth and becomes prosperous; therefore, we call on the resplendent Lord of wealth, the performer of benevolent deeds, with our devotional songs. 6

O you, the sun-like resplendent Lord, you are never neglectful; you guard both types of men (good and bad) with your care. You are the source of all worldly pleasure; you are immortal. Your radiance is established in lofty heaven. 7

O resplendent bounteous Lord, worthy of invocations, may you hear our hymns and our invocations of praise, as of those whom you favour with your blessings and who are most wise. 8

We have been singing the songs since ancient times and chanting these prayers for the resplendent Lord. We loudly sing many Bṛhati verses in the ceremonies in which devotees have poured forth many hymns. 9

The resplendent Lord has heaped together vast stores of wealth and wisdom of both the worlds and of the solar region. The Lord is extremely delighted to hear brilliant, purifying and devotional prayers tuned with enlightenment. 10

We come to you, O bounteous resplendent Lord, the highest among the bounties, the strongest among the strong, the best destroyer of the strongholds of evils, the provider of worldly riches, and the lord of all treasures. 1

We glorify the Lord, who, increasing His strength day by day, provides long life, wisdom and hospitality. O performer of hundreds of noble deeds, arousing you by our offerings, we call you to come with your bay-horses (i.e.with your vital forces). 2

Let the stones pour forth the honey juice for us all, the drops of devotional elixir. These drops have been pressed and squeezed out by all our people who are at a distance or near us. 3

May you repel all enmities and keep them far away; let us all win treasures for ourselves. Even among the intellectuals, the exhilarating parts of the prayful verses are effective, where you, O Lord, saturate yourself with divine love. 4

May you bless with progeny, that leader of all men, who is victorious in the struggles and who is a strong protector. May you thoroughly help with your powers the men who sing your glory and keep their spirits ever pure and bright. 6

May we fight the battle of life with the assurance of surely obtaining your help. With holy offerings and divine invocations, we worship you to fulfil our aspirations. 7

O Lord of vital forces, I go into prayer and into battle to obtain benefit with your aid. It is you, whom I make friendly, when I go seeking worldly gains and wisdom of and fight the opponents. 8

O resplendendent Lord, the singers chanting hymns glorify your strength. They offer sacred viands dropping with butter. These offerers have come near you with their prayers. 1

They approach the resplendent Lord with holy ceremonies for their protection. Surely their devotion delights you, just as you are pleased with the devotion of those who are possessors of worldly gains, and those who do not possess anything. May you, resplendent Lord, be delighted with us. 2

May all Nature's bounties come to us with one accord; let the cosmic forces provide comforts; and those, who punish for the offence, come near us to help, and may the vital principles listen to our call. 3

May the lord of divine forces, such as the sun, the omnipresent ether, and the divine speech, also seven rivers of the firmament, give ear unto my call. 4

O resplendent Lord, the destroyer of evil forces, best of all the bounteous forces, may you with your own precious gifts be our benefactor and companion for good. 5

O leader of heroic forces, the lord of battle, mighty in action, may you guide us in the conflict. May I be renowned like those who obtain their wishes by dedicated actions, by invocations, and by honouring Nature's forces. 6

Great indeed is the power of resplendent Lord. I clearly realise it and feel that we always obtain His rewards, O destroyer of usurpers. 1

Hundreds of showerers are shining like stars in heaven. By their excellence, they seem to sustain the heavens. 2

Hundreds of bamboos, hundreds of well-tanned skins, hundred bunches of grass, and four hundred red-hued mares are in my possession. 3

Let the devotees extol the seven-yoked team of cosmic forces; great is the strength of the person, who is not yet fully grown. It seems that many dark-brown mares are rushing along the path so that no eye can follow them. 5

56

O destroyer of wickedness, your inexhaustible rewards are apparent. The fulness of your bounty is as broad as heaven. 1

The destroyer of wickedness, performer of sacred deeds has bestowed on me tens of thousands of rewards from his own undecaying treasure. 2

A hundred mules and donkeys, a hundred fleecy sheep, a hundred helpmates, besides garlands, have been awarded to me. 3

A well-adorned mare which is not one of the common horses of the herd has also been brought to be given as a gift to the performer of sacred works. 4

Then the fire-divine, with its resplendent flame, comes to shine as the sun shines in the sky. This divine fire, the bearer of the sacred offerings, comes with its cosmic chariot. 5

O sacred twin-divines, both of you come quickly with your cosmic chariot, endowed with your perennial wisdom. O ever-true divines, may you come with your mighty powers and accept our tributes in the afternoon (the third Savana) worship. 1

O ever-true twin-divines, the three and thirty—innumerable cosmic forces—witness your arrival before sunrise. O twin-divines, may you beaming with flames of fire-divine accept our elixir of devotional love. 2

O twin-divines, your performance has been worthy of veneration. Verily you are the showerer of blessings on the creatures of heaven, mid-region and earth. Also wonderful are your thousands of solar rays at the time of water-evaporation. For all these come here to accept our elixir of devotional love. 3

Who is he whom the wise priests bring when they arrange the offering of various forms? Who is employed as a learned priest? And what is the worshipper's knowledge regarding him? 1

The universal fire-divine is one though kindled in various ways. The sun is one pre-eminently shining over all; dawn is one that illuminates the firmament; one is that which manifests in all. 2

I invoke the one who is bright and radiant, rich in enlightenment, who possesses a comfortable chariot yoked with three wheels, that comes rolling lightly, and at whose yoking, the marvellous treasures are obtained. I invoke that person to participate in the enjoyment of the divine elixir. 3

O lord of vitality and virtues, the plants and waters gain their power, as you go beyond the path of the firmament. No godless man can afford to exist as your enemy. 2

O lord of vitality and virtues, true is that saying of your sage : "the seven sacred metres of speech distil the stream of honey." O lord of splendour, may you aid that pious man who unbewildered keeps you ever in his thoughts. 3

O lord of vitality and virtues, the seven sister streams (five senses, mind and intellect) who are blissful, life givers and bright like pure butter—pour out sweet and shining elixir. May you provide strength and wisdom to the offerer of the worship. 4

O lord of vitality and virtues, to our great pleasure, we declare these two bright ones, the real strength of the supreme Lord. O lords of splendour, help us, the offerers of shining elixir, through these three times seven (21) aids. 5

O lord of vitality and virtues, as I see you have been giving divine speech, wisdom, and fame to the sages. I would also see the places which the ancient sages prepare for themselves, as they spread the web of sacrifice with holy austerities. 6

O lord of vitality and virtues, grant to the devotees cheerfulness without pride, and abundance of wealth; may you grant us food and prosperity and lengthen out our days that we may see long life. 7

O adorable fire-divine, come here with your glorious virtues; we honour you as our invoking priest. Let the presented offerings anoint you, the chief sacrificer; to come and enshrine our hearts. 1

O most vital Lord, the source of strength, our offerings go to you, as if in ladles, to find your glory in the sacred cosmic sacrifice—the creation. We glorify the eternal fire-divine, the protector and the one with brandishing flames. 2

O adorable Lord, you are wise, the sage, the creator, and the showerer of benefits. O purifier, O bright one, you are the source of bliss, most adorable and worthy to be worshipped with hymns in all noble deeds by enlightened devotees. 3

O ever-young and eternal one, may you bring the loving divine powers to me, guileless, to accept my tributes; O granter of comforts, come to accept food oblations; and being set in the altar, rejoice with praises. 4

O adorable fire-divine, you are truthful, the seer and widely spread; O kindled refulgent lord, the devotees invoke you to come and bless all. 5

O most resplendent fire-divine, may you shine forth and illuminate us; may you give happiness to all men and to your worshippers; you are supreme; may our noble men abide in the bliss of Nature's bounties, and subdue their rivals, and maintain their bright fires. 6

O fire-divine, you burn down the dry timber on the earth, so, O cherisher of our friends, may you burn him who injures us and whosoever evil-minded conspires to harm us. 7

Subject us not (as a prey) to strong mortal enemy, nor to the malevolent; O most youthful lord, guard us with your auspicious, unassailable and victorious protective measures. 8

O adorable Lord, protect us through the first, protect us through the second hymn. Protect us through three hymns, and through four, O lord of energy, O lord of riches. 9

May you preserve us from every violent demon and shield us in our battles of life. We approach you, our most intimate friend, and kinsman, to help us in our noble deeds and increase our strength to accomplish them. 10

O purifying Lord, bestow upon us excellent wealth, the augmenter of food. Bestow on us, O wealth-giver, that wealth of wisdom which all crave, and which is glorious, and which brings its own fame. 11

Wherewith we may overcome our adversities in the battle of life and destroy the designs of our wicked opponents, may you, O Lord of wealth and wisdom, bless us with food and quicken our thoughts so that we prosper. 12

The fire-divine brandishes his punitive powers as a bull who whets and tosses his horns; his sharp punitive jaws cannot be resisted. He is the son of strength, mighty-toothed. 13

O powerful fire-divine, when you spread out your teethlike flames on all sides, no one can resist them; may you make our oblations fruitful and grant us store of precious rewards. 14

You lie dormant within your mother's (womb) in the woods, which the mortal devotees kindle through attrition. Unweariedly you carry the offerings of the worshipper; thence you shine among Nature's bounties. 15

O fire-divine, the irresistible, now that we have made all preparations, let us invoke you. Having placed the oblation, let us invoke the cosmic fire-divine abiding in all places, the chief invoking priest of men. 17

O fire-divine, the worshipper pays homage to you by praises, chanted by the experienced priest in the ceremony celebrated with beautiful SAMAN hymns. May you of your own accord bring us such food and wealth of varied sorts, as are always within reach as aid to us. 18

O divine-fire, worthy of laudation, you are the guardian of men and destroyer of evil forces. You are powerful and 'never-absent' helper of the worshipper in his house, and you are the sustainer of heaven, ever-present there. 19

O lord of brilliant wealth and wisdom, let no evil enter us, and let no evil spirit torment our mind. O fire-divine, may you drive far away poverty and hunger beyond a pasture-measure (gavyuti), and chase away the strong demonic forces. 20

May the resplendent Lord come here and listen to both our hymns, whether recited or sung. May the mightiest supreme Lord with thought inclined to us be pleased to come near to cherish the elixir of devotion. 1

He is self-resplendent and powerful. The heaven and earth honour him as the showerer of benefits and supremely strong. He is unparalleled and undecaying in His might. He loves to accept our devotional offerings. 2

O resplendent Lord, rich in wealth and wisdom, may you shower strengthening food everywhere. O possessor of vital energies, we know you as unconquerable and the overpowerer in the fight. 3

O resplendent and bounteous lord of unbroken truth, let it be so as you in your wisdom decide to happen. May we, O lord of resolute mind, obtain food with your help; and may we without delay achieve highest wisdom, O Lord of justice. 4

O resplendent Lord of cosmic creation, may you fulfil our aspirations with all your possible assistance. We, O hero, obey your commands as you are bliss-giving, glorious, and granter of wealth and wisdom. 5

You are the increaser of our vital powers, and multiplier of our mental faculties. O embodiment of divine light, you are fountain of golden blessings; let no one impair the treasure laid up in you for me; may you grant me whatsoever I solicit from you. 6

Bounteous as you are, come, and get wealth to be distributed to your worshippers. O bounteous Lord, may you shower your bounty on a wisdom-seeker, and O resplendent Lord, shower your bounty on a vitality-seeker. 7

You keep hundreds and thousands of herds for granting; reciting long praises, we please you and bring you in our proximity for our protection, as you are the destroyer of strongholds of evils. 8

O resplendent Lord, performer of hundreds of selfless deeds, pride-personified, and with full confidence in self, whosoever, whether unskilled or skilled, offers devotion to you, his wishes are fulfilled by you. 9

With our prayers we invoke the resplendent Lord, the performer of hundreds of selfless deeds and the lord of riches, in case, He, the breaker down of strongholds of evils, equipped with strong measures to destroy the adversities, is prepared to hear my invocation. 10

We cannot worship Him with sinful mind, or miserly habits, or without faith in sacred fire-rituals. We assemble together to worship the resplendent Lord, the showerer of benefits with our pious deeds and make the Lord our true friend. 11

We approach our lord to help us in our struggles as He is powerful, the subduer of evils, the inviolate, to whom we are all indebted for prayers, and invincible. He, the best of charioteers, knows who is entitled for help and to whom should He extend His helping hand. 12

O resplendent Lord, may you give us security from the one whom we are afraid of. O bounteous Lord, be firm to give us your protections; drive away our enemies who try to harm us. 13

O Lord of wealth, you are the bestower of riches and home upon your worshipper; as such we invoke you with our devotional prayers, O bounteous resplendent Lord, lover of the sincere devotee. 14

The resplendent Lord is omniscient, all-knower, the destroyer of evils and most covetable adversities, the best protector. May He bless our son, also the last and middle ones, and keep watch from behind and before. 15

Let us extol the resplendent Lord as Truth and not Falsehood. Utter is the destruction of the infidel, and the regions of enlightenment are for the devotee. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent Lord gives. 12

He (the resplendent Lord) is most ancient, beloved of all and is equipped with mighty powers. It is He at whose doors, the father of the family, the householder, makes his prayers effective and is honoured by Nature's bounties. 1

May the equipments, the press-stones etc. useful for the sacred ceremony, never foresake our Lord, the maker of celestial region, nor the praises and hymns which are to be chanted. 2

The wise resplendent self discovers the lost cows of wisdom and discloses it to the vital senses. This, his great achievement, must be extolled. 3

As in former times, so now too, the Self blesses tne worshipper and helps him, when he expresses his sincere faith. May He come among us auspicious for our protection during the devotional offerings. 4

Forthwith, O resplendent Lord, the priests offer oblation to the fire with the exclamation Svaha, and the reciters successively praise your deeds for the attainment of the wealth of kine. 5

The singers know that all the beneficial deeds of might, performed or yet to be performed, rest with the resplendent Lord, who is unharmful. 6

When praises are addressed to the resplendent Lord by people of five classes, He destroys their foes by His strength; He, the Lord, is the abode of the worshipper's. 7

This praise is verily yours, for you have accomplished these many deeds and sped the wheel on its way. 8

When sustenance of various kinds is distributed over by the resplendent Lord, the showerer of blessings, all men step out with wide strides since life is so dear to them. They receive their share as cattle receive corn. 9

Presenting our praise and desiring protection, may we, with you, O priest, obtain wealth and food to offer worship to the Lord, an associate of the vital principles. 10

True, O Hero, by our hymns we offer praise to you. You appear at the due time of worship wearing auspicious splendour. may we conquer our enemies with you as our ally. 11

May the cosmic forces of vitality and showering clouds come to us to rejoice in the battle-challenge of life, meant to destroy the devil of Nescience. We, the reciters and singers, invoke all Nature's bounties, along with the resplendent Lord at their head, to give us protection. 12

May our hymns please you; O lord of resolute will power, please display your bounty. May you drive off the infidels. 1

May you crush with your foot the niggard churls who offer no homage. You are powerful; there is none so powerful as you are. 2

You are the lord of these devotional prayers, either expressed or unexpressed. You are the sovereign king of all creation. 3

May you come hither from heaven to our dwelling, announcing to your men. You fill both, the heaven and the earth. 4

May you break open the gnarled cloud with its hundreds and thousands of showers for your worshippers. 5

We invoke you at devotions offered by day and also invoke you by night; please fulfil our heart's desire. 6

Where is that showerer of benefits, ever-young, strong necked and who bows to none? Who is that priest that worships Him? 7

Whose offerings does the Lord, the showerer, accept? Who is the person that knows the resplendent Lord? 8

O destroyer of evils, in what way do our devotional offerings or heroic praises honour you ? Who is your dearest and nearest in the land? 9

These devotional songs are offered to you among men by me, a mortal. May you come hither; come swiftly and be delighted. 10

These delightful feelings of ecstasy originate in the lake of our heart along the river of intellect and in the land of the sense organs. 11

Come today, O resplendent Lord; hasten and enjoy our devotional expressions for our prosperity, and for your own exhilaration when you successfully crush the foes. 12

O resplendent lord, when you are invoked by us, the leaders of the ceremonies, from the east, the west, the north, or the south, come here quickly with your speedy vital forces. 1

Whereas you rejoice the blissful heaven, full of divine light, or in the ocean-like expanse, or you are busy on the earth where sacrifices are performed,—2

—O resplendent Lord, supreme and vast, by my praises, you are invoked to come and drink the elixir of our devotional prayers with delight as a cow eats fodder. 3

Let your vital steeds yoked to your chariot, O resplendent Lord, O divine, bring you here with your splendours and majesty. 4

O resplendent Lord, the strong, the wielder of sovereignity, you are being invoked and praised; may you come here and accept our devotional elixir of praises. 5

We, who have made all preparations of offerings, and have arranged for dedicational prayers, are calling you to come and be enshrined in our hearts. 6

O resplendent Lord, you are the common Lord of all the worshippers; and as such we invoke you now. 7

The devotees have pressed for you with these stones, the sweet elixir of devotion. May you, O resplendent Lord, be pleased to accept it with delight. 8

O Lord, please ignore all other worshippers and come quickly to us and give us abundant food and fame. 9

66

May you worship the resplendent Lord for your protection against the miseries. He is full of might and the revealer of wealth. Invoke Him, singing loudly the Bṛhat-Saman in the ceremony where the devotional sentiments are cherished. I invoke Him as men invoke a beneficial master of a household. 1

He is the lord of resolute will power. when He is in the state of raputre of spiritual joy, even the powerful evil tendencies cannot withstand Him, nor the firm Nature's forces, nor mortal men can resist Him. He confers glorious wealth on him, who reverently praises Him, and offers devotion and songs. 2

He is the powerful lord, purifier and master of all vital forces; He is illustrious and splendrous like gold. He opens the closed gates of wisdom and destroys the devil of dark evil forces. 3

He scatters forth ample wealth, accumulated by many, to His devotees. The resplendent Self, possessor of adamant will power, handsome in appearance, lord of vital faculties, acts freely as He pleases when propitiated with admiration. 4

O resplendent Self, praised by all, we hasten to bring to you our devotion and appreciation, which you have been expecting to receive from your sincere devotees since ancient times. 5

May you, O possessor of adamant will power, invoked by all, O celestial being, O acceptor of devotional love, be present at our worship performed for your exhilaration. You are the giver of delightful wealth and wisdom to him who prays and offers sincere devotion to you. 6

Today, yesterday, and all the days, let the resolute will power accept our tribute to His full satisfaction. We offer Him our reverence. Let him now hasten here on hearing our admiration. 7

Even the wolf-like, wicked, the savage beast, that kills the sheep, is obedient to Him in many ways. O resplendent Lord, may you, graciously accepting our praises, come speedily to us with wondrous thoughts, and welcome our greetings. 8

What act of might is there, which now remains unaccomplished by the inner self? Who has not heard His glorious title and his fame? He is renowned to be destroyer of evils from His birth. 9

How great and resistless and how invincible and matchless is the power of this destroyer of evils? He, the self, by his energies excels and overpowers all the dishonest usurpers, who only see the bright today (but have dark days ahead). 10

O resplendent self, the destroyer of evils, invoked by all, we, your very constant worshippers, offer new hymns to you as a regular honorarium from us, O possessor of resolute will power. 11

O resplendent Self, doer of many great deeds, the devotees invoke you with manifold hopes for protections which you do offer. O mightiest Lord, bestower of comforts, hear my call and rejecting the offerings of our opponents, come to us to bless us. 12

O resplendent Self, we are verily yours, therefore, we, the worshippers, entirely depend on you. There is none but only you to show us favour, O bounteous divine power, invoked by all. 13

May you deliver us from this dire poverty, hunger and calumny. May you grant us your protection with your wondrous might and thought; O mightiest, only you know the right way. 14

O pious devotees, let your sincere devotion be offered only to the Lord; fear not, O dear ones, this darkening spirit shall depart and vanish of its own accord. 15

To those learned men belongs wonderful wealth. They are worthy of all praise and help those who offer devotion and serve God. 3

You are great, O virtuous, O friendly and O men of justice; and great is your protection; we implore your protections. 4

O learned men, hasten to us before we die,—within our life-time; where are you, O hearers of our call? 5

May you graciously bless us with whatever wealth, whatever dwellings you can give to your devotees, who offer devotion and toil earnestly. 6

O godly learned men, great is (the crime) of the sinner; and treasure of happiness belongs to the sinless. I know you are void of sin. 7

Let not the snare bind us; may the resplendent Lord, subduer of all and renowned, release us from fetters for great acts. 8

O divines, ready to protect, molest us not with the destructive net of our wicked enemies. 9

O mighty mother Infinity, I call you to come to me; may you be kind to assist in the fulfilment of our desires. 10

O mother infinity, I call you to come to me. May you be kind to me to assist. Let not the snare hurt our children, plunged in shallow or deep waters. 11

O wide-ruling and far-spread mother-divine, may you come to us, the innocent, so that we may move freely and our children may live long. 12

They, who are at the top of men, invincible, benevolent and lord of self-sustained glory, abide by the accepted statutes. 13

O learned men, O mother Infinity, deliver us from the jaws of the ravening wolf as the thieves from captivity. 14

O learned men, let this snare, let the malevolent design, turn away from us without injuring. 15

O bounteous glorious men, we have enjoyed your help both now and in the days of old. 16

O wise divinities, keep us away from the host of sinners, working against us, so that we may live. 17

O learned men and mother Earth, may this latest protective measure release us from the bond of sin like a prisoner from his bonds. 18

O enlightened men, we have not enough strength to get rid of this snare of sin; may you graciously grant us your assistance. 19

Let not the mighty wheel of time, a net woven with divine hands, destroy us before old age. 20

O glorious divines, may you utterly dispel all sin, destroy wickedness, destroy the closely drawn net, and destroy evils everywhere. 21

68

O most powerful, resplendent lord, protector of the virtuous, we bring you here as if in a chariot to give us protection and well-being; you are the subduer of evil forces and rich in deeds. 1

You are rich in power, rich in actions, rich in knowledge and you have filled up everything with your comprehensive majesty. 2

You are supremely powerful, whose hands by virtue of your greatness grasp the all-pervading golden bolt of justice (that breaks all obstructions). 3

I invoke the (resplendent Lord) or that might which subdues all enemies and bows to none, and which rules over all mankind. He is followed by His men (the soldiers) and surrounded with chariots well-protected. 4

Men appeal to Him for aid in various ways in their struggles. I invoke Him for help, whose strength increases ever more and more. 5

I direct my praises to Him, and to Him alone, to the resplendent Lord, so that He may be pleased to accept devotions for my great gains; to Him, who is inspirer of success, who rules over all the sacred ceremonies performed at the start of all dedicated works. 7

You are so mighty that no mortal reaches the heights of your friendship, and none attains your might. 8

Protected by you, O Lord of justice, may we win ample wealth as your ally in battles of life, ever-bathing in the water and beholding the sun. 9

We adore you with sacrifices and with devotional songs, O resplendent Lord, a great lover of the devotional prayers, since you have been protecting me, the offerer of praises, in life-struggles. 10

O Lord of punitive justice, your friendship is sweet; sweet too is your liberality. Men must devote to dedicated actions in honour of you. 11

May you give to us, ourselves and to our children, ample wealth and spacious dwelling places. May you grant us our desires, so that we may live happily. 12

We solicit spacious path for our fellow-workers, for our cattle, for our chariot, for the successful performance of worship. 13

The six (two eyes, two ears and a pair of tongue and nose) come to me in pairs bearing pleasant gifts, in the exhilaration of the worldly joy. 14

I receive two steeds with excellent chariots from the giver of the sense of sight; two horses with excellent reins from the giver of hearing and two horses with excellent ornaments from the giver of smell and taste. 16

With my other gifts I receive six steeds with their mares (the lingerings of sense-desires), from the pious giver of the sense organs, the son of the mental faculty. 17

Among these straight-going steeds, there is one matured roan-mare (the discriminating intellect) with excellent reins and whip. 18

O fellow sense organs (act in a way so that) not even the man who loves to blame may find a single fault in you. 19

69

May you present your sacrificial homage with the Trc or a three-fold song of praise to the bliss-giver Lord, the gladdener of brave men. May He come to bless you in your sacred works with divine wisdom and with plentifulness. 1

For your sake, I invoke you who are the creator of dawns, the giver of musical notes to the conjugating rivers, the protector of cows, whom none may kill. 2

These dappled kine yield milk in plenty as from a well; which is mixed with the medicinal elixir and offered three times a day in the fire-ritual; and the oblations rise high to the brilliant abode of the sun. 3

May you praise, as prescribed, with melodies the resplendent Lord, the son of truth, the guardian of wisdom and protector of the good. 4

Let the speedy brilliant vital divine forces bring Him down to our synod where we in concert sing devotional songs. 5

The cow-like divine speech has yielded the sweet milk of wisdom (i. e. the exhilarating elixir) for the resplendent Lord, the possessor of adamantine will power. This wisdom then gets assimilated in the proximity of heart. 6

I (the soul) and supreme Lord, in communion, mount high up to the realm of the spiritual light; then having drunk the draught of spiritual joy, let us be united and reach that summit where twenty-one divine powers are seated by. 7

O pious devotees, may you glorify the resplendent Lord and sing songs of His praise; may your children also sing laudations as warriors sing praises of strong forts. 8

The war-drum utters its sound; the leathern godha twangs; the tawny bow-string leaps to and fro; may this hymn be raised to reach the Lord. 9

When the streams of thoughts rush forth like the dappled cows unflinching and easy to be milked, seize them quickly and mix them with the elixir of spiritual devotion and offer the drink to the resplendent self for enjoyment. 10

The soul drinks this divine elixir; all the divine powers drink it with delight; let our virtuous mind taste it with joy, and may our pious seekers appreciate it as the mother cows love their calves. 11

O blissful Lord, you are full of divine light; the seven streams of sense organs keep themselves flowing into your palate as it were a pipe with wide mouth. 12

It is he (the self) who directs his well-harnessed prancing vital faculties for his well-being. He, the swift guide, a deliverer of blessings, comparable only to Himself, is delivered from mortal worries. 13

The mighty self verily overpowers his adversaries. He is lovable and far-abiding. He cleaves the clouds by his thundering voice. 14

Like a young boy, He mounts His splendid chariot and prepares for His father and mother (earth and heaven) the great deer-like multipurposeful clouds. 15

O lord of your home, handsome-jawed, may you ascend your heavenly golden chariot which is bright, thousand-footed, sinless and auspiciously moving, and let both of us meet there and enjoy. 16

Pious devotees, presenting praises, worship the self-resplendent Lord with reverence, so that they may obtain His well-stored wealth and wisdom at the right time, when vital faculties bring him on his way. 17

The wise devotee (having purified themselves with all the disciplines) have reached their original abode of divines. They have made all the preparations for the dedicated service, such as spreading the grass and placing the offerings. (This constitutes the ritual aspect; on the spiritual side, the discipline is of purification, contemplation and the enjoyment of final bliss). 18

I praise that pre-eminent Lord of resplendence who is the sovereign ruler of mankind, who moves unrestrained in his cosmic chariots, the vanquisher of all adversities and the destroyer of evils. 1

Pay homage to the Lord of resplendence, the wielder of the bolt of punitive justice for obtaining protection, for He is the upholder of twofold might; He holds in his hand the splendid bolt of thunder which is as great as the sun in heaven. 2

None can attain Him by deeds, or by performing rituals who is the giver of fresh strength to all, praised by all, great, unconquered, dynamic, ever-daring and extremely strong. 3

I laud Him who is not to be withstood, who is mighty and the conqueror of adversities. When he was manifested, the strong rushing rays of light greeted Him and the heavens and the earths sent their loud voices out to praise Him. 4

O Lord of resplendence, were there a hundred heavens or a hundred earths—not even a thousand suns could be equal to you at your manifestation nor both the worlds of heaven and earth could be equal to your splendour. 5

O mightiest showerer of blessings, you have overwhelmed everyone with your vast bountiful power. O bounteous, the wielder of thunder arm, O possessor of adamantine will power, may you, with your wonderful protective measures, lead us successful to the enemies' enclosure full of kine. 6

O eternally long-lived Lord of resplendence, the mortal who does not pay homage to you as the sole adorable deity, shall not get his food, nor the one flourish who does not praise the lord who yokes to his cosmic car a pair of variegated horses and a pair of bay steeds. 7

Great priests worship that resplendent Lord who is propitiated by sacrificial homage and who is to be invoked in the shallows of land and in the depths of oceans and who is to be invoked in battles. 8

O brave, the giver of dwellings, raise us up to enjoy abundant food; raise us up, O bounteous Lord for abundant wealth; raise us up, Lord of resplendence for abundant fame. 9

O Lord of resplendence, you delight in offerings. You trample down your slanderers. O possessor of vast wealth, give us shelter under your vital parts and strike down the infidel with your blows. 10

May your friend, the cloud, hurl that infidel down from heaven who differs from us in rites and rituals, is inhuman, who does not observe fire-sacrificials, and who does not show reverence to Nature's bounties. 11

O most powerful resplendent Lord, loving us may you please take these gifts of wealth and cattle in your hand as grains of corn, and give us. Please give us the same second time and repeatedly with the same favour. 12

O my companions, give good heed to the worship, for, otherwise, how can we worthily pronounce the praise of the Lord, the destroyer, who is the recompenser of enemies and the sender of rewards and who is unvanquished. 13

O resplendent Lord, the common object of our worship, you are praised by many austere sages, for, it is you, the destroyer of foes who thus gives calves, one by one, in succession to your worshippers. 14

May the bounteous Lord, taking them by the ears, take away the cows with their calves from the clutches of their enemies just as an owner leads a goat to a drinking pond. 15

O adoreble Lord, may you protect us by your greatness against all malignity and hate of mortal man. 1

O (fire-divine), loving by nature, no human anger can harm you—you are the glory of the night. 2

O source of strength, auspicious in your glory, associated with Nature's bounties, give us wealth, coveted by all. 3

O adorable Lord, verily that worshipful mortal whom you protect, the malignities cannot obstruct his path of prosperity. 4

O wise Lord, the devotee whom you urge to attain wealth, verily becomes rich in cattle, through your assistance. 5

O adorable Lord, you give riches and brave children to the man who offers worship. May you lead us on to higher bliss. 6

Defend us, O all-knowing Lord; hand us not over to the malevolent and to the evil-hearted man. 7

O adorable Lord, let not the godless take away the wealth which you, the divine, have given, for you are the lord of all treasures. 8

O source of strength, the friend, the giver of dwellings, you give us, your worshippers, abundant treasures. 9

Let our hymns come near the consuming flames, beauteous and bright. Let our devotion and oblations come for protection near him who is rich in wealth and rich in praise. 10

(Our invocations are) to the all-knowing fire-divine who is the source of strength, the giver of all desirable good things, who is doubly immortal amongst mortals (since it is perpetually alive) and who is supremely exhilarating ministrant-priest in the house. 11

(O worshippers), I praise fire-divine for the inauguration of your divine offering at the time of worship. The fire-divine is first in reverence amongst Nature's bounties at our rites; I praise the fire-divine when enemies approach and I praise the same for the procurement of land. 12

May the fire-divine in his friendship give us food, as he is the lord of all desirable things; we solicit abundance for our sons and grandsons from fire-divine, who is also the giver of dwellings and the protector of our bodies. 13

Solicit with your hymns for protection the adorable fire-divine whose bright and consuming flames are spread all over. Praise the same for wealth, O much-renowned worshipper; the other devotees are praising that far-famed one on their own behalf. May you recommend to the same fire-divine for a house to me, his devotee. 14

We praise the adorable Lord so that He may keep off our enemies and their malignities; we praise the Lord so that He may give us peace and bliss. May He be worshipped well as the giver of cottage to the seers. He is verily the protector of all men. 15

May you present oblations. He has come and let the head priest (adhvaryu), who is well-skilled in devotional works, once again present offerings. 1

The invoker (the hotṛ) sits down by the side hot flame, rejoicing in his friendship towards the head priest. 2

For the sake of the offerer, they (the priests) thoughtfully place the fire in the forefront, and arouse it by prayers, while it sleeps. 3

The fire-divine, giver of food, scorches the vast bow of the firmament. He mounts the waters; and with his tongue-like flames he strikes the clouds. 4

Roaming like a calf, the bright-shining fire-divine finds none to fetter him and seeks a chanter to recite the praises. 5

And as soon as the great strong harness of his steeds and the traces of his chariot are seen—6

—the seven milk a single cow, of whom the two direct the other five to work on the resounding shore of the river. 7

Entreated by the ten fingers of the worshipper, the Lord of resplendence urges the clouds to fall from heaven with His threefold measure from the sky. 8

The newly-kindled flame fed on three materials (milk preparations, herbs and foodgrains), proceeds around the sacred fire; the priests annoint it with butter. 9

With reverence they pour out the inexhaustible cauldron, as it goes round and round from a height with its mouth below. 10

The reverent priests drawing near pour the superfluous butter into the large spoon, when they set the cauldron down. 11

Draw near, O cows, to the cauldron; the two mighty ones-heaven and earth. The sacrificial fire has been fed plentifully and is fruit-giving; both ears of the cauldron are golden. 12

Drop into the milked stream the admixture of sacred offering which reaches both heaven and earth; supply the offering of the liquids (mixture of Soma and milk) to the fire—the showerer of blessings. 13

They (the cows) know their own abiding place, as calves with their mothers, so they severally assemble with their kin. 14

They (the priests, out of the earthly oblations), consumed by flames, make sustaining food in heaven, for the fire-divine who devours it with his jaws, they minister all the food to the fire-divine as well as the resplendent lord (the sun). 15

The wind by means of the sun's seven rays milks the nourishing food and drink from the seven-stepped one. 16

O the Lord of light and plasma, I take the herbal juice when the sun is risen; it is a medicine to the sick. 17

He (the fire-divine), standing in the place chosen by me, the eager offerer, as a spot for presenting oblations, fills the sky on every side with his tongue-like blaze. 18

Rise, O twin-divines, on my behalf, as I prepare to perform benevolent works; may you yoke your car; let your protecting help be near us. 1

Come, O twin-divines, in your chariot which moves quicker than the twinkling of an eye. Let your protecting help be near us. 2

O twin-divines, you have cooled the fire (of worries) of the destitute by covering with ice (of refuge). Let your protecting help be near us. 3

Where are you? Whither are you gone ? Whither have you flown like hawks ? Let your protecting help be near us. 4

If this day, at any time or in some place, you listen to my invocation, let your protecting help be near us. 5

The twin-divines are the first to listen to our invocations; I approach for the closest friendship; let your protecting help be near us. 6

O twin-divines, you make a sheltering house for the destitute, let your protecting help be near us. 7

You ward off the fire from its fierceness for the destitute, while he adores you earnestly; let your protecting aid be near us. 8

Through his prayer, the seven-tongued dragon has obtained the flame-edge of fire (i. e. has come out of its basket); let your protecting aid be near us. 9

Come here, O lords of abundant wealth, listen to this invocation of mine. Let your protecting aid be near us. 10

O adorable Lord, desirous of strength and food, we glorify you with hymns for the attainment of happiness. You are dear and familiar friend and dear like the guest in every home. 1

(The fire-divine) whom men, bearing oblations and clarified butter worship with songs of praise as a friend;—2

—worship him, who is much lauded and omniscient. The earnest praiser of his worshipper sends to heaven the oblations presented in the worship. 3

We have come to that most excellent fire-divine who is the mightiest destroyer of the wicked. He is the benefactor of men, in whose beams (of radiations), the seer adept in the divine lore waxes great. 4

He (the fire-divine) is immortal and all-knowing visible through the gloom of darkness, worthy of praise and worshipped with invocations and affection. 5

That fire-divine is He, whom these priestly men worship with oblations and offer devotion as if with uplifted ladles. 6

This new hymn has been made by us for you, O the blissful, the well-manifested, the one glorious in deeds, the unbewildered, the beautiful and O the one dear as guest of men. 7

O adorable Lord, may it be dear to you, most pleasant and most agreeable. May you, well praised by it, grow mightier. 8

May this hymn be the rich source of wealth, and splendid with splendours. May it make your glory more glorious in the battle with the foe. 9

O men, adore the bright fire-divine who goes like a horse and fills our chariots (with the spoils of battle); and who is the protector of the good, like the Lord of resplendence and by whose might you win over (your enemies) the praiseworthy stock of wealth and food. 10

O most vital fire-divine, purifier, listen to my prayer. The seer of secret lore has made you the generous giver (of food) by his praise. 11

The worshippers implore you to obtain nourishment. May you listen to them during the battle with the foe. 12

Summoned before the seer of the divine lore, the humbler of the pride of adversaries, I purify with my hands the extremities (i.e. the longings and lingerings) of the four (sense organs—eye, tongue, nose and ear), as men shave the long wool of rams. 13

75

O fire-divine, like a charioteer, yoke your divine-steeds,—i.e. the forces, to invite Nature's bounties and first be seated yourself as their invoker. 1

O fire-divine, you are profoundly skilful; call for us hitherward the cosmic forces and assure that all our wishes will be fulfilled, 2

—since, O most youthful, the source of strength; O invoked one (in sacrifice), you are truthful and worthy of worship. 3

This fire-divine is the lord of hundred-fold and thousand-fold wealth. He is the chief of riches and a sage of piercing vision. 4

O cosmic fire technician, as craftsmen bend the felly, so direct the sacrifice towards yourself at our general call. 5

O multiform, may you with voice that ceases not, address your praise to this showerer of blessings, who shines at early morn.* 6

Which strong exploiter shall we overthrow to win kine in combat with the help of the missile of this fire-divine ? 7

Let the company of Nature's bounties not fail us, like dawns that float away or like cows who leave the unfaithful. 8

Let not the sinful tyranny of any evil-minded adversary harm us and smite us as the waves overwhelm a ship. 9

O divine adorable Lord, men sing reverent praises for the attainment of strength; may you destroy the enemy by strength. 10

O adorable Lord, may you send us abundance of wealth to fulfil our aspirations. O provider of space, grant us abundant space to live. 11

Leave us not in this conflict as a bearer of load; snatch up the wealth of infidels and give it to us. 12

O adorable Lord, may your fear pursue someone else (not us) to terrify him, increase our vigorous strength in battle of life. 13

The adorable Lord protects especially that person who is reverent and hard toiling, and whose holy labour He accepts. 14

Deliver us wholly from the hostile men and shield those, among whom I stand. 15

76

For the destruction of my adversities, I invoke now; the wise resplendent self,—the one that functions in association with vital breath and is the sovereign ruler of all by his might. 1

The resplendent self, in association of vital breath, cleaves into pieces the head of Nescience with his hundred-knotted bolt of adamantine will-power. 2

The resplendent self associated with vital breath rends the devil of Nescience asunder, and releases the obstructed thoughts of higher level (i.e. the waters from the firmament) to flow freely. 3

This is that resplendent Lord, by whom, in association with vital forces, the yonder heaven is conquered for quaffing the spiritual elixir. 4

We invoke with our praises the mighty resplendent Lord, who is associated with vital forces, and is the vigorous accepter of the sacred residue of the oblation. 5

With an eternal hymn, we invoke the resplendent Lord who is associated with vital forces and enjoys this spiritual elixir. 6

O resplendent Lord, showerer of blessings, performer of hundreds of selfless works, invoked by all, may you associated with vital forces enjoy the spiritual elixir. 7

O mighty thunderer, the resplendent Lord, an associate of vital forces, verily these delightful spiritual experiences, expressed with sacred hymns, and recited with faith and devotion are offered to you. 8

Drink, O resplendent Lord, joined with your friends, the vital forces, this elixir of spiritual joy, expressed on the recurring sacred days, and sharpen your bolt of justice with renewed vigour. 9

O resplendent Lord, with full expression of joy on your face, you enjoy the quaff of divine elixir, effused between the press-stones. 10

Both the heaven and earth shudder when you, O the resplendent Lord, uttering your fearful roar, crush down the infidel. 11

I make this sacrificial hymn, rising through eight steps (through eight cardinal directions), and finally it takes the ninth one (the sun in the Zenith). This is still less than the dimensions of the resplendent Lord. 12

As soon as born (at the sun-rise), he (the sun-divine), the performer of hundred selfless works, asks his mother : who are the mighty powers, who are the renowned? 1

His strong mother answered—O son, the conceit and the wicked are your two opponents in the society; may they be vanquished by you. 2

The destroyer of wicked-forces (the resplendent Lord) crushes both of them as spokes are hammered into naves of a chariot wheel. Then, the vanquisher of enemies swells in vigour. 3

Then the resplendent Lord (the sun-divine), at one draught drinks the contents of thirty lakes, full of divine elixir. 4

The resplendent sun pierces the clouds' vacant regions of space for the prosperity of wise sages. 5

The resplendent sun from the mountains shoots down with his far-stretched arrow and thereby causes to ripen the paddy. 6

That single shaft of yours, O sun, which you have made your faithful friend, is hundred-pointed, and thousand-feathered. 7

May you, O mighty and firm in battle since your birth, bring wealth for sustenance to us who are your praisers'—to our men and women. 8

The wide-traversing sun, despatched by you, brings all the waters created by you; he brings hundreds of cattle and rice boiled in milk; it is the resplendent sun who slays the water-steeling boar (i.e. the cloud). 10

Most deadly is your well-made auspicious bow with an unfailing golden arrow; your two warlike arms are fully equipped; destructively overthrowing, destructively piercing. 11

78

O brave resplendent, bring us thousands and hundreds of riches (or cows) and accept our sweet loving devotion and offerings. 1

Bless us with condiments, cows, horses, cosmetics (oil etc.) and along with them precious golden vessel. 2

O resolute giver of dwellings, bring us ear-ornaments. You are widely renowned as giver. 3

O brave, there is none other than you for our prosperity, no other as the distributor of wealth, and no other as the granter of rewards. There is no other than you, as our leader in sacrifices. 4

The heart of the lover of spiritual joy is always full by the praises of the devotee. He is the slayer of the all-shrouding darkness. 7

O cherisher of noble deeds, all the riches are combined in you and precious things and all unblemished gifts are easy for you to bestow. 8

The implorers beg for wealth, and they depend on the bounty of the liberal giver. By your grace, men satisfy the desires of the thirsty. 5

May he recover whatever is lost of him, and may (the Lord) inspire the pious man, and lengthen out his remaining life. 6

O most gracious blissful Lord, conferring tender love, void of pride in your achievements, and never failing, please dwell auspiciously in our hearts. 7

O blissful Lord, cause us not to tremble, frighten us not; O king, please injure not our sentiments with your wrath. 8

When in my house, I see the wicked enemies of Nature's bounties, then O king, drive away those who hate us,—O showerer of blessings, drive away those who wish to harm us. 9

Truly, O resplendent Lord, performer of hundreds of selfless tasks, I know no other bestower of happiness; may you be pleased to be gracious unto us. 1

O resplendent Lord, the invulnerable, you have always been helping us to win the battle of life; may you bless us to be happy. 2

What now? You are as if the prompter of the worshipper and guardian of the faithful. Will you not strengthen us, O resplendent Lord? 3

O resplendent Lord, may you help our chariot on; though now left behind, set it in the front, O Lord of adamantine will power. 4

Hallo, O Lord, why do you sit at ease? Make our chariot the first; and bring the fame of victory near. 5

Protect our victory-seeking chariot; everything is easy for you to do; so make us finely victorious. 6

O resplendent Lord, be firm; you are strong as a fort; O the repeller of adversities, this our timely auspicious homage comes to you. 7

Let not reproach reach us; far off is the goal; stored is the wealth (obtained from the enemies); may the enemies be excluded. 8

May you assume your fourth sacrificial name, the sacrificial (the yajniya or somayaji); we long for it; surely then you would be leading us as our protector. 9

We know, you are the achiever of many great deeds, the bestower of many gifts, the lord of ample wealth, and vast in measure for the ample protections you give. 2

O victorious lord, when you wish to give, neither divines nor men can refrain you, just as it becomes difficult to face a fearful bull. 3

Hasten hither; let us glorify the resplendent Lord, the possessor of wealth and the self-sovereign. Let none harm us by his wealth. 4

O sovereign Lord of resplendence whatever elixir of devotional invocation has been poured in the sacred ceremonial vessels, cups and bowls for you, may you honour us by accepting it. 7

Whatever elixir is visible in the ritual vessels here, like the moon reflected in the waters, may you kindly cherish it as you are the sovereign lord. 8

Whatever divine elixir of love, till then unstinted, the Gayatri metre, the hawk, brings for you with its feet, having won it from the guardians of the upper worlds, may you accept it as you are the sovereign Lord. 9

O lords of cosmic radiance, you are mighty in wisdom and repellers of adversities, you are the lords of wealth. May none of us possess that wealth which is earned by sinful means. 5

O bounteous divines, whether we dwell at home or on journey on the road, we invoke you to make us prosperous. 6

Come to us, O Lord of lightning, the sun, the cloud-bearing winds and the twin-divines, we are kith and kin to you. 7

O bounteous divines, we proclaim, that you are bound in one brotherhood, since you have been one in the mother's womb, and later on are born in diverse manner. 8

O ever youthful divine, protect us, your offerers, hear our songs and yourself take care of our children. 3

O fire divine, O adorable, the Lord of vital forces, the son of energy, with what hymns shall I adore you, praise you, for your venerable pride? 4

O child of strength, tell me with what offering of the worshipper shall we present to you with devoted mind and what prayer shall I now speak to you? 5

O Lord, be it so that our songs, as rewards, bring to us happy habitations, abundant wealth and food. 6

O Lord of the house (or universe), tell me, whose offerings and songs delight you the most and whose prayers inspire you to grant us the wealth of wisdom. 7

They keep him bright in their houses, the one who is renowned for glorious deeds, who is mighty and champion in the battles of life. 8

O twin-divines, your praises filled with splendour as a well is filled with water in time of rain; come like fountain to pour the stream. The sweet elixir of devotion is effused; come and relish it like two wild bulls (Gaura) at a pool. 1

Drink, O twin-divines and drink the exhilarating drops of devotional love. Be seated yourselves, O leaders, in the sacred hearts of devotees and with joyful heart accept it in the house of the worshipper. May you preserve his life by means of wealth. 2

The dear worshippers invoke you to come with all your protective measures; come in the early morning to the dwelling of the offerer who has completed all preparations like clipping of sacred grass to worship you (at the fire-ritual). 3

O twin-divines accept the exhilarating love, sit down with your radiant glow on the sacred seat. Magnified by our praises may you come from heaven to our sacred works as two wild bulls to a pool. 4

Come, O twin-divines, full of splendour with your shining cosmic forces, riding in golden chariots. You are lords of good fortune and upholders of truth. May you accept our loving devotion.

We, your wise praisers, invoke you for obtaining strengthening food. So wondrous, fair and famed for great deeds, O twin-divines, when you hear our praises, come to us. 6

We offer love and praise with our hymns, as cows low to their calf in the stalls; we invoke that glorious resplendent Lord, the subduer of evil spirits, who delights in accepting the beverage of loving devotion. 1

We solicit the radiant, bounteous giver, surrounded by powers like a mountain by clouds, the supporter of all and swift to obtain wealth, rich in cattle, and multiplied by hundred and a thousand-fold. 2

The lofty and firm mountains cannot stop you, O resplendent Lord. Whatever wealth you wish to give to a worshipper, such as I, none can object you therein. 3

You are warrior by your strength, wisdom and wondrous deeds. In might you excel all. May this hymn, which the enlightened sages compose, attract you this way for their protection. 4

O resplendent Lord, by your might you extend beyond the limits of heaven; and the region of the earth cannot comprehend you. May you bring us food and drink. 5

None can refrain you from being a liberal giver to your devotee, O bounteous Lord. O most liberal giver listen to our praise so that we may win food and favour from you. 6

Priests sing to the Lord of resplendence, the most evil-destroying sacred hymn the Brhat-Saman, by which the upholders of truth generate divine ever-wakeful radiance for enlightenment. 1

The Lord of resplendence, the destroyer of unbelievers, drives away the malevolent and becomes glorious. O radiant one of mighty splendour, lord of the troops of vital forces, Nature's bounties are invoking you for your friendship. 2

O priest, may you utter forth the hymn to your great lord of resplendence. Let the performer of hundreds of selfless works, the slayer of shrouding Nescience, conquer the devil with his hundred-edged thunderbolt. 3

O daring and fearless (Lord of resplendence), there is abundance of food with you. Please bring it to us. Let the mother waters—the rain water—impetuously spread over the earth as you smite down the demon of shrouding clouds and conquer every one. 4

O bounteous Lord; there has been a time, when none existed prior to you, and you were born for the destruction of the shrouding darkness. At that time, you spread out far and wide this earth, and brought the heavens, the luminaries, into existence. 5

May the resplendent Lord who must be invoked in all the struggles of life accept our hymns and our libations. He is the powerful destroyer of the shrouding darkness, and therefore, is worthy of praise. 1

You are the best of all in giving bounteous gifts. You are truthful and lordly in your acts. We solicit blessings worthy of you, O lord of vast riches and mighty source of strength. 2

O resplendent Lord, you are the object of these hymns. The unexaggerated praises are offered to you by us. O lord of vital faculties accept these fitting hymns, which we have thought out for you. 3

A maiden going to the stream of water, finds a soma herb in the path; as she carries it home she says, I will press it for the supreme Lord, I will press thee for the all-powerful Lord. 1

We wish to know you well, yet we know you not. O loving elixir, flow forth for the resplendent Lord, first slowly, then quickly. 3

May the Lord of resplendence repeatedly make us powerful. May he help us and work for us. May he repeatedly make us wealthier. May He unite me with my husband, who has been indifferent, unconcerned and unfriendly with me so far. 4

May you cause to grow all these three places, my father's bald head, his barren field and the part of my body below my waist. 5

May you make all these three bear a crop—the (barren) field of my father, my body and the (bald) head of my father. 6

Thrice, the resplendent Lord, the selfless worker of hundreds of deeds, cleansed the sinning woman, first having dragged her through the hole of a chariot (i.e. her body physically cleaned); then she has been passed through the hole of a cart, (i. e. her vital breathing complex cleaned) and lastly from the hole of the yoke (i.e. spiritually cleaned by the system of the Yoga). Her skin thus finally becomes resplendent like the sun. 7

May you sing the glory of that resplendent Lord, who accepts all your ablotions, who subdues all enemies, who is the performer of hundreds of selfless deeds, the most liberal of all men. 1

Proclaim that divine force as the resplendent supreme, who is invoked by all, praised by all and who is worthy of songs and renowned as eternal. 2

May the resplendent who causes all to rejoice, be the giver of abundant riches to us; may He, the mighty, bring riches to the devotee, who pray with humility. 3

The resplendent supreme, handsome and resolute, accepts the over-flowing elixir of love and dedication offered by enlightened devotees who are assiduously engaged in worship. 4

May you loudly praise that resplendent supreme that He may be delighted to accept our love. Verily it is this, which gives Him strength. 5

When the Lord is pleased to accept delightful prayers, He, through the strength of the divine love, conquers all things which have been created. 6

May He be brought hither for our protection, who is the resplendent supreme, the conqueror of many, who pervades even all our praises. 7

O wielder of bolt of justice, smiter of enemies, truthful drinker of the elixir of loving devotion, we know the value of the reward, given by you to all you faithful devotees. 18

Let the songs of praises expressed to the exhilarated be effectual on every side, resplendent Lord. May the poets sing the songs of praises. 19

Now when the Prayers are recited the resplendent Lord we invoke in Him all glories rest and in His domain all the seven senses rejoice. 20

In the three regions, Nature's bounties extend their cosmic sacrifice, that inspire sacrificial acts in the minds of men. Let our songs inspire these performances for prosperity. 21

Let the drops of divine love enter your heart, as the rivers enter sea, none surpasses you. 22

The resplendent Lord, the Showerer of blessings, everwakeful, you attain by your strength the drinking of this celestial juice which enters into thy heart and mind. 23

O resplendent Lord, dispeller of darkness, may the divine love be enough for your heart and mind. May the drops be enough for your numerous bodies. 24

The learned preceptors sing their hymns to receive sufficient vigour and wisdom. May the Lord of resplendence come to enshrine their hearts. 25

When our devotional prayers are presented, you are very substantially able to accept them—May they be enough with you to be given liberally to us. 26

O wielder of bolt of justice, may our praises reach you even from afar; may we come very close to you. 27

You verily love to overcome the wicked, you are a hero and firm, your mind is to be propitiated. 28

O Lord of great wealth, your offerings are pursued by all the worshippers; therefore may the resplendent Lord be also my ally. 29

Be not like a lazy priest, O Lord of nourishment; rejoice by drinking the elixir of divine love mixed with dedication. 30

O resplendent Lord let not the ill-designs threaten and obstruct us at night; let us crush them with your help. 31

With the resplendent Lord as our helper, let us answer those who envy us, for you are ours and we are yours. 32

O resplendent Lord, may your friends, the poets devoted to your service sing loudly your praise-songs, again and again. 33

O Sun, you ascend to meet the Lord, the showerer of blessings, the bountiful giver, famous for wealth and who is the benefactor of men; 1

and, who cleaves, by the strength of His arms, the ninety-nine i.e. innumerable, strongholds of evil forces, and is the dispeller of the devil of ignorance and annihilator of the wicked. 2

May the resplendent Lord, our auspicious friend, milk for us, like a rich-streaming (cow), riches in horses, kine and barley. 3

Whatsoever, O sun, the destroyer of darkness, you have risen upon today as ever, it is all in your control. 4

O Lord of all, that is quite True, when at the height of your glory, you think, "I shall never die". This thought of yours is indeed true. 5

O resplendent, you go at once, unto all those sacred places where devotional elixir is effused, be they far or near. 6

We invigorate that great resplendent self, for overpowering strong evils; may He be a bounteous Showerer. 7

The Resplendent exists for giving (us blessings). He is the most mighty, established to enjoy the exhilarating divine love. He is lustrous, glorious and worthy of our devotional love. 8

The powerful resplendent is invincible and hastens to confer wealth on his worshippers. Strengthened by praises, He becomes formidable like thunderbolt, full of strength and unconquerable. 9

O resplendent, worthy of our priase, may you hymned by us, make our path plain even in the midst of difficulties; (hear us) bounteous Lord, since you love us. 10

You are the one whose commandments and Truthful domain can never be defied—neither by divine powers nor by men, howsoever irresistible. 11

O Lord of handsome appearance, the two divines, heaven and earth, reverse your might which no one can resist. 12

It is you who deposits white milk in the black and the red and in the cows with spotted skins. 13

When in their state of misery, all the divine powers shrink in various directions, overpowered by the furious might of the wicked, the fear of the monster seizes them. 14

Then the resplendent supreme, the repeller of dark forces, conqueror of evils, puts forth His might. Verily He has no enemies and is invincible. 15

The best evil-destroyer and the famous champion of mankind—I urge Him to grant munificence. 16

O Lord, bearing many names and praised by many, when you are present at our various sacred ceremonies, may we be endowed with keen intellect followed by virtuous actions. 17

May the destroyer of evils to whom many libations are offered, know our desires—may the bright and vigorous Lord hear our Praises. 18

O Showerer of blessings, with what type of help of yours you gladden us and with what type of wealth, you make your worshippers happy and prosperous? 19

O Showerer of blessings, the Lord of the fortune and the destroyer of evils, at whose hymn—accompanied libations, you come and rejoice to accept the loving devotion? 20

Rejoicing in your spirit, bring thousand-fold opulence to us and remember that you are the giver to your dedicated devotee. 21

These devotional elixirs with their consorts i. e. waters lovingly to be enjoyed. The exhilarating food or the elixir spreads to waters. 22

The devotees i.e. the sense organs with a desire to fulfil their aspirations, invigorate the soul by their strength and vigour at the time of worship and there by bring the task to completion. 23

(Repitition of VIII 32-29) 24

O fire, these sweet oblations of medicinal herbs are ready for you and all the preparations are complete, may the resplendent Lord be invoked now for the benefit of worshippers. 25

May He give strength, His brilliant light and precious things to you, His worshipper and to His praising devotees who adore the Lord of resplendence. 26

O performer of hundreds of selfless actions, possessor of wondrous strength I offer you all the praises; O resplendent Lord, be gracious to your worshippers. 27

Bearing the loving devotion of heart, we invoke you the mightiest repeller of evils; for O resplendent Lord, you have been kind to us. 30

O Lord of rapturous joy come with vital vigour to our expressed devotion, come with your vital faculties to our place of worship. 31

O resplendent Lord, the dispeller of darkness, your power is known in a two fold way. May you come with your vital divines to our effused libation. 32

O slayer of evil minded men, you are the acceptor of these sweet prayers. Come with your vigour to our effused libation. 33

May the Lord of respledence give us the bounteous enlightened person to partake of our sacred viands. May He, the mighty, give us physical strength. 34

The cow (Firmament), the famous mother of the wealthy rain shedding clouds—she pours her milk. She is worthy of all honour, who yokes (the two mares) to their cosmic chariots. 1

She is the one in whose bosom all Nature's bounties maintain rest and the sun and moon move in peace to maintain their ever-lasting laws. 2

Therefore all our priests in their worship always sing the glory of vital principles that they may drink the divine elixir. 3

This elixir is effused by us. Let the self-resplendent twin-divines and vital principles gladly accept it. 4

May the sun, the cosmic order and the Ocean accept the elixir, purified by the strainer, abiding in three places and granting posterity. 5

The sun also is eager in the morning to accept this effused elixir mixed with the milk of love, as a Priest. 6

When shall the divine sages gleam and shine like waters across the sky? When shall the vital principles, pure in vigour, destroyers of adversities, come to bless our offering? 7

Shall I to-day claim your Protection, O mighty divines, beautifully bright in yourselves? 8

For Him, the resplendent Lord, the dawns make their courses longer; for Him the nights utter pleasant voices; for Him the waters, the seven mothers and the seven rivers stand still and offer an easy passage for men to cross over. 1

By Him, the thrower of bolt, unassisted, the thrice-seven (21) ridges of the mountains are pierced as under. Neither divines nor any mortal can accomplish what He the Showerer does in his full grown vigour. 2

The resplendent's iron bolt of justice is grasped firmly in His hand; enormous strength rests in His arms. When He goes forth to battle His thoughts (in head) and speech (in mouth) are inspiring to every-one and His followers rush near to hear His commands. 3

I count you as the holiest of the holy and the over-thrower of the imperishable. I count you as the banner of warriors; and Showerer of blessings to men. 4

When O resplendent Lord you grasp in your arms thy pride-humbling thunderbolt to smite the dragon of evil clouds loudly roar and the cows loudly bellow. At that hour, the Brahmanas offer their worship to the Supreme Lord. 5

Let us praise that Lord of resplendence who made these Worlds and Creatures. All beings are indeed subsequent to Him. May we maintain friendship with supreme Lord by our hymns. Let us bring the Showerer of blessings near us by our praises. 6

All the divine forces, so far your friends, forsake you, and in fear fly away from the snort of dark evil forces. O resplendent, let your friendship with the vital principles continue as ever and may you conquer all adverse forces. 7

These three sixty vital principles have been worthy of respect and nourish your vigour like milch cows gathered together. We come to you, may you grant us a happy portion. We think that we produce strength in you by paying our homage. 8

Who can withstand your sharp weapon, the host of vital principles, and the thunderbolt of yours, O Lord of resplendence? The infidels are weaponless and they have been abondoned by godly men. Drive them away by your discus of straight-forward justice. 9

For obtaining wealth, offer melodious hymn to supreme Lord who is powerful, majestic, strong, mighty and most auspicious, sing many praises to the resplendent for He appreciates them immensely. For the sake of me, and for the sake of my child, may He instantly give ample wealth. 10

Send forth your Praise—songs to mighty resplendent who is borne by hymns as in a boat across the rivers. Bring that wealth for the sake of child through prayer of the Lord who is renowned and benevolent. May He instantly give ample wealth. 11

Perform those of your ceremonies that the resplędent Lord may accept. Praise Him to whom Praise belongs. Worship Him with your Service. O priest, adorn yourself, grieve not. Let Lord of respendence hear your praise. May He Quickly give ample wealth. 12

The swift-moving darkness of nescreves with ten thousand dark elements stood in the depths of celestial ocean. By His might resplendent Supreme (the Sun, the source of enlightenment) catches him shorting in the water; He, the benevolent to man, smites His malicious bands. 13

I see the swift-moving demon lurking in an inaccessible place, in the depths of the celestial ocean. I see the dark demon standing there as the sun in a cloud. I appeal to you, O Showerers; "Conquer him in battle". 14

Then the swift-moving one (the cloud) shining forth assumed his own body in the bosom of the celestial Ocean. The resplendent sun associated with the cosmic force of universe as his ally conquers the clouds of nescience that comes against him. 15

Then, at your birth O resplendent, you were an enemy to those seven who never had a rival. You recover the heavens and earth when concealed in darkness. Then you give joy to the mighty Worlds. 16

O Thunder armed, the resolute one, you strike that power with your bolt; which was unrivalled. You destroy cruel power with your weapons. O resplendent you recover the wealth by your wisdom. 17

You are the Showerer of gifts and mighty destroyer of the hindrances of thy worshippers. You set the obstructed rivers flowing freely; you win the waters, unduly controlled by infidels. 18

Most wise is he, who is delighted in the loving devotion expressed by devotees. His wrath cannot he repelled. He is splendid as day. He alone performs cosmic rites for his worshipper. He alone is the dispeller of darkness, a match to everyone as they say. 19

The resplendent Lord is the destroyer of evils, the sustainer of men; let us invoke Him with an excellent hymn, since He alone is worthy of praise. He is bounteous, our protector, our encourager. He is the bestower of food that makes us glorious. 20

As soon as born, i.e. since eternity, He, the resplendent becomes the dispeller of evils. He is the leader of the enlightened ones and worthy to be invoked. Performing many sacred acts for men, He is worthy of reverence. His associates also appreciate the loving devotion. 21

O resplendent, the lord of celestial light, with those enjoyable things, which you carry off from the wicked, may you prosper and along, O bounteous Lord, may they prosper who Praise you and who surrender their worldly gains at your feet. 1

Those horses, those cows, that imperishable wealth which you secure from infidels, bestow them on the faithful worshipper who offers loving devotion to you and is liberal to the priests, not on the niggard. 2

O resplendent, the one, who is careless and carelessly disregards divine powers and pays no homage to you – Let him lose his Precious Wealth by his own evil devices and then may you hide from him the wealth that gives prosperity. 3

O Lord of splendour, whether you are in the far-distant region or O the dispeller of darkness, whether you are near at hand—the worshipper longs to bring you, from thence by his hymns, as if speedily rushing on divine long-mained steeds. 4

Or whether you are in the brightness of heaven, or at the base of the sea, or whether, O mightiest dispeller of darkness, in some place on this earth, or in the firmament—come to us. 5

O Lord of resplendence, Cherisher of noble deeds of strength, now that our loving devotion is expressed, may you delight us with your wholesome food and ample wealth. 6

O Lord of resplendence, turn us not away but share in our joy; you are our Protector, you are our Kith and Kin; turn us not away. 7

Sit with us, O resplendent, at the place of worship to cherish the Sweetness of our benevolent deeds. O bounteous Lord, sit beside us and render great protection to your praiser. 8

O Thunderer, neither divine forces nor mortals equal you by their acts; you surpass all beings by your might; even the cosmic powers are not equal to you. 9

The assembled priests have roused the resplendent, the leader, the conqueror in all battles. They urge Him (through their hymns) to Shine. He is the mightiest in his acts, the destroyer of evil spirits, the terrible, the most powerful, the Stalwart and the furious. 10

The spiritually realized sages together Praise the resplendent that He may accept loving devotion. He is the lord of light and strength. He is observant of pious laws which enhance His strength and His protecting capacity. 11

At the first sight the realized sages bow to him, who is the circumference of the wheel. The priests worship with their praise the joy-bestowing Lord who is radiant and unharming. May you also, full of earnestness, whisper in his ear your hymns. 12

Again and again I invoke the strong bounteous resplendent Lord, who alone really possesses the irresistible might. May he draw nigh through our songs. He, the best bestower of wealth and worthy of worship. May He, the thunderer, make all our pathways pleasant for us. 13

The resplendent Lord, the mightiest and refulgent, you verily know how to destroy those strongholds (of wickedness). By your strength, all the powers of the World tremble,—O thunderer, heaven and earth tremble with fear. 14

O Lord of resplendence, hero, assuming many forms, may your truth be my guard. Bear us, O most powerful, over our many sins as across waters. O radiant when will you honour us with covetable opulence which may be all-nourishing and manifold? 15

Sing a Saman hymn, a Brhat song to the mighty, the resplendent sage; to the performer of sacred deeds, to the all knowing one and the one who loves to receive sincere devotion. 1

Your are the conqueror, O resplendent; you give splendour to the Sun; you are the creator of all things, the lord of all the divine powers, and the mighty. 2

O resplendent, you pervade the luminous realm of the sky, illuminating heaven by your splendour, and the divine powers submissively solicit your friendship. 3

Come to us, O resplendent, O beloved, a great triumphant, the whom none can canceal and lord of heaven, vast as a mountain spread on all sides. 4

O truthful cherisher of noble deeds, you surpass heaven and earth; O resplendent you are the fasterer of him who prepares the libation. You are the lord of heaven. 5

O resplendent, you are the stormer of many hostile cities, the destroyer of the infidels, the sustainer of mankind, the lord of heaven. 6

O resplendent, lover of hymns, we sent our earnest praises to you as people sporting in a water pool (splash their friends) with handful water. 7

As a lake swell with the rivers, so our praises, O hero, O thunderer, augment you as you grow more and more day by day. 8

With holy songs are yoked to the broad wide-yoked chariot, carrying the resplendent Sun, the two horses moving at the word-signal. 9

O resplendent, all beholding and bounteous, bring us strength and valour; we solicit you the host over-powering champion. 10

O giver of dwellings, you have been our father, and our mother, O performer of hundreds of sacred deeds, we pray for that happiness which is yours. 11

O Mighty selfless worker of hundreds of deeds, invoked by many, I praise you, keen acceptor of offerings; may you give wealth. 12

O thunderer, your rich and opulent worshippers—every day, to-day and yesterday have been offering devotion; which you have accepted. Listen to us O resplendent, who offer you praise. May you please come to our dwellings. 1

O Lord of vital faculties, handsome and fair, rejoice, we pray to you. May your votaries come to you. O resplendent, lover of songs, may your glories be exemplary and claim our lauds. 2

As the gathering solar rays proceed to the sun, so the vital principles clouds turn back to Lord of resplendence and by their power divide all his loftiest glories among those who have been or will be born; may we meditate on our share. 3

Praise him the bestower of wealth whose bounties are never evil; gifts of the Lord of resplendence are fortunate. He never fails in fulfilling the desires of His worshipper and always unhesitatingly gives boons. 4

O resplendent Lord, you in conflicts are the subduer of all opposing elements. You are the vanquisher of the wicked, as well as the progenitor. You are the destroyer of all enemies. O opposer, you beat down the opponents. 5

Heaven and earth follow your destructive forces as mothers to the child; since you smite the demon of nescience, all the hostile hosts shrink and faint at your wrath, O resplendent. 6

Summon hither for protection; Him who never grows old, who is the repeller of enemies – himself never repelled. The resplendent Lord is swift in victory a good guide, the best of Charioteers, unharmed of any, the augmenter of water. 7

We solicit for our protection, resplendent, the consecrator of others but himself consecrated by none, source of strength, possessing hundred fold protection; possessing hundred fold knowledge, judicious to all, rich in wealth and granter of treasuries. 8

I with my child come here before you along with all nature's bounties who follow behind me. O resplendent Lord when you keep my share of wealth for me, may you put forth your strength in my favour. 1

I offer the elixir of the exhilarating drink first to you, let the effused enjoyable ambrosia be placed within you; may you be a friend on my right hand, then shall you and I cast down our all adversities. 2

O my companions, eager to put a fight against one's own evils, may you fervently offer sincere praises to the resplendent Lord. Since His name is Truth, He is personified truth. Only the agnostic says, "There is no Lord Resplendent. Is there any who has ever seen him? Whom shall we praise?" 3

"Here I am, O worshipper, behold me here; in my greatness I surpass all that exists. The holy commandments magnify me by their laudations, rending with strength I rend the World's as under". 4

When the lovers of sacred laws approach me, while I sit alone across Nature's Splendour, then my mind within proclaims to my heart, "my friends with their children are calling and crying for me." 5

Verily all those your deeds; O bounteous Lord, are to be declared at prayer halls, which you have achieved for him who offers libations. Verily you open the gate of paradise for the austere sage and his kith and kin. 6

Now haste severally and individually forward; he, your opponent, is not here who stopped your way,—has not the Lord of resplendence let fall His thunderbolt in the very vitals of that evil your enemy? 7

Rushing swift with the speed of thought, he, the falcon, the bird of wisdom, passes through the iron fort; then having gone to heaven, he brings the ambrosia to the thunderer. 8

The thunderbolt of punitive justice lies in the midst of the firmament with the cosmic waters compassed round about; and the enemies flying in front of the battle, bring offerings of submission to it. 9

When the divine speech, the queen, the gladdener of the divine forces, is enshrined uttering things not to be comprehended, she milks drink and sustenance for the four quarters of the earth. But whither now does her best portion vanish? 10

The offerer of worship who succeeds in invoking the Light and Bliss for the attainment of his desires, in truth consecrates the oblation for the cosmic sacrifice. 1

Those two leaders (Light and Bliss) of cosmic forces, who are great in might, far-seeing, resplendent and most far-hearing, perform their deeds like two arms, by the help of the rays of the Sun. 2

O light and bliss, the one who hastens to appear before you, becomes the messenger of Nature's bounties; he wears an iron head and exults in his wealth. 3

He whom no man questions nor summons back, who waits not for dialogue—defend us today from him and from his encounter; defend us from his arms. 4

O rich in righteousness, sing to the Lord of light and to the ordainer, a reverential hymn produced in the worship hall; recite a propitiating poem to the Lord of Bliss; sing a hymn of praise to these radiant divine forces. 5

It is these who inspire one radiant and victory giving source of strength for the three regions; they are invincible and immortal, and survey all the abodes of mortal men. 6

O ever true divines, come hither with accordant mind to listen to my uplifted glorious praises and my rites; come to partake of my offerings. 7

O Lords of great Wealth, when we solicit your bounty, that wealth which demons cannot thwart, then, both of you O leaders of our ceremonies, directed and adored by enlightened preceptors come to us, furthering our most ancient and glorious praises. 8

Come, O Lord of Vitality, to our heaven reaching prayers with its beautiful hymns of praise. This bright elixir of devotion has been kept aside and poured out for you through the purifying strainer. 9

The ministrant priest comes by the straightest paths to realise divine experiences of spiritual joy. Then, O lord of the Vital World, may you have both the drinks, one the elixir of pure devotion and the other, which is mixed with the milk of dedicated actions. 10

Verily, you are great, O radiant sun; verily, you are great O eternal, the greatness of the great one, we adore; Verily you are great, O supreme God. 11

Verily, O Sun, you are great in fame; O divine, you are indeed mighty among the divine forces in might. You are the destroyer of the wicked and the preceptor. Your glory is wide-spread and unconquerable. 12

She (dawn) bending lowly downwards, clothed in red hues and rich in rays, is seen advancing with various tints to the ten regions spread out like arms. 13

Three kinds of manifested Nature's Creatures—move across our sight. The others enter around the cosmic glows. The mighty Lord (the Sun) stands within the Worlds; wind, the purifier embraces all the quarters of space. 14

O divine adorable Lord, every young, wise, Protector of the household, it is you who give abundant food to the worshipper. 1

O all-wise resplendent adorable Lord, may you bring Nature's bounties hither with our reverential hymn of praise. 2

O ever-youthful, with you as our ally and inspirer of wisdom, we overcome all hurdles for the attainment of food and vigour. 3

The one who is like an austere sage and like an honest toiler—such a pure fire-divine pervading the entire space of firmament, I invoke. 4

The one who is most wise and who roars like wind along with a loud thunder of the cloud—such a fire-divine, pervading the entire space of firemament, I invoke. 5

At our solemn rite, free from violence, I call to the fire-divine—the one wide-spreading, most abundant and mighty, for attaining courageous grandson (brave progeny). 7

May He stand by us as a creator and through His power shape us into an exemplary model and may we find glory through His art. 8

The fire-divine is supreme surpassing the glory of other Nature's bounties; may he come to us with abudance of food. 9

May you praise him who is the most glorious of all the ministrant priests. The fire-divine is foremost at all places of worship. 10

(May we praise the fire-divine) who is pure light, and pervades all, is the eldest, and shines in all homes; he is the swiftest to hear from far away. 11

O sage glorify him who wins the battle like a strong steed; and who like a friend conquers all over adversities. 12

The sister hymns full of divine wisdom rise to you proclaiming your glories; they stand kindling you in the presence of cosmic vitality. 13

The cosmic waters find their place in him for whom the triple uncovered, but unbound firmament is established. 14

Highly pleasant is the place of the supreme God who pours forth all desires with His inviolable protections; auspicious in His appearance like the Sun. 15

O fire-divine, blazing with radiance through our oblation of pure butter, bear our sacrifice to Nature's bounties and honour them. 16

Nature's bounties, as mothers, have borne you, O fire-divine, the seer, the immortal and the bearer of the oblation. 17

O all-wise fire-divine, the seer, the messenger, the most excellent, the bearer of the oblation, the enlightened sages enshrine you at the altar. 18

Neither Cow I have, nor axe with me for cutting the wood, inspite of it, I have come to you to offer my sincere devotion. 19

Most youthful fire-divine, whatsoever fuel that we offer to you, may you be pleased there-with. 20

Whatever timber the white ant has gnawed or whatever the emmet has infested—may it all be welcome to you as butter. 21

Let a man, when he kindles fire ritual, perform the ceremony with a devout mind; he kindles it with the guidance of priests. 22

Our laudations are offered to that adorable Lord to whom all our actions and prayers are dedicated, to the one who is manifest as the noblest and wisest, and is the furtherer of the works of pious men. 1

Fire-divine when invoked during the sunshine runs around the mother Earth with speed and force, proceeds to Nature's bounties, and finally takes his place at the summit of heaven. 2

Men tremble (on account of the uncertainty of success) while they incessantly devote to the sacred sacrifices, unmindful of that, may you continue to devoutly worship in the solemn rite the adorable Lord the bestower of thousands of blessings. 3

O fire-divine bestower of dwellings the mortal whom you wish to lead the opulence and who presents offering to you is rewarded to possess a son who is brave and reciter of hymns, and a lord of great wealth. 4

O Lord of vast wealth, he (the devotee) with his vigour wins wealth stored even in the strong-holds of enemy and gains unperishable fame. O Lord, in your divine protection we constantly obtain all our cherished treasures. 5

May our praises like the principal cups of the exhilarating elixir of devotion proceed to Him who is the invoker of Nature's bounties and who cheerfully distributes all wealth to men. 6

The liberal worshippers honour you with their songs as the steed harnessed to the chariot. O Lord of men, grant wealth to us, to our children and grand-children. 7

O Chanters, sing forth to the mighty adorable Lord who is most bounteous, observant of truth and radiant with His refulgentce. 8

The opulent, glorious and adorable Lord when worshipped and enkindled, pours fourth on his devotees abundance of food along-with progeny; may his ever-fresh favour continually come to us with all kinds of strength. 9

Praise, O singer of hymns, the adorable Lord, the dearest guest of our friends, and the controller of the cosmic chariot. 10

He is the explorer of treasurer open and concealed, and brings them hither. When He rushes to fight with evil, His power is hard to be checked like waves of rivers rushing down a declivity. 11

May none obstruct adorable lord, praised by all, from coming to us. He is dear as our guest and giver of dwellings. He is excellent invoker of Nature's bounties and skilled in cosmic sacrifice. 12

O adorable Lord, giver of dwellings, let not those be harmed who approach you in whatsoever manner with hymns of praise, may you become the envoy of the Worshipper who offers his libation and duly performs sacrificial acts and praises you. 13

O adorable Lord, friendly to vital powers, come with cosmic vitality to cherish our loving devotion; come to bless the praises virtuous devotee; delight yourself at our solemn rite. 14

NOTES ON BOOK No. 8

Hymn-41

For verse 2, see Nir.X.5.

2. Nabhakasya, नाभाकस्य, of the pain daspiser; See नभाकऽवत् VIII.40.4.

Sapta-svasa, seven sisters; see also VI.61.10 (सप्तस्वसा सप्तार्षत् पञ्चप्राणा मनोबुद्धि श्च स्वसेव यस्याः सा सरस्वती, सत्यावाणी)–Daya. On VI.61.10—The seven means: five vital breaths, mind and intellect; सप्तस्वसारम्—Nir. X. 5; also seven kinds of metre or speech: सप्तिभ: वाग्भि: "I praise him who possesses seven sisters at the birth of rivers, and who belongs to the middle region, with noble speech, hymns of the manes, and panegyrics of Nabhaka at the same time. Let all others be killed." (गिरा गीत्यास्तुत्या, with speech, i.e. song or eulogy, पितॄणां च मन्मभि:, मननीयै: स्तोमै:, equal to the respectable hymns of the manes and the panegyrics of Nabhaka—नाभाकस्य प्रशस्तिभि:, at the same time Nabhaka was a seer, ऋषिर्नाभाको बभूव, who in his speech, called him one having seven sisters at the birth of these flowing rivers—य: स्यन्दमानानामासामुपोदये सप्तस्वसारमेनमाह वाग्भि: स मध्यम इति निरुच्यते—He, Varuna, is called one belonging to the middle region; अथैष एव भवति, now this is he himself, नभन्तामन्यके समे, let all others be killed. By all others is meant, who bear enmity to us, who are evil-minded, i.e. whose minds or whose thoughts are sinful,—मा भूवन्नन्यके सर्वे ये नो द्विषन्ति पापधिय: पापसंकल्पा: —Nir. X. 5.

Nabhakasya, also means "of the sky covered with clouds"—मेघावृतस्याकाशस्य (नाभाक: नभते वधकर्मा – Nigh. II.19).

Pitrinam, पितॄणां, of the seasons (ऋतवो वै पितर: —SBr. II. 4.1.32. The colour of lighting (विद्युत्) at the beginning of the rainy season (month of asadha, आषाढ़) indicates the forth-coming season:

वाताय कपिला विद्युदातपायाति लोहिनी।
कृष्णा सर्वविनाशाय दुर्भिक्षाय सिता भवेत्॥

If the lighting is of yellow colour, it indicates the forth-coming storms; if of intense red colour, then of abnormal hot weather; if of the dark colour, then it is indicative of utter destruction; and if white colour, then the forth-coming famine, if of ordinary usual colour, it indicates favourable and auspicious healthy and conducive conditions. Mahabhasye. II.3.13).

Hymn-42

The hymns have two triplets; verses 1-3 are devoted to Varuna and 4-6 to Asvins. The Ṛsi is Arcanas or Nabhaka and the metre anustup.

For Varuna, see earlier notes; he has meted the measure of the earth; is a supreme monarch, he is wise guardian of ambrosia; with his reliance, one ascends in life the safe-bearing vessel to cross over all difficulties.

For Atri, Asvins and Nasatya, see earlier notes.

Hymn-43

For verse 31, see Nir. IV. 14.

Virupa Angirasa is the Ṛsi of the hymn and it is devoted to Agni and is in the Gayatri metre; Agni is the fire divine; He is the most adorable Lord, all-beholding; knows all that is born, the Jatavedas; he is able to consume vast forests with his smoke-bannered fires, borne by the wind, diversely spreading in the firmament. His station is in the waters, he clings to the plants, becomes their embryo and is re-born. One of the finest description of Agni is in this hymn.

3. Arokah-Iva, आरोका:ऽइव, like wild animals (आरोचमाना: पशव इव — Sayana).

Dat-bhih, with teeth (दत्ऽभि: दन्तै:—Sayana).

4. Vṛthak, वृथक्=पृथक् diversely. See Yv. XXXIII. 2, where पृथक्, is for वृथक्.

5. Ketavah, ensigns. (केतव: ज्ञापका: —Daya. on Yv. VIII. 40; rays, किरणा:—Yv. XXX. 31; प्रज्ञानानि—Yu. VII. 41; विविध जगत: पृथक् पृथग् रचनादि नियामका ज्ञापका: प्रकाशकाश्चेश्वरस्य गुणा: —Daya.).

6. Dhasim, food (धासि मन्नम्; क्षुत् धासि इत्यन्न नामसु पाठात्—Nigh. 11.7).

7. Tarunih, तरुणीः, tender herbs (तरुणीः श्रोषधीः).

8. Janjanabhavan, जञ्जणाऽभवन् = मल्मलाभवन इति ज्वलति कर्मसु पाठात्— Nigh. I. 17; blazing.

10. Nisanam, निसानं = लिह्वानं = Kisses.

Juhvah, ladle (= स्रुच् ; जुह्वः होमसाधनभूतायाः स्रुचः —Sayana).

11. Uksa, उक्ष; OX; Uksannaya, for the eater of the ox.

Vasannaye, वशान्नाय, for the eater of the marrow (वशान्नं यस्यासौ वशान्नः —Sayana).

Somaprsthaya, सोमपृष्ठाय = सोमघृत पृष्ठाय, on whose back the libation is poured; bears the herbal plants on his back. (ox, fat and Soma libation). (सोमपृष्ठाय सोम-पृष्ठो येन तस्मै = अग्नये—Daya. on Yv. XX. 78).

13. Bhrgu-vat, like Bhrgu, as by Bhrgu (Bhrgu = man of distinction (भृगव इति पदनाम—Nigh. V. 5) विद्यायाऽविद्याया भर्जका निवारकाः, the one who dispels ignorance by his enlightenment.—Daya. on I.143.4; I.127.7.

Manusvat, मनुष्वत्, by Manus; by intellectuals.

Angirasvat, अंगिरस्वत्, by men of vitality.

14. Agni, thou art killed by Agni, a sage by a sage, a saint by a saint and a friend by freind, See Ait. Br. I. 16 : "For thou, O Agni, by Agni, sage by the sage, good by the good," (he says); one is a sage, the other a sage; one is good, the other good. "Friend with friend thou art enkindled" (he says); he is his own friend in that Agni is Agni's (अग्ने अग्निना विप्रो विप्रेण सन्त्सतेति विप्र इतरो विप्र इतरः तन्नितरः सन्नितरः सखा सख्या समिध्यस इत्येष ह वा अस्य स्वः सखा । यदग्निरग्नेस्तं मर्जयत सुक्रतुं पुरोयावान माजिष—Ait. Br. I. 16).

16. Robit-asva, रोहिदश्व, driven as if on red horses (one who has red horses).

18. Angirastama, अंगिरस्तम, most vital among vital forces.

19. Manisinah, मनीषिण:, intellectuals (मनस ईश्वरा: —Sayana).

Medhirasah, मेधिरास:, men of wisdom (मेधाविन: —Sayana).

Dhibhih, with actions and thoughts (धीभि: कर्मभि: —Sayana).

Admasadyaya, for the attainment of food; for the furtherance of their property (अद्मसद्या अन्नस्य भजनाय—Sayana).

28. Sahaskrta, procured by mechanical strength; i.e. by the process of attrition (सहस्कृत: सहसाबलेन कृतश्चासि—Sayana).

29. Dhasim, food (धासि अन्नं हवि: —Sayana; Nigh. II. 7).

31. Siram pavaka-socisam, शीरंपावकशोचिषं —(Praise) Agni of purifying flames, i.e. of pure light (पावक दीप्तिम्), it rests through all (अनुशायिनमिति वा) or pervades all (आशिनमिति वा—Nir. IV. 14).

32. Sardhan, doing with speed, boldness of force (शर्धन् बलं कुर्वन्—Sayana; वेगं कुर्वन्—Venkata).

Hymn-44

The hymn is devoted to Agni, the Ṛsi is Virupa Angiras.

2. Suktani, सूक्तानि, Su+uktani, sweet spoken words.

5. Haryata (vocative), O propitious one. O 'amiable one; O

beloved (हर्यत कामयमान—Sayana).

6. Ṛtvijam, the priest (ऋत्विजं ऋतौ यष्टव्यम्, i.e. one that is to be adored in due season; see I. 1. 1., also ऋतुयष्टारं, i.e. one who offers in due season (Sayana on V. 22. 2).

7. Kavikratum, him by whom the rites are performed (कविक्रतुं क्रान्तकर्माणम्); the wise; possessing sharp intellect; omniscient (क्रान्तप्रज्ञ, सर्वज्ञ—Sayana on III. 2.4; III. 14. 7; I. 1.5; कविः सर्वज्ञा सकलविद्यायुक्ता क्रतुः प्रज्ञा कर्म क्रमदर्शनं वा यस्यतम्—Daya. on Yv. IV. 25; अग्निं=भौतिकम् on III. 2.4; कवीनां विदुषां क्रतुः प्रज्ञाकर्म वा क्रतुवता यस्य स तम्—Daya. on III. 27. 12).

Kavi, कवि, wise. He is so called because his presence is desired (√कम्), or the word is derived from √कव्, to praise (कविः क्रान्तदर्शनो भवति कवतेर्वा—Nir. XII. 13, on V. 81.2).

9. Santya, O giver of good (सन्त्य भजनशील—Sayana); bestowing gifts, bountiful (only vocative in addressing Agni); may be derived from Sat. सत्.=benevolent, kind.

11. Risatah, those who injure (रीषतः=रिषतः हिंसकान्—Sayana) (रिष हिंसायाम्; रिषे=रेषणाय, हिंसकाय Nir. X. 45; cf. VII. 34. 17; V. 41.16, usually occuring with Ahirbudhnya.

13. Urjah, ऊर्जः, food (usually energy, or fuel) (ऊर्जः अन्नस्य—Sayana; from ऊर्क्=अन्न, Nigh. II.7)

Urjah-napatam, source of energy, son of food.

14. Agne, O fire of spirituality.

Barhisi, बर्हिषि यज्ञे; in the hearts.

Devaih, divine attributes.

16. Apam retansi, seeds of aquatic life, (अपां रेतांसि स्थावर जंगमात्मकानि भूतानि—Sayana); the seed of waters, the movable and immovable productions of the creative waters.

21. Sucivrata-tamah, the purest offerer; extremely pure in functions (शुचिव्रततमः अतिशयेन शुद्धकर्मा—Sayana).

23. Yat syam aham tvam, tvam va gha sya aham, If I were thou or thou wert I; or if I were rich like you or you were poor like me.

24. Kam, कम्=च=and=cum.

Vibhavasuh, rich in splendour (विभावसुः दीप्तिधनः —Sayana).

25. Dhrtavrataya, to the observant of pious rites (धृतव्रताय धृतकर्मणे —Sayana).

Vasrasah girah, my loud praises; (वाश्रासः वाशनशीलाः गिरः स्तुतयः —Sayana).

26. Visvadam, all-consuming; all devouring; the devourer of entire oblation (विश्वादं सर्वस्य हविषोऽत्तारम्—Sayana).

Puru vepasam, the performer of numerous acts (पुरुवेपसम् बहुकर्माणम्—Sayana).

27. Stomaih, स्तोमैः praises (स्तोत्रः)

28. Santya, see note on verse 9. (सन्त्य भजनीय, adorable even phala-prada, फलप्रद, or giver of success).

सन्त्य (vocative)—I.15.12; 36.2; 45.5; 9;III. 21.3; V.51.3; VIII.19.26; 44.9; 28.

29. Adma-sat, seated at the oblations; see Adma-Sadyaya: VIII.43.19.

अद्मऽसदः — VI. 30.3

अद्मऽसदाम् — VII.83 7

अद्मऽसद्याय — VIII 43.19

अद्मऽसद्वा — VI. 4.4.

30. Kave, O wise (कवे क्रान्तकर्मन् !—Sayana).

Duritebhyah, prior to sins (or enemies), or misfortunes (दुरितेभ्यः पापेभ्यः).

Mrdhrebhyah, prior to assailants, (मृधेभ्यः हिंसकेभ्यः).

Hymn-45

For verses 1, 20 and 37, see Nir. VI. 14; III.21 and IV.2 respectively.

1. Anusak, आनुषक्, it is the name of a series in succession (आनुषग् इति नामानुपूर्वस्य । अनुषक्तं भवति —Nir. VI.14). Also आनुषक् आनुकूल्ये.

Strnanti barhih anusak, स्तृणन्ति बर्हिः आनुषक्, they spread the grass successively.

For Anusak, मानुषक्, see : I.13.5; I.52.14; 58.3;72.7; II.6.8; III.11.1; 41.2; IV.4.10; 7.2; 5.12.3; V.6.6; 10; 9.1; 16.2; 18.2; 21.2; 22.2; 26.8; VI.5.3; 48.4; VIII. 44.8 etc.

(मानुषक्=अनुकूलं, II.6.8; अनुकूलतया I.58.3; मानुकूल्ये VI.48.4—Daya.).

2. Prthuh svaruh, broad their sacred shaving पृथु: स्वरु: ; Svaru is not explained by Sayana; it is the first shaving or splinter from the sacrificial post—Wilson. See Katyayana, VI. 4.12; VI. 9.12.

स्वरु: —IV.6.3; VIII 45.2; स्वरूणां VII.35.7.

Svarum, the giver of heat; the sun (स्वरुं तापकमादित्यम् —Daya. On I.92.5; Svaruh = स्वरु: उपदेष्टा, the instructor, Daya. on IV.6.3; Svarunam, स्वरूणां = यज्ञशालास्तम्भशब्दानाम्—of the sound coming from the sacrificial post); स्वृ शब्दोपतापयो:—Unadi I 10 (स्वरु: - स्वर्यन्त उपतप्यन्ते प्राणिनोऽनेनेति स्वरु: वज्रं वा).

3. Ayuddhah, Unopposed powerless to combat (अयुद्ध: इत् प्रागयोद्धेव). See also I.32.6. (अयोद्धेव०).

5. Apsah na, like a stately elephant (अप्स: न दर्शनीयोगज इव—Sayana; apsah is also beautiful lightning. See Nir. III.5 and V. 13 for अप्सस् (निरिणीते अप्स: —I.124.7; अप्स इति रूपनाम—Nigh III.7); displays her beauty like a smiling damsel).

Apsas, is a synonym of beauty: it is derived from the negative of √प्सा, to devour; it is not to be devoured, but to be gazed at, or to be made pervasive. It is for clear perception (Sakapuni). In "whatever forbidden food." apsas signifies something which is not to be eaten.

From apsas is also derived the word 'upsarah', one who possesses a beautiful person (Nir. V. 13).

Girih, गिरिः, cloud—Nigh. I.10.

7. Svasvayu, स्वश्वयुः, borne by excellent vital energies, desirous of gallant steeds (स्वश्वयुः कल्याणमश्वमिच्छन्—Sayana).

8. Vajrin, वज्रिन्, O strong and resolute.

13. Gayam, गयम्=गृहम् (गयं गृहमिवो उपद्रवेभ्यो रक्षकम्).

Adarinam, the opener (आदारिणं आदर्तारम्—Sayana cf. VIII. 24.4).

Arujam, आरुजम्, guarding from harm.

14. Panim, the trader; barterer, (see I.33.3. also).

15. Vedah, वेदः, wealth; treasure (Nigh. II.10; see VII.15.3).

Revan, रेवान्, opulent (रेवान् धनवान्—Sayana).

Adasurih, the miser, one who does not give alms (अदाशुरिः अदानशीलः —Sayana).

20. Rambhah, रम्भः and pinakam, पिनाकम्, are synonyms of staff. Rambhah, i.e. people grasp it: We grasped thee as decrepit people their staff (आ त्वा रम्भं न जिव्रयः ररम्भ). The sense is that we lean on thee as decrepit man on their staff (रम्भः पिनाकमिति दण्डस्य। रम्भ आरभन्त एनम्। आरभामहे त्वा जीर्णा इव दण्डम् —Nir. III.21).

24. Goparinasa, by sincere dedication; also by the Soma mixed with milk (गोपरीणसा गव्येन पयसा संमिश्रितेन सोमेन—Sayana).

Gaurah—Buffalo (Wilson); deer (गौर: मृग:, deer or a beast—Sayana).

26. Kadruvah, pertaining to Kadru,—the name of a Ṛsi; a sincere seeker; Kadru is also pitcher. Kadruvah word does not occur anywhere else in the Ṛgveda.

27. Yadau, यदौ, from Yadu, people toiling hard. See earlier notes on Yadu.

Turvase, तुर्वशे, from तुर्वश, Turvasa; see earlier notes; also intellectual people; active person keen to obtain the four fruits: dharma, artha, kama, and moksa.

Ahnavayyam, अह्नवाय्यम्, day to day miseries. Name of an enemy (Wilson; Sayana). The word does not occur anywhere else in the Ṛgveda. Macdonell and keith have taken no note of it. Also ahnu= he prevailed indisputable in battle.

Turvane, in the combat or battle (तुर्वणे संग्रामे—Sayana).

29. Ṛbhuksanam, ऋभुक्षणम्=महान्तम्, mighty; see earlier notes:

ऋभुक्षण: — VII.48.1; X.92.11; (vocative); IV.37.3; 5; 7; 8; VII.37.1; 2; VIII.7.9; 12; 20.2; X.93.7.

ऋभुक्षणम् — I.111.4; VIII. 45.9; 93.34; X. 74.5.

See also ऋभुक्षा: (Nigh. III.3; महन्नाम; Nir. IX. 3; king of the Ṛbhus).

Tugrya-Vrdham, तुग्र्यावृधम=तुग्र्यस्वृधम्,, augmenters of water (उदकस्य वर्धयितारम्—Sayana; तुग्र्या=water, Nigh. I.12).

30. Trisokaya for attaining three splendours; for the one with triple splendour (see also X.29.2); for trisoka or for people of three regions. (त्रिशोकाय त्रिशोकनामर्ष्यर्थम्—Sayana), Trisoka being the name of an ancient mythical Rṣi (I.112.12; VIII.45.30; also Av. IV. 29.6). A Saman or chant; named after him is referred to in the Pancavimsa Brahmana (VIII.1)—Macdonell and Keith.

Also the one who has regrets for being involved in malicious qualities, actions and temperaments (त्रिषु दुष्ट गुणकर्मस्वभावेषु शोको यस्य विदुषः सः —Daya. on I.112.12).

Girim, cloud (गिरिं मेघम्—Nigh. I.10).

37. See Nir. IV 2. O men, what friend has said, "Unprovoked I have killed my friend? Who flies from us."=Here the word मर्या, marya, is synonym of man, or it may be a synonym of boundary (since boudary is settled by men). (मर्या इति मनुष्यनाम मर्यादाभिधानं वा स्यात् मर्यादा मर्यैरादीयते). Boundary is the line of division between two bounded places (मर्यादा मर्यादिनो विभागः).

Methati (मेथति) means to provoke (मेथतिराक्रोशकर्मा—Nir. IV.2).

Hymn-46

1. Tva-vatah vayam smasi, त्वावतः वयं स्मसि "We belong to one like thee; since none other is like Thee, we are Thine."

8. Nṛbhih, from men from foes (नृभिः नृभ्यः शत्रुभ्यः —Sayana).

9. Taruta, the deliverer from enemies (तरुता शत्रूणां तारकः—Sayana).

12. Visve manusa, all men; all priests associated with men (विश्वे सर्वेष्यच्वयंवादय: मानुषा मनुष्य सम्बन्धिन: —Sayana).

14. Vah—व:=यूयं=you all (Sayana); or for your sake (वो युष्माकं हिताय—Sayana).

Vaco yatha, वचो यथा, in your words, or, i.e. in the Gayatri or Tristubh metre (वच: वाग्युष्मदीया यथा येन प्रकारेण प्रवर्त्तते गायत्र्या त्रिष्टुभा वा—Sayana).

15. Nunam-atha, नूनमथ; it is not नूनमद्य (नूनं+मद्य) as mistaken by Sayana.

16. Athyatha (अति+अथ); it is not अद्यापि or अप्यद्य as mistaken by Sayana.

17. Visva-manusam marutam iyaksasi, thou art worshipped of all men: thou showest favour to all men and the Maruts; or to the Maruts who are known to all men (cf VI. 49.4).

18. Ajmabhih, with streaming trains of clouds; along with vehemently flowing waters (अज्मभि: बलै: बलकरैरुदकै: —Sayana); ajman is also गमनम् cf. I 112.17; also sangrama=अज्म=combat, Nigh. II.17; cf. I.112.17)

19. Codayat mate, O impeller, O inspirer; O thou whose mind sends or brings wealth to this worshipper (चोदयन्मते । चोदयन्ती धनं प्रेरयन्ती मतिर्यस्य स:—Sayana). Also see V.8.6, where it is applied to Caksuh, eye: चक्षु चोदयन्मति, having the mind as its instigator.

20. Bhujyum purvyam (cf. VIII.22.2.), these are the two epithets applied to the chariot of the Asvins, Purvyam, going before in the battle and Bhujyum the preserver of all. (पूर्व्यं संग्रामेष्वग्रतो गन्तारं; भुज्युम्—"भुज्पालने", सर्वस्व रक्षकम्—Sayana on VIII.22.2); also भुज्युं भोजयितारम्; पूर्व्यं प्रवृद्धम् —Sayana).

21. Ivat, ईवत् = गमनवत् गवादिलक्षणम्, such, so great.

Purtam adade, पूर्तं आददे, would receive this complete gift.

Vasah, वश:, god-depending; having reliance in God. (कामयमाना:—विद्वज्जन—Daya. on I.129.1).

Pṛthusravas, possessor of immense treasures; far-famed (in mythology, a king of this name).

The term is mentioned twice in connection with Vasa, वश—I.116.21; VIII.46.21. In the present verse, it refers to the generosity of पृथुश्रवस कानीता. For the episode, see the Sankhayana Srauta Sutra.

Asvyah, अश्व्य:=अश्वपुत्र:, if refers to vasa as the son of Asva. (See I.112.10; 116.21; VIII.8.20; 24.14; 46.21; 23; 50.9; X.40.7).

Kanite, loving Lord. The word occurs twice in this hymn also:

कानीतस्य—VIII.46.24.

कानीते —VIII.46.21.

27. Aratve, अरट्वे for the courteous (the term occurs nowhere else in the Ṛgveda)

Akse, अक्षे, for the liberal.

Nahuse, नहुषे, for men.

Sukṛtvani, सुकृत्वनि, determined to perform noble deeds.

These names Aradva, Aksa, Nahusa, and Sukrtvan are regarded in mythology as either the officers of Pṛthusravas or other Kings.

सुकृत्वनि — VIII.46.27

सुकृत्वने — VIII.13.7

नहुषः — I.122.8; 10.11; VII.6.5; VIII.8.3; X.49.8; 80.6; 99.7

नहुषस्य — I.31.11; V.12.6

नहुषा — VI.26.7

नहुषे — VIII.46.27

नहुष्यस्य — X.63.1

नहुष्याणि — IX.88.2

नहुष्येभिः — IX.91.2

28. Asvesitam, inspired by vital energies (or horses) (अश्वेषितं अश्वैः प्राषितम्—brought by horses—Sayana).

Rajesitam, रजेषितम्, brought by camels or mules (रजः शब्देनोष्ट्रो गर्दभो वोच्यते—Sayana; Venkata).

Sunesitam, शुनेषितम्, brought by dogs.

Ajma, food (अज्म अन्नम्—Sayana, Nigh. II.7).

Hymn-47

The Adityas, as well usas (उषस्, dawn) are the deities. Various self-luminary bodies in the celestial region are the Adityas; or different solar rays of the widest spectrum are the Adityas. The Adityas advert evils: they are giver of happiness, as birds spread their wings over their young. Their aids are void of arms. It is only through painful means that their favours are gained, but he whom Adityas visit gains riches without difficulty. (1—7), Aditi, the mother Infinity, the Prakṛti is the mother of Mitra, Aryaman and Varuna (9) The Adityas give us cattle, milch kine and male offsprings (12).

Trita Aptya ought to be free from all evils (the evils of physical, mental and spiritual realms, tri, the three), the Adityas, and the usas help in eradicating these evils (13-16) Usas is invoked to get rid of evil dreams, ill-omened dreams (14-18).

Anehasah vah Utayah su utayo va utayah, this is the refrain of verses 1-18; your aids are void of harm; your aids are true aids (मनेहस: व: ऊतय सुऽऊतय: व: ऊनय:).

4. Visvasya gha it, विश्वस्य घ इत्, of every one (who does not offer sacrifice; सर्वस्याप्ययष्टु—Sayana).

6. Parih-vṛta it ana, परिह्‌वृता इत् अना, by painful means; by observing penance etc. (परपीडितेनैव तपो नियमादिना—Sayana).

Ana janah, the living man; the man that breathes (मना प्राणयुक्ता जन: —Sayana); one endowed with life; cf. IV. 30.3. विश्वे च न इह् धना त्वा—Sayana—"Verily men succumb through the loss of wealth given by you"—Wilson.

Asha vah (प्राश व:), swiftly moving (प्राशव: शीघ्र गमना: According to the Pada-Patha प्राश and व: are separate terms, but Sayana in interpreta- tion has combined into one मानव:).

7. Sa-prathah sarma, सप्रथ: शर्म=समान प्रथना: सर्वत: पृथुभूता वा शर्म सुखम्; You have given great (सप्रथ:) happiness (शर्म).

Tam tigmam, that fierce or harsh (तिग्मं तीक्ष्णं).

Tyajah, wrath, anger (त्यज: क्रोधनामैतत्—Sayana).

9. Revatah, (Nigh. II.13) wealthy; rich (रेवत: धनवत: —Sayana)

Aryamnah, अर्यम्ण:, of Aryaman; of the vital wind.

10. Tridhatuh, Three gunas; three elements; three-fold—the three, cold (शीत), heat (आतप) and moist or wet wind (वात), (See VI.67.2 in connection with वरूथ्यम्—शीतवातातपानां वारयितृ; also त्रिवरूथ—VIII.18.21—शीतातपवर्षाणां निवारकम्—Sayana). According to Dayananda we have: त्रिधातव: (1)—सत्व, रजस् तमस्, (V. 47.4) three elements; (2) अस्थि, मज्जा, वीर्यं —Yv. XXI. 37). (bone, marrow and semen).

त्रिवरूथ: (three abodes)—1. शीत (cold), उष्ण (hot) and वर्षा (moisture)—(VI.46.9).

2. भूमि. (ground), अध: (underground), अन्तरिक्ष (midspace) (Yv. XXI.55).

3. उत्तम (best), मध्यम (middle), निकृष्ट (worst)—(VI.15.9).

4. आध्यात्मिक (spiritual), आधिदैविक (mental), and आधिभौतिक (physical) Yv. XV.1) pleasures.

5. Rains, winter and summer (V.4.8).

11. Sutirtham, secure destination (सुतीर्थं शोभनावतार प्रदेशम्—Sayana); secure place to land (घाट) by the side of river.

Spasah, स्पशः, visible, shore (स्पशः स्पष्टाः, स्थिताइत्यर्थः—Sayana); from √स्पश्, to see: As a man standing on the shore looks down on the water below or on someone in it (यथा कूलस्थः पुरुषोऽधोगतमुदकं जिज्ञासुस्तत्रस्थं मनुष्यं वा—Sayana).

12. Na avayai na upayai (न अवस्यै न उपस्यै), neither to threaten nor to assail us; nor to him who threatens or assails us. (अवयै हिंसितुं अवगच्छते, उपयै उपगच्छते—Sayana).

13. Trite aptye, त्रिते आप्त्ये, Trita Aptya was a deity dwelling in remote distance, and consequently evil was sought to be transferred to him (Av.XIX. 56.4)—Trite Aptye asmat are dadhatana, keep it far from us in Trita Aptya (Roth), are (आरे) means far or at a distance (आरे दूरे—Sayana).

14. Tritaya Aptyaya para vaha, त्रिताय आप्त्याय परा वह, keep it far away for Trita Aptya.

The Asvalayana Grhya Sutras prescribe the verses 14-15 to be recited after an unpleasant dream.

Trita-Aptya are the three accessible regions (physical, mental and spiritual) the three regions of self-consciousness in which dreams submerge and from which dreams again rise.

15. Niska, gold or gold ornament; niska, is also a gold coin. (4 Survarnas= 1 Niska). See:

निष्कऽग्रीव—V.19.3

निष्कम् —II.33.10; VIII.47.15

निष्कान् —I.126.2.

निष्कग्रीव: —निष्कं चतुस्सौवर्ण-प्रमितमाभूषणं ग्रीवायां यस्य स: —Daya. on V.19.3; निष्कं सुवर्णाऽऽभूषणम्—Daya. on II.33.10; निष्कान् सौवर्णान् अश्वान् तुरङ्गान्—Daya. on I.26.2).

16. Tad-annaya, let the eating of honey etc. perceived in a dream produce happiness as in a waking state (तदन्नाय। यदेवजागरावस्थायां भोजयत्वेन प्रसिद्धं मधुपायसादि स्वप्नेऽपि भोक्त्र इत्यर्थ: —Sayana).

17 Kalam, कलाम्, parts (proper parts, heart etc. as fit to be cut to pieces)—The word occurs nowhere else in the Ṛgveda.

Safam, शफम्, hoof (or bones etc. as unfit). See Taittiriya Sam VI.I.10; here शफ = 1/8 of the value of a cow, and कला as very small portion in the sale and purchase of Soma or कला = 1/16 of the value of a cow. The word शफम् does not occur anywhere else in the Ṛgveda; though we have (शफेषु गवादि खुर विह्लेषु च्युतः पतित आसिक्तो यः सः शफच्युतः —Daya. on I.33.14); शफात् खुरात्, शंफणति प्रापयतीति शफोवेगस्तस्माद्वा—Daya. on I.117.6; शफानां शं फणाति तेषां (वेगानाम्)—Daya. on I.163.5).

शफऽआरुज: — X.44.9

Hymn-48

For verses 7 and 10, See Nir. 7 and VI.4 respectively.

The entire hymn is devoted to Soma; which is an ecstatic elixir of life, which man by his life's efforts oozes out in the Anandamaya and Vijnanamaya Kosas or the inner-most core of the body complex. This there becomes the sap of life. It creates love, thrill and appreciation for the Highest Self, His creativity, and His love.

The Soma, as the sap of life, is enjoyed by all gods (the sense-organs), including Indra, the individual self. It emanates from the Highest Self, (1-2); we become immortal when we drink Soma, (3); It becomes the bliss of our hearts (4); it delivers one from sickness (5); it kindles our life, and is spiritually exhilarating (6). King Soma prolongs our life (7). Soma blesses us for our welfare, (8) and is the guardian of our bodies (9). Soma has been placed within us (10). When the mighty Soma climbs into us, our life is prolonged and we get rid of all sickness (11). On its accounts, we the mortals become immortal (12). May be ever be dear to Soma (14). It nourishes us from all sides; may it guard us from behind and front (15).

2. Srausti-iva, like the swift one (श्रोष्टी । श्रुटीति क्षिप्रनाम । तत्सम्बन्धी श्रोष्टी । क्षिप्रगाम्यश्वः —Sayana); like the swift moving horse.

7. Ahani-iva vasarani—"may we with an active mind partake of thy pressed Soma, as if it were paternal property. O king Soma prolong our lives as the sun prolongs the summer days."

Days (वासराणि) are so called because they are of different courses (वासराणि वेसराणि विवासनानि गमनानीति वा), or they are bright, or they pass away.

9. Vasyah, best of all (वस्य: श्रेष्ठान्).

10. Rdudarena sakhya saceya, ऋदूदरेण सख्या सचेय, Rdu-udara means Soma; its inside (उदर) is soft, or it is soft inside the man. (ऋदूदर: सोम: । मृदूदर: । मृदूदरेष्विति वा—Nir. VI.4).

12,13. Pitarah, parents.

14. Nidrah, dreams (निद्र: स्वप्ना: —Sayana).

Visvaha, विश्वह, always; all the days (विश्वह सर्वेष्वप्यह:सु —Sayana).

Vayodhah, the giver of food (वयोधा: वयोऽधा: अन्नदाता—Sayana).

Hymns-49-59

The Valakhilya Hymns

The eleven hymns of the Eighth Mandala of the Rgveda from 49-59. are commonly known as the Valakhilyam, वालखिल्यम्. Their Rsis and Devatas are as follows:

Hymn	Rsi	Devata	No. of verses
49 (i)	Praskanva	Indra	10
50 (ii)	Pustiguh	Indra	10

51 (iii)	Srustiguh	Indra	10
52 (iv)	Ayuh	Indra	10
53 (v)	Medhyah	Indra	8
54 (vi)	Matarisvan	Indra (Visvedevah, 3, 4)	8
55 (vii)	Krsah	Praskanva —Danam	5
56 (viil)	Prsadhrah	Indra Agni-Surya, 5	5
57 (ix)	Medhyah	Asvinau	4
58 (x)	Medhyah	Visvedevah	3
59 (xi)	Suparnah	Indra-Varuna	7

All the rsis belong to the family of Kanva, and the total number of verses are 80. With the exception of the hymn 55 (which relates to the munificience of Praskanva), the devata of the first eight hymns is Indra; Indra-Varuna pair is of the hymn 59, Visvedevah of the hymn 58.

The Brhaddevata takes notice of only 8 hymns (VIII, 49-56); "Now the following (49-56) eight hymns by seers of ardent brilliance, are addressed to Indra; but the twenty-sixth Pragatha couplet here (VIII.54. 3-4) is addressed to Visvedevah. The last verse (मचेत्यग्निः, 56.5) is to Agni, but the ending of this verse दिवि सूर्यो मरोचत is devoted to the Sun." The Bṛhaddevata makes no reference to the hymns 57-59; and hence according to certain authorities, the Valakhilya Hymns are only eight in number. This is in agreement with the Kashmir Khila collection, which (Chapter III. 1-14) only contains the first eight (VIII.49-56), introduced with the words बालखिल्या: परेऽष्टौ (II.19).

The Taittiriya Aranyaka recognizes the Valakhilyas along with the Vaikhanasas and Apam as follows: ये नखा: । ते वैखानसा: । ये वाला:, ते वालखिल्या: । यो रस: सोऽपाम् । (from the intent determination of Prajapati were born Vaikhanasa seers from nakha, nails; Valakhilya seers from Vala (वाल) or hairs, and the marine creatures like tortoise (kurma) from the body sap or essence—प्रजापते: सत्यसंकल्पात् तत्सकल्पानुसारेण तत्तद्वस्तूत्पद्यते; तस्यशरीरस्य ये नखा: प्रासंस्ते वैखानस नामका मुनयोऽभवन् । ये च शरीरवाला: केशास्ते वालखिल्य नामका मुनयोऽभवन् । य: शिरस्य रस: सारांश: सोऽपां मध्ये काश्चित् कूर्मोऽभूत्—Taitt. Ar.I.23.

The Valakhilya hymns are known as supplementary hymns to the Book VIII of the Ṛgveda, as if, they were not the original part of the revealed Samhita. The word Khila (खिल) and Khilya (खिल्य) appear to have the same meaning. According to Roth, these terms denote the waste land between the cultivated fields, but he admits that this sense does not suit the passage of the Ṛgveda (प्रभिन्ने खिल्ये निदधाति देव्युम्—VI.28.2; खिल्ये खण्डेषु भवे—Daya.) in which it is said that God places the worshipper on an unbroken khilya (प्रभिन्ने खिल्ये), and he accordingly conjectures the reading प्रखिल्य भिन्ने, the land unbroken by barren strips. According to Oldenberg, Khilya means the land which lay between cultivated fields, but which need not be deemed to have been unfertile.

The second reference to Khilyas in the Ṛgveda is X 142 3. (उत खिल्या उर्वराणां भवन्ति). These are the only two places where the word Khilya occurs in the Ṛgveda (VI.28.2; and X.142.3). The words Vaikhanasa and Valkhilya do not occur in the Ṛg. text.

In the Sarvanukarama (Index) of the Ṛgveda, there is no reference to the hymn 58, (५८ सूक्तविषये सर्वानुक्रम सूक्तं नास्ति).

Khila-hymns in Book I—It is said that after the Hymn 73 of Book I (which begins with the Pratika (रयिर्न: पितृवित्तो), there were eleven Khilas, ten of which were addressed to Asvins and one to Indravaruna; for them, we have a reference in the Bṛhaddevata (III.119) as follows : दशाश्विनानीमानीति इन्द्रावरुणयोस्तुतिः । This eleventh Khila, devoted to Indra-Varuna appears as the eleventh Valakhilya Hymn VIII. 59 (xi), the seer of which according to the Sarvanukramani is Suparna. This collection of the eleven Khila hymns in the Book I is spoken of in the Ṛgvidhana I.20.3 as the eleven purifying Suparna Hymns. (सौपर्णानि पवित्राणि सूक्तान्येकादश). Of the ten Asvin Hymns, we know only the Pratikas of two (viz. माश्वद्विवाम—of the first, and one of the others प्रवारायन्तु मधुनो घृतस्य).

Valakhilya and the Aitareya and Kausitaki Brahmanas—The Valakhilya hymns have been used at several places in the Aitareya Brahmana, usually along with the Nabhanedistha (नाभानेदिष्ट), Vṛsakapi (वृषाकपि) and Evayamarut (एवयामरुत्): V.15. (xxii.10); VI.30 (xxx.4); VI.36 (xxx.10). The Kausitaki Brahmana of the Ṛgveda school also refers to the Valakhilyas (xxx 4; xxx 8): I shall quote the latter one : "Having recited the strophe and anti-strophe, he recites the Valakhilyas; the strophe and antistrophe are the body, the Valakhilyas the breaths; these breaths are not separated (from the body). They say "why are they (called) Valakhilyas?" That which is not in contact in two fields, they call Khila; these breaths are a hair (बाल) in breath and are not separated; therefore are they Valakhilyas.

Padapatha (पदपाठ)—Just as the Pada Pathas are available for other Ṛg .Hymns, similarly they are also available for the Valakhilyas. This also shows that reverence to the Valakhilyas was shown as much as to the other Ṛg. Hymns. Dayananda in his Caturved Visaya Suci चतुर्वेद विषयसूची, refers to the hymns (astaka VI, adhyaya 4, varga 14-31, with पदार्थविद्या), as the usual subject matter.

Arguments against these Hymns—

Sayana in is his commentary has not commented on the Valakhilya Hymns. The Sayana Commentary, edited by the Vaidika Samsodhana

Mandala, Tilak Maharastra University Poona (1941) gives a very recent Commentary of the Valakhilya verses, procured from the Government Sanskrit Pathshala Library, written by an unknown scholar. It might have been written by a Pandit of Punya-pattana, Poona (Pune). Venkata Madhava has commented on the Mandala VIII of the Ṛgveda, but he does not comment on these Hymns. The Nirukta of Yaska gives no reference to the hymns of the Valakhilya. Wilson's and Griffith' translations include these hymns only in the form of Appendix. Of course Cowell (in Wilson's Translations) and Griffith both of them have given their excellent translations on their usual lines.

The following words occur only in the Valakhilya Hymns and nowhere else in the Ṛgveda : नीपातिथिम्, पुष्टिगो, श्रुष्टिगो, सांवरणी, पार्षद्वाण:, वस्यवेवृक, पूतक्रतु, पूतक्रता, ऋजूनस्, दशोण्य, दशशिप्र, शीष्ट ।

Hymn-49

The Ṛsi is Praskanva; प्रस्कण्व; the deity Indra and the metre is Pragatha (the odd line Bṛhati and the even sato-bṛhati).

2. Satanika-iva, शतानीकाऽइव, like a weapon with a hundred edges (Cowell); with a hundred hosts (Griffith); with a large number of armies of enemy (शतानीकेव अपरिमितान्येव रिपु सैन्यानि); the commander of hundreds of battalions; Lord of hundreds of powers.

Dhṛsnuya, धृष्णुया, with boldness.

Dasuse, दाशुषे, for the charitable person; for the offerer.

Gireh rasah, गिरे: रसा:, like the water brooks from a mountain as water-streams from clouds (गिरि=मेघनाम=पर्वत, Nigh. 1.10).

Vṛtrani, वृत्राणि, sins,evils, nescience.

3. Girvanah, गिर्वणः, O, the one praised by the speech of devotee (गिर्वणः गोभिर्वननीयेन्द्र; Lover of the song (Griffith); Lover of hymns (Wilson).

Madah, exhilarating (मदाः हर्षकराः).

Apo na okyam sarah, as waters flow to a lake, the reservoir.

Indavah, exhilarating; pleasing; the soft-hearted one (Soma juice);

4. Anehasam, always protecting, incomparable, matchless; free from sins.

Pratarnam, capable of taking across through difficulties; helpful (प्रतरणं प्रवर्धनम्); strengthening;

Vivaksnan, pleasing; swelling, praise worthy, energy giving, (विवक्षणं प्रतिशयेन स्तुत्यम्).

Ksudra-Iva, क्षुद्रा इव, like the small honey-bee; like the meek and humble (क्षुद्रेव दीनेभ्य इव).

Dhṛsat = dṛsad (दृषद् = धृषद् = millstone).

5. Syavih, श्यावी:, dark or brown cows (श्यावी: कपिला गा:); dark mares (Griffith).

Syavih pathah, the red and dark (of vitality and inertia) paths of life (rajasa and tamasa).

Saptasya, साप्तस्य, the controller of the seven vital breaths or seven voices; team of seven; seven-yoked team.

Hymn-56 (viii)

1. Dasyave vṛkah, the suppressor or subjugater of infidels or Dasyus, i.e. Indra (हे वृक शत्रुविकर्तनेन्द्र !) vṛka is also moon because her light is disclosed, or because her light is not sufficient or because her light is strong-compared with stars. (वृकश्चन्द्रमा भवति । विवृत ज्योतिष्को वा । विकृत ज्योतिष्को वा । विक्रान्त ज्योतिष्को वा —Nir. V.20).

The sun is also called vṛka, because he dispels darkness (आदित्योऽपि वृक उच्यते । यथा वृङ्क्ते—Nir. V.21 on I.117.6).

A dog is also called vṛka on account of biting (श्वापि वृक उच्यते । विकर्तनात्—V.21. on VIII.66.8).

2. Amamhat,, अमंहत्, gave (or gives); awarded or awards (अमंहत् अदुः).

Dasa sahasra dasyave vṛkah, दशसहस्रा दस्यवे वृकाः, ten thousand (i.e. thousands of) riches or immense wealth, or verses; or large number of Dasyus (slaves) (अयुत संख्याकान् दस्यून् ; अत्र दस्यु पक्षे विकर्तनात् वृकः । आदित्यपक्षे विद्वत् पक्षे ईश्वरपक्षे च विकृतज्योतिषको विक्रान्तज्योतिष्को । यदा वृङ्क्ते इतिवक्र । इति विवेकः).

Pautakratah, पौतक्रतः, an epithet of Indra because his actions are also pure, or virtuous (हे पौतक्रतः पवित्रकर्मवन्निन्द्र).

Also Pautakratah is son of Putakrata, (पूतक्रता the mother). Perhaps she is so known as being the wife of Putakratu, (पूतक्रतु, the father).

5. Havyavat agnih, the fire produced by attrition which is the carrier of oblations (हव्यवाट् हविषां वोढा).

Sumat rathah, with his car, or with the car that moves by itself

(सुमत् रथ: स्वयमेव रंहणस्वभाव: ; सुमत् स्वयमित्यर्थ: —Nir. VI.22; i.e. sumat means 'of one's own accord').

Hymn-57 (ix)

1. Yajatra, यजत्रा, the respectable men of enlightenment; an epithet for Asivins (यजत्रा यजनीयौ देवौ द्योतमानावश्विनौ).

Nasatya, नासत्या—नासत्यौ, not untruth i.e. both of them truthful (सत्यभूतौ), an epithet for Asvins.

Tṛtiya savana, the third libation; the period of life after the age of 48 (अथ यान्यष्टा चत्वारिंशद् वर्षाणि तत् तृतीयं सवनम्—Chandogya Up. III.16.

2. Devah trayah-ekadasasah, देवास्त्रय: एकादशास:, thirty three gods: (अष्टौ वसव: एकादश रुद्रा द्वादशादित्या: प्रजापतिश्च वषट्कारश्च, 8 vasus; 11 rudras, 12 adityas, prajapati and vasatkara).

The thirty-three gods may also be 11 of the terrestrial region, 11 of the midspace and 11 of the celestial.

3. Divah-rajasah pṛthivyah, of the celestial, midspace and terrestrial regions.

Vṛsabhah, the sun, the cloud-born lightning, and the terrestrial fire produced by attrition.

Hymn-58 (x)

1. Anucanah brahmanah, an intellectual person of deep learning;

a learned Brahmana.

2 The verse indicates that one and the same Agni or energy is present in the fire produced by attrition for consuming oblations; the same is in the sun, the one and the same shines everywhere, in all the heavenly bodies (अग्निं यथैको भुवनं प्रविष्टो रूपं रूपं प्रतिरूपो बभूव —Katha; तत्सृष्ट्वा तदेवानुप्राविशत् —Taitt. Up, II.6; सूर्य आत्मा जगतस्तस्थुषश्च—I.115.1); just as Agni, Surya and all these Nature's bounties are one but appear differently in different bodies, similarly the Supreme Self is also one, but His glory shines every where.

3. Citramagha yasya yoge addijanje—She of wondrous wealth was born to harness (चित्रं चायनीयं मघं गवाश्वादि लक्षणं धनं यस्याः सा चित्रमघा) Jyotismantam, bright and radiant (ज्योतिष्मन्तं ज्योतींषि सूर्यादीनि प्रकाश्यत्वेन सन्ति यस्य तम् । "तस्य भासा सर्वमिदं विभाति" —Up.

Ketumantam, diffusing splendour (ketu is banner; ketu is wisdom; केतुः-केतः-प्रज्ञा, Nigh. III.9).

Tricakram, त्रिचक्रम्, rolling three-wheeled.

Sukham susadam, offering an easy-seat or comfortable seat (सुषदम् । शोभने आत्मस्वरूपे सीदति तिष्ठतीति सुषत् सुप्रतिष्ठः तम्).

Bhurivaram, full of many gifts (Cowell); treasureladen (Griffith); dear to so many creatures (भूरिवारं भूरिभिर्बहुभिः प्राणिभिः वरो वरणीयस्तम्).

Hymn-59 (xi)

The Ṛsi of this hymn is Suparnah Kanva; and the hymn is devoted to Indra-Varuna, and the metres are tristup and jagati.

Indra is the energy-factor and varuna is the fluid factor, curative and exhilarating.

1. Bhagadheyani, shares (भागधेयानि भवदंश भूतानि) (in the rituals the shares of offerings line caru, चरु and purodasa, पुरोडाश etc.).

Sutesu, in the extracts; in the blessings obtained from spiritual efforts. (also सुतेषु अभिषुतेषु सोमेषु).

Siksathah, शिक्षथ:, assist (शिक्षथ: अभिमतं प्रयच्छथ: ; शिक्षतिर्दान कर्मा— Nigh. III 20).

2. Osadhih-apah, ओषधी:-आप:, plants and waters (व्रीह्याद्या ओषधय:, आप: उदकानि).

Nih sidhvari, नि:ऽसिध्वरी, one with efficacious vigour (नि:षिध्वरी नितरां मंगलस्वभावा).

Rajasah, pare, beyond midspace (रजस: अन्तरिक्षलोकस्य सम्बन्धिन: पारे पारतीरे).

Adhvanah, of paths (अध्वनो मार्गस्य).

Na kih at eva ohate, none becomes strong enough to gain success, (also नकि: ओहते न कोऽपि तर्कगोचरो भवति).

Adevah satruh, the infidel, god-opposing, enemy, (अदेवा देवप्रतियोगी असुरादि: शत्रु: शातयिता).

3. Sapta-vanih, divine speech expressed in seven metres, from the Gayatri to jagati (सप्तवाणी: सप्तसंख्याका: सर्पण स्वभावा वा वाणी: । वाण्य: सप्तहोत्रकाणां स्तुतिरूपा वाच:) seven holy voices (see IX.103.3; अभिवाणी ऋषीणां सप्तनूषत).

Krsasya, कृशस्य, of Krsa, is who has gone feeble and weak on account of severe self-imposed austerities (a relation of the Yajamana, the sacrificer of this name).

Krsa is mentioned with samvarta as a pious sacrificer to Indra in the Valkhilya Hymn (VIII.54.2), and as a speaker of truth (VIII.59.3) and whilst a third is traditionally ascribed to his authorship. He seems also to be mentioned with Sayu, शयु, as a protege of the Asvins in X.40.8; युवं ह कृशं युवमश्विना शयुम्, but here the word may merely denote the "feeble man". (Macdonell and Keith)

कृशम्—VI.28.6, VIII.75.8; X.40.8

कृशस्य—II.12.6; VIII.59.3; X.39.3

कृशाय—X.117.3

कृशे—VIII.54.2.

4. Sapta svasarah, seven sisters; sister-streams of the Soma (Cowell); (सप्त सप्तसंख्याका: स्वसार: स्वयं सारिण्यो वाण्य: सन्ति), the seven divine speeches through seven metres).

5. Tribhih-Saptebhih, त्रिभि: सप्तभि:, through the three times seven, 3×7=21 (see tri-saptah at numerous places). The seven horses of the sun in three groups (सप्तयोऽश्वा: तेषां समूह: । सप्तयूथैस्तै: त्रिसंख्याकैरश्वसमूहै:). Also perhaps the Maruts, thrice-seven, being used indefinitely for a larger number consisting of troops of seven (I.133.6).

Twenty-one out of the evolutionary elements in the school of the Samkhyá.

Hym-60

2. Ghrtakesam, One with brandishing flames (घृतकेशं ज्वालाकेशम्—Venkata; butter-haired—Wilson cf. घृतपृष्ठम्, butter-backed; (प्रदीप्तकेशस्थानीय-ज्वालम्—Sayana).

Napatam, non-protector (नपातं न पातयितारम्—Sayana).

6. Surayah, wise persons, priests, the praisers (सूरयः स्तोतारः—Venkata; स्तोतारो मेधाविनोऽस्माकं पुत्रादयः ; hymners or sons—Sayana).

9. Ekaya, dvitiyaya, tisrbhih and Catasrbhih, by one, by second, by three, by four, i.e. Rc, Yajus, Saman and Nigada (एकयागिरा ऋचा:—Venkata; Sayana ; ऋगाद्यास्तिस: गद्यपद्यकाव्यलक्षणा चतुर्था गी:—Uvat; एकया गिरा ऋग्-लक्षणया उत अपि च द्वितीयया यजुर्लक्षणया स्तुत: सन्, तिसृभिर्गीर्भि: ऋग्यजुसाम लक्षणाभि:, चतसृभि: ऋग्यजु: सामनिगदलक्षणाभि: स्तुतो न: पाहि—Mahidhara on Yv. XXVII.43). May also be परा, मध्यमा, पश्यन्ती and वैखरी spesch.

10. Arvanah, one who does not liberally give; impious; a troublesome person (अराव्ण: अदातु:—Venkata).

11. Vayahvrdham, food-augmenting (वय: वृधम् अन्नस्य वर्धयितारम्—Venkata; अन्नस्य वर्धकम्—Sayana; आ वयति= अत्ति कर्म; Nigh. II.8; वय:=अन्नम्; food; Nir. VI.4—See VII.69.4—परि ध्रंससोमना वां वयो गात्).

Upamate; O wealth-giver (उपमाते ! धनं य: समीपे करोति स तथोक्त: —Venkata; उपास्यन्तसमीपे माति नो धनमित्युपमाति: ; addressed to Agni—Sayana).

13. Sacivaso, O thou who by wisdom establishes our rites

(Wilson) (अन्नीवसो, हे प्रज्ञया वासीयत: —Venkata; also क्वंबल ! Venkata and Sayana).

Vasuvidah, wealth obtaining (वसुविद: धनस्य सम्भकानि—Venkata).

Yahuh, child or son (यहु: पुत्र: —Venkata; सहसो यहु: सहस: पुत्र: —Sayana; यहु: सहस: —the son of strength—Wilson).

Asya hanavah. flames of the fire (अस्य अग्ने: हनवो न हनव इव हनुस्थानीया ज्वाला: —Sayana).

16. Pra agne tistha janan ati—O fire-divine, rest with Nature's bounties (प्राग्ने हे अग्ने जनान् अस्मान् अति अतीत्य प्रतिष्ठ प्रगच्छ हविरादाय देवान् प्रति—Sayana; go forth having overcome our enemies—Wilson).

Tapasa, by heat (तपसा तापकेन—Sayana).

Socisa, by glow (शोचिषा तेजसा—Sayana).

17. Vṛkta-barhisah, have cut the sacred grass; have made all preparations (वृक्त बर्हिष: विच्छिन्न बर्हिष: —Venkata).

20. Parah gavyuti, beyond a gavyuti (गव्यूति) a Krosas, about 4 miles (पर:ऽगव्यूति गव्यूते: क्रोशात् परस्तात् —Venkata; क्रोशद्वयात् देशात् परस्तात्—Sayana; गव्यूति मार्गम् —Daya. on V 66 3; क्रोशद्वयम् on III.62.16: क्रोशयुग्मम् on Yv.XXI.9).

Hymn–61

For verse 11, see Nir. VI.25.

1. Dhiya, धिया, thought.

Satracya, inclined to us (सत्राच्या अञ्चन्त्या—Venkata; अस्माकं सहाञ्चन्त्या —Sayana)

Savisthah, mightiest (शविष्ठ: अतिशयेन बलवान् —Sayana).

4. Aprami-Satya, Maghavan!, O bounteous of unbroken truth; and epithet of Indra, the resplendent Lord. (अप्रामिऽसत्य! अविनश्यत्सत्य! मघवन्! —Venkata; हे अहिंसित सत्य! हे इन्द्र! —Sayana).

5. Sacipate, O Lord of rites (शचीपते वेदवाच: पालक! —Daya. on 1.106.6; प्रजास्वामिन् on VI.45.9), (शचि=वाणी, speech; सत्कर्म=righteous actions; प्रज्ञा=wisdom; प्रजा=people).

Bhagam na, like happiness; bliss-giving (भगं न भाग्यमिव —Sayana; भाग्याधिपतिम् —Venkata).

9. Pracamanyo, O pride prsonified!, whose wrath presses ever forwards (प्राचामन्यो प्राचीन क्रोध अप्रतिहतक्रोध —Sayana).

Ahamsan, who meets the foe proclaiming "It is I". (अहमित्युक्तवा य: शत्रून् भजते स: अहंसन: —Venkata; हे अहंसन्! संग्रामेऽहमित्यात्मनो महत्त्वं प्रकाशवन्, यं शत्रुं संभजते; —used for Indra—Sayana).

11. Na papaso manamahe narayaso na jalhavah, we do not think ourselves to be sinful, or destitute, or devoid of lustre. We are celibate, devoted to study, austerities, generosity and activity, said the seer (न पापा मन्यामहे । नाधना: । न ज्वलनेन हीना: । अस्त्यस्मासु ब्रह्मचर्यमध्ययनं तपो दान कर्मेत्यृषिरवोचत् —Nir. VI.25).

Na papso manamahe, we are not evil; we do not appear evil.

12. Rina' Katim, to whom we are all indebted (ऋणकातिं ऋणभूत स्तुतिं ऋणवत् फलप्रदानेन स्तोतारम्, him to whom praise is due as a debt—Venkata; ऋणकातिं ऋणसम्भूत स्तुतिम्। यस्मै स्तुतिर्ऋणवदवश्यं क्रियते तं सदृशम्। अथवा ऋणवदवश्य फलप्रदस्तुतिम् —Sayana)

According to Wilson, Sayana's explanation of this verse is obscure; he seems to take vajinam twice over with a difference in meaning in each clause (वाजिनं बलवन्तमश्वं), the mighty horse; as well as वाजिनं हविष्मन्तं, the one with offerings. Wilson supposes that veda, i.e. knows is to be repeated in the second clause; he, the best of the charioteers, knows (among steeds) the strong racer, and (among men), he, the bounteous, (knows) the offerer whom he is to reach.

15. Spat-Uta, omniscient (स्पट् उत वेत्ता—Venkata; स्पशतिर्ज्ञानकर्मा; स्पट् सर्वस्यज्ञाता --Sayana. स्पट् स्पष्टा (राजा)—Daya. on V.59.I; स्पश बाधन स्पर्शनयो:); also the seer of all (सर्वद्रष्टा).

17. Adyadya, Svah-Svah, अद्याद्या श्व: श्व: , every today and every tomorrow.

Hymn-62

'For verse 11, see Nir. I.4.

1. Mahinam vayah, ample food (माहिनं वय: महत् अन्नम्—Venkata; महत् अन्नं सोमलक्षणम्—Sayana); also mighty strength.

5. Avatan' iva, like water-wells (अवतान् इव कूपान् इव—Venkata; just as a thirsty man looks for water deep into the well).

Sominah, devotee in intense love; a house-holder or sacrificer सोमिन: सोमानुष्णम्—Venkata, यजमानस्य —Sayana; सोमा: प्रशस्ता: पदार्था: सन्ति यस्य तस्य गृहस्थ जनस्य —Daya. on I.151.2).

8. Upamam, near at hand (उपमं अन्तिकम्—Venkata)

Devatataye, for the sacrificer or devotee or worshipper (देवतातये यजमानाय —Venkata; यजमानाय यज्ञार्थं वा—Sayana); highly coveted in sacred performance).

9. Samana' iva vapusyatah, as a woman of one mind enjoys the body of her lover (or as a woman, who shows no partiality wins her lovers to her; or as a woman enjoys or wins the body of her lovers of one mind) (समनऽइव समनेव समानमनस्का योषिदिव सा यथा वपुष्यतः वपुरिच्छतः पुरुषान् कृणवत् करोति स्ववशान्—Sayana).

10. Ujjatam, since manifestation, when it was born जातं प्रादुर्भूतम् —Venkata).

Savah, strength (शवः बलम्—Sayana).

Kratum, knowledge (क्रतुं प्रज्ञां स्वानुकूलाम्—Sayana; प्रज्ञानाम् —Venkata).

11. Aham ca tvam ca vṛtrahan, अहं च त्वं च वृत्रहन्!,—Yaska in his Nirukta (1.4) quotes this phrase to show that the word ca is used in the sense of aggregation and is joined together with both as "I and you, O slayer of Vṛtra".

12. Asunvatah, infidel who does not offer (असुन्वतः अयष्टुः ; one who does not press out the Soma for sacrifice).

Sunvatah, the devotee who offers Soma in the sacrifice. (सुन्वतं अभिषवं कुर्वतः —Sayana).

Bhuri jyotinsi, भूरि ज्योतींषि, plenty of blessings.

Hymn-63

For verse 7, see Nir. III.8.

1. Manuspita, father of the family (पिता=sustainer; father; head of the family) (पिता सर्वेषां पालक:—Sayana; the protector of all).

Dvara, by whose door (द्वारा द्वारेण—Venkata).

7. Ksayah, abode; residence (क्षय: निवास:—Sayana).

Panca janyaya, by the Pancajana; by people of five categories; (i) intellectuals, (ii) people of defence, (iii) dealers in trade, agriculture and industry, (iv) labour class, and (v) the nonscheduled, the nisada,—(निषादपञ्चमाश्चत्वारो वर्णा: पाञ्चजन्या: ; पाञ्चजन्य: पञ्चसु सकलविशेषु अध्यापकोपदेशक, राजसभा-सेना-सर्वजनाधीशेषु जनेषु भव: — Daya. पञ्चजना इति मनुष्य नाम—Nigh. II.3; Nir. III.8).

The Pancajana word occurs in X.53.4 also. Yaska in his Nirukta (III.8) comments on this thus : Ye five-tribes, enjoy my sacrifice (पञ्चजना ममोहोत्रं जुषध्वम्). According to same, (the five tribes) are the gandharvas, the manes, gods, demons and evil spirits: गन्धर्वा: पितरो देवा असुरा रक्षांसि; again, they are the four categories with nisada as the fifth (चत्वारोवर्णा निषाद: पञ्चम इत्यौपमन्यव:), so says Aupamanyava (nisada is hunter, because he lives by killing animals, sin is embodied in him (ni+√sad)—निषाद: कस्मात् । निषदने: भवति । निषण्णस्मि न्पापकमिति नैरुक्ता: (Nir. III.8). In its continuity, the Nirukta comments on यत्पाञ्चजन्यया विशा—when with the tribes of five peoples i.e. with the tribe consisting of five peoples. Five (पञ्च) is a united number (i.e it remains uniflicted in the masculine, feminite and neuter genders. (पञ्च पृक्ता संख्या स्त्रीपुंनपुंसकेष्वविशिष्टा).

Hymn-64

1. Brahmadvisah, the despiser of God and the Veda; an infidel

(ब्रह्मद्विषः ब्राह्मणः द्वेष्टॄन् राक्षसान्—Venkata; despiser of Brahmana, the holy educated class).

3. Satanam, of the expressed one; the affused Soma; of the effused soma

Asutanam, of the non-effused.

4. Girim, cloud (गिरिं मेघम्—Venkata, Sayana).

Parvavantam, gharled or knotted (पर्वतं पर्ववन्तम्—Venkata).

11. Saryanavati, intellect; the innermost cavity of consciousness, (a lake of this name according to Śayana and others : शर्यणावति—"कुरुक्षेत्रस्य जघनार्धे भवे सरस्वन्ते" कुरुक्षेत्रस्य जघनार्धभवे शरवृणोपेते सरसि, i.e. in the lower parts of Kuruksetra.

For reference, see :

शर्यणाऽवतः—X.35.2

शर्यणाऽवति—I.84.14; VIII.6.39; 7.29; 64.11; IX.65.22; 113.1.

According to Dayananda, the under-tract of ground with harmful creatures is Saryanavati (हिंसनीय पदार्थयुक्त भूमितल—on IX.113.1 in the Sanskara-vidhi); and also शर्यणोऽन्तरिक्षदेशस्तस्याऽदूर भवे—Daya. on I.84.14).

Susoma, सुषोमा, fine beautiful mortal body (to some, it is a river of this name. For references, see :

सुऽसोमया—X.75.5 (नदीसूक्त)

सुषोमायाम्—VIII.64.11

सुषोमे—VIII.7.29.

No river has been identified of this name. According to some speculations, it is the modern Suwan, mentioned by Megasthenes Soavon. To Roth, it is a Soma-vessel; when the word is used as masculine (VIII.7.29), it means people and it has been once used as feminine (VIII 64.11). The Nirukta identifies the word with Sindhu (सुषोमा सिन्धु :— Nir. IX.26), which according to Macdonell and Keith is absurd.

Arjikiye, the sense-organs; a sacred land; also regarded as a river of this name. For references, see

आर्जीकात्—IX.113.2

आर्जीकीये—X.75.5

आर्जीकीये (with different accents)—VIII.64.11

आर्जीके—VIII.7.29

आर्जीकेषु—IX.65.23.

The two masculine forms (आर्जीक and आर्जीकीय) may denote people or land; the feminine (आर्जीकीया) designates the river of the land Macdonald and Keith). Hillebrandt locates the country in or near Kashmir, as Arrian mentions Arsaces, brother of Abhisares, who presumably took this name from his people, and Abhisara (अभिसार) bordered on Kashmir. According to Pischel, Arjika (आर्जीक) is an unidentified country. According to Roth or zimmer, the word is not a proper name. Hillebrandt recognizes arjikiya as the name of the Upper Indus; or it may even be Vitasta or Jhelum. Brunnhofer identifies it with Arghesan, a tributary of the Arghanab.

Hymn–65

2. Andhasah, usually pertaining to food (Nigh. ग्रन्धः=ग्रन्ननाम—II.7); according to Sayana here it means water as the cause of food (ग्रन्धोऽन्नम्, तेन तत्कारणमुदकं लक्ष्यते—Sayana).

Samudre, in the midspace (समुद्रे समुन्दनापादान भूतेऽन्तरिक्षे माद्यसि—Sayana).

Svah-nare, in this world (स्वः नरे=स्वर्णरे=सर्वनरे or ग्रस्मिन् लोके—Venkata).

7. Sasvatam, to all the worshippers (शश्वतां बहूनां यजमानानां—Sayana).

Sadharanah, साधारणः , common; ordinary.

11. Brhatprthu, in a large quantity (बृहत्पृथु महत् विस्तृत—Sayana).

Pṛsatinam, cows of dappled colour (पृषतीनां गवः —Sayana).

Sahasre......bṛhat pṛthu, upon a thousand cows I obtain gold (Wilson); the cows came as it were laden with gold from Indra (एन्द्रेणानीत—Sayana).

Napatah, nominative plural, children (Wilson); unprotected (नपातः ग्ररक्षितस्य—Sayana).

Hymn-66

For verses 8 and 10, see Nir. V.21 and VI.26 respectively.

2. Made Susipram, (मदे सुशिप्रम्) in the Ṛk. ; मदेषु शिप्र (in the Sama Veda, II.33. 688).

Adrtya, आदृत्य, from √dṛ to tear. Sayana does not translate this word with respect.

3. According to Wilson, an obscure stanze.

Mṛksah, well-washed; purified (मृक्षः शोधकः परिचरणीयो वा—Sayana).

Asvyah, अश्व्यः, all-pervading; see previous notes.

Kijah, कीजः, wonderful (कीजः । कीज इत्यद्भुतमाह; किमस्य कथं जात इति— —Sayana).

Gavyasya, stock of divine speech; the Veda; herd of kine (गव्यस्य गोसमूहस्य—Sayana).

4. Puru Sambhṛtam, accumulated by many, sustained by many sense organs.

Nikhatam puru- sambhṛtam vasu udvapati, digs out the treasure accumulated at one place, in that way, (निखातं चित् भूमौ खात्वा स्थापितमपि सम्भृतं संगृहीत यागादानादिकं कृत्वेदृशं पुरुबहु वसु धनम् उदिद्वपति उद्वपत्येव—Sayana).

Sayana separates the two words puru and sambhṛtam, "the buried wealth, plenteous and accumulated". He takes the wealth as accumulated stores from former sacrifices.

7. Samana, समना, for battle (समनम्=संग्रामनाम, Nigh. II.17); with uuited mind (समना संग्रामार्थम्—Sayana).

8. Vṛkas cid asya varanah ura'mathih, the destroyer of travelling enemies; the wolf, the killer of sheep; is indeed his warder. A dog is called vṛka on account of biting (श्वापि वृक उच्यते। विकर्त्तनात्—Nir. V.21. There are several meanings of Vṛka; wolf, dog, moon; the Sun, the thief—See Nir. V.21. (वृकश्चित्·स्तेनोऽपि वारण: वारयिता सर्वस्य सन्नपि उरामथि: शत्रूणां मार्गे गच्छतां मथिता सन्नपि—Sayana).

Vrkah cid uramathih, (i) one that digs the earth like a plough, (ii) the destroyer of darkness at the night time like a moon; (iii) the destroyer of nescience like a wolf devouring a sheep

10. Beka' natan, बेकऽनाटान्, usurer; Baka-natah are, indeed, the usurers, so called because they make their (principal sum) double, or because they advance (on security) of double (value) or because they demand double (price). In the present verse, we have : Indra overcomes all the usurers who behold the daylight and the dishonest merchants. (बेक नाटा: खलु कुसीदिनो भवन्ति। द्विगुणकारिणो वा। द्विगुणदायिनो वा। द्विगुणं कामयन्त इति वा—Nir. VI.26).

In the word "Bekanatah, बेकनाटा: ", the prefix बे, be, stands for two in the corrupted form (बे इत्पयभ्रंशो द्विशब्दार्थे। एकं कार्षापणमृणिकाय प्रयच्छन् द्वौ मह्यं दातव्य······नयेन दर्शयन्ति, ततो द्विशब्देनैक शब्देन च नाटयन्तीति बेकमाटा: —Sayana).

For Bekanatah, also see Panini— न ते नासिकायां संज्ञायां टीटञ् नाटज्—भ्रटच: —V.2 31.

The other derivations are : बेकनाटा बेकनासिका: भेकमासिका: विकटनासिका वा। अथवा। बिचिर पृथग्भावे। वेक: पृथग्भाव:। वेकनाटा: छिन्ननास:। बिनासिका। विवेकशील नासिका: कुशला वा।

8. Adhardrsah, beholders of sunlight (अहर्दृशः सूर्यदृशः । य इमान्यहानि पश्यन्ति न पराणीति वा । अभि भवति कर्मणा—Nir. VI.26).

13. Astapadim, अष्टापदीम्, eight points of the sky (eight cardinal directrons = north, south, east, west, and four half-quarters or corner points : ईशान (N—E); आग्नेय (S—E); नैऋत्य (S—w); and वायव्य

(N—W); (दिग्भि: अवान्तरदिग्भि: —Venkata).

Navasraktim, rising to the ninth (i.e. the sun in the zenith) (चार्यदिग्भि: अवान्तरदिग्भि: च अष्टापदीम् ताभि: आदित्येन च नवस्रक्तिम् —Venkata).

Hymn-77

For verses 4, 6, 10 and 11, see Nir. V.11; VI.34; V.4 and VI.33 respectively.

1. Sṛnvire. शृण्विरे, renowned (विश्रुता —Venkata), heard even today.

2. Aurna'vabham, descendent of Urnavabhi (ऊर्णवाभि); literally it means abounding in wool; also a conceit. In the tradition, (i) this is the name of a pupil of kaundinya, कौण्डिन्य. (Bṛhada. Up. IV.5.26. Madhyandina) (ii) a teacher of this name in the Nirukta VII.15; XII.19. He is normally said to belong to the school of Aitihasikas, the traditionalists. He was probably an eclectic.

Ahisu'vam, wicked (in administration). In tradition, the name of an Asura (Aurnavabham and Ahisuvam, both are regarded as Asuras or demons —Sayana, Venkata)

और्णवाभम्—VIII. 32.26; 77.2 (ऊर्णवाभि word does not occur in the Ṛgveda).

अहीशुव: —X.144.3

अहीशुवम्—VIII.32.2; 26; 77.2.

Both the terms, Aurnavabham and Ahisuvam occur together in the Ṛgveda; VIII. 32.26; 77.2; Ahisuvam singly occurs in VIII. 32.2.

4 Saransi trimsatam, सरांसित्रिंशतम्, thirty lakes of soma.

At one single draught, Indra (the sun) drank thirty lakes full of Soma.

At one draught alone; Indra drank them together, i.e.a long with one another (साकं सहेत्यर्थः).

Lakes full of Soma, i.e. dear to his heart or full to the brim, or consecrated to Indra (इन्द्रः सोमस्य काणुका। कान्तकानीति वा। क्रान्तकानीति वा। कृतकानीति वा); or else Indra is a lover of Soma, or he drinks till he desires, till his appetite is completetely satisfied (इन्द्र : सोमस्य कान्त इति वा । कणेघात इति वा । कणेहतः । कान्तिहतः).

The ritualists explain like this : There are thirty libation-vessels consecrated to one deity at the meridional pressing of the Soma-juice. These (libation-vessels), they drink at a single draught. They are here called lakes. "There are thirty days and nights in the second and thirty in the first half of a month," say the etymolisgists. Then the rays drink those same lunar waters which fall on certain days in the second fortnight.

(तत्रैनद् याज्ञिका वेदयन्ते ! त्रिंशदुक्थपात्राणि माध्यन्दिने सवन एकदेवतानि । तान्येतस्मिन् काल एकेन प्रतिधानेन पिबन्ति । तान्यत्र सरांस्युच्यन्ते । त्रिंशदपरपक्षस्याहोरात्राः । त्रिंशत्पूर्वपक्षस्येति नैरुक्ताः । तद्या एताश्चान्द्रमस्य आगामिन्य आपो भवन्ति रश्मयस्ता अपरपक्षे पिबन्ति —Nir V.11).

5. Gandhavram, the cloud (गन्धर्वो मेघः —Venkata; वामुदकं धारयतीति मेघः—Sayana) Gandharva also means wind or air (यो गां पृथिवीं धरति स वायुः ; air the sustains that earth, Daya. on 1.163.2; also the sun, यो गां पृथिवीं वाणीं व धरति धारयति वा स सूर्यलोकः — Daya. on Yv. II.3; a learned one, यो गां वेदवाचं धरति सः विद्वान् पण्डितो जनः — Daya. on Yv. XXXII.9; also moon, यो गाः सूर्यकिरणान् धरति स चन्द्रमाः Yv.XVIII.40).

Gandharvas are also persons devoted to aesthetics and fine arts : गानविद्याकुशलाः —Daya. on Yv.XII.98. Beauty personified (रूपमिति गन्धर्वाः (उपासते) —SBr. X.5.2.20; lovers of maidens, योषित्कामा वै गन्धर्वाः —SBr. III.2.4.3; स्त्रीकामा वै गन्धर्वाः —Ait. Br. I.27; तत्गन्धर्वाः) उ ह स्त्रीकामाः —Kausitaki Br. II.9; wind, वातो गन्धर्वः SBr. IX.4.1.10; vital breaths, Jaim Up. III.36.3; mind, मनो गन्धर्वः —SBr. IX.4.1.11; fire, अग्निर्गन्धर्वः —SBr. IX.4.1.7; moon, चन्द्रमा गन्धर्वः —SBr. IX.4.1.9. the sun, सूर्यो गन्धर्वः —SBr. IX.4.1.8; they are twenty-seven, गन्धर्वाः सप्तविंशतिः —SBr. V.1.4.8.

Abudhnesu rajah-su, in the vacant or nonhabitable regions of space (अबुध्नेषु पदनिधानयोग्यस्थानरहितेषु रजःसु लोकेषु —Sayana).

6. "From the mountains, Indra transfixed the mellow cloud and held his well-aimed arrow." From the mountains Indra held the well-aimed arrow and transfixed the well-ripe cloud, the giver of rain-water. (ओदनं उदकदानं मेघम् । वृन्दे बुन्देन व्याख्यातम् । वृन्दारकश्च —Nir. VI.34)

Bundah, बुन्दः means arrow; it pierces; it inspires awe; or it shines while it flies (बुन्द इषुर्भवति । बिन्दो वा । भिन्दो वा । भयदो वा भासमानो द्रवतीति वा — Nir. VI.32).

8. Sadyah jatah, forth with increased (Wilson); सद्यः तदानीमेव जातः अस्माभिर्दत्तेन सोमेन प्रवृद्धः —Sayana); one who has immediately gained popularity.

Rbhu-sthira (vocative), O mighty and firm in battle ! (ऋभुष्ठिर! महान्-स्थिरः च तयोक्तः —Venkata, ऋभुः = उरु-प्रभूतः, and hence rbhusthira is उरुः प्रभूतः स्थिरश्च संग्रामे स तथोक्तः —Sayana).

Cyautnani, strengths, powers, energies; efforts; strong persons (च्यौत्नमिति बलनाम —Nigh. II.9.; च्यवन्ति शत्रवो येभ्यस्तानि बलानि —Daya. on VII.19.5); praises (च्यौत्नानि स्तोत्राणि —Daya. on I.173.4).

च्यौत्न:—X.50.4

च्यौत्ना—VI.47.2; VIII.2.33

च्यौत्नानि—I.173.4; IV.31.9; VII.19.5; VIII.77.9

च्यौत्नाय—VI.18.8

च्यौत्नेन—X.49.11

च्यौत्नै: —VIII.16.6.

Mountains are regarded as the supporters or the stays of the earth (भूमे: कीलवद् धारणाय —Sayana).

Varsisthani, gigantic (वर्षिष्ठानि अतिशयेन प्रवृद्धानि —Sayana).

Parinasa, far reaching (परीणसा परितो न तानि, अतएव 'च्यौत्नानि' इति भाव —Sayana).

Vidu adharayah, वीळु अधारय: fixed them firm (वीळु स्थिराणि—Sayana).

10. Varaham, to a cloud (वराहो मेघो भवति । वराहार: —Nir. V.4), Varaha is cloud; it brings (√हृ) the best means of livelihood (वर+आहार); this is supported by a passage from a Brahmana. (untraced) : "वरमाहारमाहर्षि" —इति च ब्राह्मणम् । See also "Vidhyat varaham tiro adrim asta."

बिभ्यद् वराहं तिरो अद्रिमस्ता (1.61.7) : from afar, he pierced the cloud by hurling his thunderbolt. This other meaning of Varaha (boar) is derived from the same root also; he tears up the roots, or he tears up all the good roots. (अयमपीतरो वराह एतस्मादेव । वृहति मूलानि । वरं वरं मूलं वृहतीति वा —Nir. V.4)

We have a Vedic quotation : "Indra slew the ravening boar" (वराहमिन्द्र एमुषम्—VIII.77.10). Angirasas are also called "Varahas" ब्रह्मणस्पतिर्वृषभिर्वराहैः (the lord of prayer, with the powerfull Angirasas—X.67.7.)

The group of atmospheric gods are called Varahavah (पश्यन् हिरण्यचक्रानयो दंष्ट्रान् विधावतो वराहून् —I.88.5; seeing the groups of atmospheric gods, of golden chariot wheels, of iron-tusks, running) —Nir. V.4.

Sayana gives two interpretations of this verse : (i) The etymological school, Nairukta :- Visnu is the sun, the bringer of rain, and also bringer of cattle and food ; the varaha (boar) is one of the personifications of the cloud as smitten by Indra's thunderbolt.

(ii) the school of mythology or tradition, Aitihasika : (For this see Tait. Sambita VI.2.4); the sacrifice went away from the gods in the form of Visnu and entered the earth. The gods sought him grasping hands. Indra passed over him. He said, "who has passed over me ?" "I am he who smites in the stronghold; who art thou ?" "I am he who brings from the strong hold." He said. "Thou art called he who smites in the strong hold. Now a boar, the stealer of the good, keeps the wealth of the Asuras which is to be one beyond the seven hills. Him smite, if thou art he who smites in the stronghold." He plucked out a bunch of darbha grass, pierced the seven hills and smote him. He said, "Thou art called, he who brings from the stronghold; bring him. So the sacrifice bore off the sacrifice for them; in that they won the wealth of the Asuras which was to be won; that alone is the reason why the Vedi is so called',' (i.e. the Upsads). A similar story is given in the Caraka Brahmana also. (For the legend, see I.61.7 also : मुषा यद् विष्णुः पचतं सहीयान् विध्यद् वराहं तिरो अद्रिमस्ता).

11. Bundah, arrow (since it pierces, it inspires awe, or it shines when it flies (बुन्द इषुर्भवति । बिन्दो वा । भिन्दो वा । भयदो वा । भासमानो द्रवतीति वा—Nir. VI.32)

"Thy bow is most powerful, strongly made, and well-shaped. Thy arrow is golden and swift. Both the arms which knock down enemies and increase sweetness for us) are well-equipped and fit for war."

Tuvīksam, powerful, having a great capacity of discharging arrows (तुविक्षं बहुविक्षेपं महविक्षेपं वा —Nir. VI.33)

Sumayam, delightful (सुमयं सुसुखम् —Nir. VI.33)

Ranya=ranyau (रण्या=रण्यौ=रमणीयौ सांग्राम्यौ वा; beautiful or well-equipped for battle

Ṛdupe, knocking down by movement, or by motion (ऋदूपे अर्दनपातिनौ, गमनपातिनौ) or, knocking down by sound or knocking down at a great distance (शब्दपातिनौ दूरपातिनौ वा) —Nir. VI.33.

Cid-ṛdu-vṛdha, चिदृदूवृधा, destructively piercing; piercing the vital parts by movement, by motion; piercing from the sound, or piercing from a distance (मर्मण्यर्दन वेधिनौ. गमनवेधिनौ । शब्दवेधिनौ । दूरवेधिनौ वा) —Nir. VI.33).

Hymn-78

The hymn refers to cows (गोनाम) ; food grains (अन्धस:, 1), condiments (व्यञ्जनम्, 2), horses (अश्वम्, 2); oils or cosmetics (अभ्यञ्जनम्), sheep (हिरण्यया, 2; may mean gold vessels also), ear ornaments (कर्णशोभना, 3), barley (yavyuh यवयु:—seeking yava or barley, 9) along with gavyuh, गव्यु:—seeking cows and hiranyayuh, हिरण्ययु:—seeking gold or sheep, asvayuh, अश्वयु:—seeking horses, 9). The tenth verse refers to datram, दात्रम्, a sickle, held in hand (haste, हस्ते; barley cut and piled (dinasya, दिनस्य, cut; sambhṛtasya, सम्भृतस्य, piled यवस्य, of barley; Kasina, काशिना, handful, same as mustina, मुष्ठिना, 10).

The word vrihi (व्रीहि) for rice does not occur in the Ṛgveda; we have the word dhana for fried or parched barley or other grains (धानानाम भृष्टयवाद्यन्नानां —Daya. on Yv. XIX.22; (पक्वान्नविशेषा: —III.35.7; अग्नि संस्कृतान्नविशेषान्—III.35.3; भृष्टान्नानि VI.29.4; यवा: IV.24.7).

धानम् — III.7.6

धानानाम् — VIII.70.12

धानावत् — III 43.4

धानावन्तम् — III.52.1; VIII.91.2.

It is surmised that rice was not known in the Ṛgvedic period; it was introduced during the age of the Atharva-veda, where we have the occurrence of the word vrihi (व्रीहि),—Wilson.

यवम् — I.23.15; 117.21; 176.2; V.85.3; VIII.3.4; VIII.2.3; 22.6; 63.9; X.27.8; 43.7; 131.2

यवऽमन्तः — X.131.2

यवम्ऽइव — X.68.3

यवम्ऽग्रवम् — IX.55.1

यवऽयुः — VIII.78.9

Hymn-79

1 Viṣvajit, (विश्वजित्), conquerer of all.

Udbhit, producer of fruit (उद्भित उदभेत्ता —Venkata; फलस्य उद्भेदक —Sayaṇa)

Kṛtnuh, all creating (कृत्नुः कर्त्ता —Venkata)

Agṛbhitah, obustructed by none of the enemies (अगृभीतः शत्रुभि अगृहीतः —Venkata)

Visvajit and Udbhit are also the names of two special Soma ceremonies, and the Soma may be addressed under these names as the principal means of their accomplishment (Wilson) (विश्वजित् सर्वस्य नेता, उद्भित् फलस्योद्भेदकः । अथवा विश्वजिदुभिदौ सोमयागौ । तयोर्निष्पादकत्वात्तद्रूपः —Sayana).

3. Yantasi, (यन्तासि), provide or offer.

Varutham, Shelter, protection (वरूथं वरकम् —Sayana).

"Thou art the restrainer from the enmities etc.; thou art a wide shelter." (Mahidhara on Yv. V.35)

4. Ṛjisin, ऋजीषिन्, O straight forward gentleman : O seeker of truth : (हे तृतीय सवनस्थेन ऋजीषेण तद्वत् —Venkata) (ऋजीषिणं ऋजूनां सरलानां धार्मिकाणां जनानामीषितुं शीलम् —Daya. on VI.42.2; प्रशस्तमुपार्जनं विद्यते यस्मिंस्तम् —on I.64.12; ऋजीषिन् सरलस्वभाव —VII.42.3; ऋजीषि सरलत्वं यस्य प्रति तत्सम्बद्धो —on VI.17.10) (O Ṛjisin : i.e., thou, who possessest the remains of the Soma, offered in the Tṛtiya Savana (third season—of Tait.Samhita. VI.1.6).

6. Atirnam, life not yet crossed; the unending life.

Pra im ayuh tarit atirnam, प्र ईम् आयु: तरित् अतीर्णम्, lengthens out his unending life (i.e. the life not yet crossed).

Ut irayati, urges him on (उत् ईरयति प्रवर्धयति —Venkata).

Hymn-80

Ekadyuh, is the seer of the hymn; the word occurs in verse 10 (एकद्यू:); it means "the lone illuminator", —perhaps thus it refers to the Sun. The word does not occur anywhere else in the Rgveda.

3. Kim anga, किम् अङ्ग, what now (किम् क्षिप्रम् —Venkata).

Radhracodanah, director of the worshipper (रध्रचोदन: रध्रस्य राधकस्य य: चोदयति धनम्—Venkata; रध्रं राधकं चोदयतीति रध्रचोदन: —Sayana).

Sunvanasya avita, guardian of the offerer (सुन्वानस्य अविता, guardian of the faithful).

5. Vajayu, coveting for food or victory (वाजयु अन्नमिच्छत—Venkata; अस्माकमन्नमिच्छत—Sayana).

Sravah, श्रव: , fame; also food (श्रव: अन्नं हविर्लक्षणम्—Sayana).

6. Vajayum, वाजयुम्, coveting for food (or victory) (वाजयुं अन्नमिच्छुम् —Venkata).

8. Urvikastha, far off (उर्वी) is the goal (काष्ठा), (उर्वीकाष्ठा बह्वन्तराल आज्यन्त: । आज्यन्तोऽपि काष्ठोच्यते । 'क्रान्त्वा स्थिता भवति'—cf. Nir.II.15; Say.'na).

The word Kastha, काष्ठा, is a synonym of many objects:

(i) Kastha means quarter; they are situated having gone across (तत्र काष्ठा इत्येतदनेकस्यापि सत्यस्य नाम भवति । काष्ठा दिशो भवन्ति । क्रान्त्वा स्थिता भवन्ति).

(ii) Kastha also means intermediate quarters; they are situated having crossed each other (काष्ठा उपदिशो भवन्ति । इतरेतरं क्रान्त्वा स्थिता भवन्ति).

(iii) The Sun is called Kastha also; it is situated having gone across (आदित्योऽपि काष्ठोच्यते । क्रान्त्वास्थितो भवति).

(iv) Destination is called Kastha also; it is situated having gone across (आज्यन्तोऽपि काष्ठोच्यते । क्रान्त्वा स्थितो भवति).

(v) Waters are also called Kastha; they are situated, having gone across i.e. stationary waters (आपोऽपि काष्ठा उच्यन्ते। क्रान्त्वा स्थिता भवन्तीति स्थावराणाम्)—Nir. II.15. (see also अतिष्ठन्तीनामनिवेशनानां काष्ठानां मध्ये. निहितं शरीरम् —I.32.10).

Apavrktah, be excluded

Aratnayah, enemies (अरत्नयः अरममाणाः शत्रवः —Sayana; अदाताः अयजमानाः शत्रवः —Venkata)

9. Turiyam nama, the fourth name (Somayaji, सोमयाजी is the fourth name; सोमयाजीति तुरीयं नाम तच्च यज्ञियम् —Sayana).

The first three names pertaining to Yajna (यज्ञियं) are; (i) names pertaining to constellatious, नक्षत्रनाम like Arjunyau, Phalgunyau etc. (ii) the hidden or secret names, गुह्यंनाम, (iii) the revealed names (open names), प्रकाशनाम.

In this case, one may refer to the Satapatha Brahmana (II.1.2.11) also. "He may also set up his fires under the Phalgunis. They, the Phalgunis, are Indra's asterism, and even correspond to him in name; for indeed Indra is also called Arjuna, this being his mystic name, and they (the Phalgunis) are also called Arjunis." Hence he overtly calls them Phalgunis, for who dares to use his (god's) mystic name? फल्गुनीष्वनीऽआदधीत् । एता वा ऽ इन्द्र नक्षत्र यत्फल्गुन्योऽप्यस्य प्रतिनामन्योऽर्जुनो ह वै नामेन्द्रो यदस्य गुह्यं नामार्जुन्यो वै नामैतास्ता एतत् परोऽक्षमाचक्षते फल्गुन्य इति को ह्येतस्यार्हति गुह्यं नाम गृहीतुम्).

The Ṛsi of the hymn is Kusidi of the family of Kanva.

2. Tuvi kurmi, तुविऽकूर्मी, achiever of many great deeds,

Tuvi desnam, तुविऽदेष्णम्, bestower of plentiful gifts.

Tuvi magham, तुविऽमघम्, lord of immense wealth.

Turi matram, तुविऽमात्रम्=बहु प्रमाणम् —Venkata; of huge dimension's or vast in size.

3. Bhimam gam, भीमं गाम, terrible bull.

4. Ait u nu, एत उ नु, come at once, O dear one ! hasten hither.

5. Up gasi-sat, उप गासिषत्, may you sing the upagana or prelude उपगानं च करोतु —Venkata).

6. A no bhara daksinena, आ नो भर दक्षिणेन may you bring us wealth with your right hand (धनं दक्षिणेन हस्तेन आहर —Venkata).

Abhi savyena pra mrsa, अभि सव्येन प्र मृषा, may you encourage us with your left hand.

Ma nirbhak, मा निर्भक्, deprive us not; exclude us not.

9. Visva candrah, All-rejoicing (विश्वचन्द्राः सर्वकान्ताः —Venkata; सर्व हिरण्योपेता बहूनामाह्लादका वा —Sayana).

Vasaih full of desires : with all aspirations (वशैः कामैः हेतुभिः — —Venkata; कामैरनेकैर्युक्ताः —Sayana).

Maksu, मक्षू, spontaneously : immediately (मक्षू शीघ्रम् —Sayana)

Hymn-82

4. Asatro , अशत्रो, O the one without any enemy (असपत्न —Venkata).

Upa' me, from close quarters (उपमे समीपे —Sayana).

Upa me rocane divah, from the resplendent heaven; in the highest splendour of heaven; from the world of heaven illumined by its own splendour; that is, by deities residing there (दिवः एव तेजसा दीप्यमानात् द्युलोकात्। तत्रस्थैर्देवैरित्यर्थः। रोचने अग्निभिर्दीप्याने च —Sayana)

7. Camasesu, in the bowls; in the cups (चमसेषु एतन्नामकेषु पात्रेषु —Sayana).

Camusu, in the saucers (चमूषु। चमन्ति यजन्त्यत्रेति चम्वो ग्रहाः (चमू=ग्रह) तेषु —Sayana; camu, चमू, is also army.

9. Yam te syenah pada a abharat, यं ते श्येनः पदा आ अभरत् —Whatever the hawk bore, according to traditionalists, this refers to Gayatri, who in the form of a hawk or falcon brought the Soma on earth from heaven (Tait. Samhita VI.1.6.4; At. Br. III. 25-27; गायत्री पक्षिरूपं धारयित्वा पद्भ्यां सोममाहरत् —Sayana) (Refer to kadru-suparna dispute; the metres are the descendents of Suparni. Kadru (earth) told Suparni (heaven). "In the third heaven from here is the Soma; fetch it; and by it buy your release". The Soma could not be brought by any of the metres like the Jagati and the Tristubh. Then the Gayatri flew up, of four syllables, together with a female goat and light. Then the goat won (Soma) for her, and so the goat has the name (aja, अज). The Gayatri brought back the Soma and the four syllables (two of the Jagati and two of the Tristubh which they had lost in the effort of getting the Soma), and so became of eight syllables—Tait. Sam. VI.1.6.4.

Hymn-83

2. Yujah, allies; associate (युजः सहायः —Sayana).

4. Vamam, wealth (वामं धनम् —Venkata).

5. Risadasah, O repeller of enemies (रिशादसः रिशतामसि तारः —Venkata).

Aghasya yat, belongs to sin (अघस्य यत् अघस्य सम्बन्धि —Venkata).

6. Ksiyantah, stay at home (क्षियन्तः गृहेष्वग्निहोत्रार्थं निवसन्तः ; stay at home for performing the Agnihotra —Sayana).

Adhvan yantah, go abroad on the road; go out for the collection of fuel etc. for the Agnihotra (अध्वन अध्वनि समिदाहरणार्थं यान्तः गच्छन्तः —Sayana).

7. Indra, इन्द्र, O Indra! O lightning!

Visno, विष्णो, O Visnu! O sun!

Marutah, मरुत: , cloud-bearing wind.

8. Bharamahe, we proclaim (प्रभरणं उच्चारणम् प्रकाशनं वा —Venkata; उच्चारयाम: प्रकाशयामो वा —Sayana).

Samanya, समान्या=सामान्येन (पूर्वं सर्वेषां देवानां सांहृत्येन तत: —Sayana)

Matuh, of the mother; of Aditi (मातु: अदिते: —Sayana).

Garbhe bhratrtvam pra bharamahe, brotherhood of yours in your mother's womb.

There is a legend in the Taittiriya Samhita to this effect (अदिति: पुत्रकामा साध्येभ्यो देवेभ्यो ब्रह्मौदनम पचत् —Tait. S. VI.5.6). Aditi offers a certain offering to the gods, and conceives four of the Adityas on eating the remainder which they gave to her. Thinking to conceive a still nobler offspring, she next eats the whole of the second offering herself, but she only conceives a barren egg. She then offers the third offering to the Adityas and conceives Vivasvat. But here in this legned, there is nothing of the birth of Pusan and Aryaman; though according to Sayana—तस्यै पूषा चार्यमा चाजायेताम्, i.e. these two are also born (Wilson).

Usnas, the son of Kavi, is the seer of this hymn.

2. Dvita, द्विता, in twofold ways; in twofold functions (द्विता द्वेध:).

This refers to Agni, with twofold functions as the garhapatya and the ahavaniya; or else the Agni as cosmic sacrifice and terrestrial fire.

Dvita Martyesu ni a'dadhus, amongst men (द्विता द्वैधं मर्त्येषु मनुष्येषु नि प्रादधुः। गार्हपत्यं आहवनीयं च। यद्वा दिवि वर्तमानस्य पृथिव्यां च यस्य निधानं कृतवन्तः — Venkata).

4. Urjah napat, son of food (नपात् अन्नस्यपुत्र!) (vocative along with Agne and Angirah) (in this verse urjah=food, not fuel).

Varaya manyave, to the venerable pride: to the excellent scorner of enemies (वरांय वरणीयाय मन्यवे अभिमन्यमानाय शत्रून् —Venkata).

5. Yaho, O son; sahasah yaho, O son of a strength (यहो सहसो पुत्र! —Venkata).

7. Gosata, गोऽषाता=गोऽसाता, wealth of kine, wealth of wisdom.

9. Kseti, stays at his home (क्षेति स्वगृहे निवसति —Sayana).

Ksemebhih Sadhubhih, with all efficient protections (क्षेमेभिः पालनैः सह साधुभिः साधयद्भिः —Sayana).

Hymn-85

Krsna Angiras is the seer.

The refrain of the verses of this hymn is "मध्वः सोमस्य पीतये"; may ye drink the exhilarating Soma; or for the sake of enjoying or accepting sweet enlightenment.

3. Krsna, कृष्ण, the charming devotee (according to the traditionalists, the name of the seer of this hymn; see Krsnasya, कृष्णस्य in verse 4 also. The tradition assigns to him or to Visvaka (विश्वक) son of Krsna (कार्ष्णि) the authorship of the next hymn VIII. 86. The word Krsniya (कृष्णीय) may be a patronymic formed from the same name in two other hymns of the Rgveda (I.116.23; 117.7), where the Asvins are said to have restored Visnapu to Visvaka Krsniya. In that case, Krsna would seem to be the grandfather of Visnapu—Macdonell and Keith).

7. Rasabham, ass, mule or horse, the animal that makes pleasing sound (रासभं शब्दायमानमेतन्नामकमश्वम्; "रासभावश्विनोः" इति रासभेवाश्विनो रथस्यवाहनौ —Sayana).

Vidvange, firmly-built; all parts of body firm and strong (वीड्वंगे । वीडुर्दृढः । दृढाङ्गापेते —Sayana).

8. Tribandhurena, त्रिबन्धुरेण, three-seated (त्रिफलका संघाटेन—Venkata).

Trivrta, त्रिवृता, triangular (त्रिवृता त्रिकोणेन —Venkata; Sayana).

Hymn-86

Krsna Angiras, Visvaka or Karsni is the seer of the hymn. The refrain of the hymn is मानो वि यौष्टं सख्यामुमोचतम् (severe not our friendships, but fling loose or set me free).

1. Dasra, दस्रा, wondrous (दस्रा दर्शनीयौ); subduer of enemies सर्वेषां शत्रूणामुपक्षपयितारौ —Sayana).

Visvakah, विश्वकः, the family-head (name of a Rsi —Sayana). The word visvaka विश्वक, occurs only in this hymn in the first three verses VIII.86.1-3, and nowhere else in the Rgveda.

Daksasya, of a sage with skill; Prajapati of this name (Sayana).

Tanu'krthe, for the sake of son (तनूऽकृथे पुत्रस्यकृते —Venkata).

Mumocatam. set me free; fling loose (मुमोचतम् अस्मानागन्तुं रथेस्थित्वाश्व-प्रग्रहान् मुञ्चतम् —Sayana).

2. Vimanah, विमना: , unattentive (a Rsi of this name —Sayana).

Visnapve, for the sake of posterity or son or grandson (विष्णाप्वे मम पुत्रे पौत्रे वा —Venkata).

Visnapu is the name of the Rsi's son or grandson also in mythology.

4. Uta tyam viram avase havamahe, उत त्यं वीरं अवसे हवामहे, we summon that hero for our protection (since it is for the son to protect the father, पुत्रोहि पितरं रक्षति —Sayana).

Rjisinam, the possessor of bliss; the possessor of Soma.

"Rjisin, is generally an epithet of Indra, and is always explained by Sayana, as here," possessor of stale Soma—III.32.1; 36.10 etc.), Rjisa, ऋजीष, also means "enemy-repelling."

5. Rtasya Srngam, horn of truth (ऋतस्य सत्यस्य शृंगं प्रथम् —Sayana).

Savita, impeller; the sun; the creator (सविता सर्वस्य स्वस्वकर्मणि प्रेरक: — Sayana).

The verse is in the praise of truth (सत्य प्रशंसा). Sayana seems to explain the verse implying that as the sun swerves not from his appointed course, and as truth or adherence to right conquers earthly foes, so the Asvins must fulfil the duties of ancient friendship and hear the Rsi's prayer (Wilson).

Hymn-87

1. Dyumni, glorious (द्युम्नी).

According to traditionalists, this may be the sad-Vasisthah (षड् वसिष्ठ:) or Priyamedhah, (प्रियमेध:) or an Angirasa (आंगिरस). (वसिष्ठ पुत्रो द्युम्नीक ऋषिरांगिरस: प्रियमेधो वा —Sayana).

For Dyumni, see — I.36.8; 91.2; VIII.87.1; 89.2; 93.8; 103.9; IX.109.7; X.69.5; 96.3; 159.4; 174.4.

The word dyumnika does not occur in the Rgveda. (द्युम्नी प्रशस्तधना, यशस्वी, the well known, rich, famous, glorious—Daya. on I.91.2; बहु प्रशंसा-धनयुक्त, इन्द्र: Yv. XXXIII.95 ; द्युम्नानि बहुविधानि धनानि भवन्ति यस्मिन्—Daya. on I.36.8).

Krivih, well (क्रिविरिति कूपनाम —Nigh. III.23) (कूपो यथा सेके उदकसेचने वृष्टौ भवन्त्यां नाल्पोदको भवति, तद्वत्—Sayana, as a well (with water) in the time of rain).

Gaurau iva, like teo gauras (deers) drink at a pool. Again the same in verse 4.

Irine, at a lake or pool (इरिणे तटाकादिषूदकपानार्थं शीघ्रमागच्छत स्तद्वत् —Sayana).

2. Gharmam, as it drops (घर्मं 'घृ क्षरणदीप्त्योः' पात्रेषु क्षरन्त सोमम् —Sayana; or it may also mean as an earthen pot called mahavira, and signify the milk boiled in it : "Drink Asvins the exhilarating (Soma) and the milk" (Wilson).

Mandasana, rejoicing (मन्दसाना सोमपानेन मोदमानौ —Sayana).

3. Priyamedhah, those whose sacrifices are acceptable; worshippers (प्रियमेधः । मेधो यज्ञः प्रियतमयज्ञाः यजमानाः —Sayana). There is also a Rsi of the name Priyamedha in mythology; the plural is used as a token of respect (पूजायां बहुवचनम्).

5. Dasra, full of glory; worth seeing; the subduer of enemies (दस्रा दस्रौ दर्शनीयौ उपक्षयितारौ; epithet of Asvins—Sayana).

Hymn-88

The Ṛsi is Nodhas

1. Svasaresu, in the stalls (स्वसरेषु । स्वसराणि अहानि स्वयंसारीण्यपि वा । स्वरादित्यो भवति । स एनानि सारयति), svasarani means days; they move of their own accord. Or else, Svar means the sun; he causes them to move Nir. V.4): See I.3.8 (उस्रा इव स्वसराणि).

Normally, the word means days, but whilst Sayana takes it as "days" in the first clause, "We praise thee in the days" सूर्यनेतृकेषु दिवसेषु वयमभिष्टुम:), in the second clause he interprets the same word as "Stalls" (तत्र दृष्टान्त: । वत्सं न यथा धेनव: नव प्रसूतिका धेनव: स्वसरेषु । सुष्ट्वस्यन्ते प्रेर्यन्ते गावोऽत्रेति स्वसराणि गोष्ठानि).

Vasoh=Vasayituh, (cf. VI.16.25), in the excellent beverage (वसो: वासयितुर्द्रव्यस्य निवासयितु: । यद्वा । वसो: पात्रे निवसत: —Sayana).

2. Ksumantam, Sound-producing (क्षुमन्तं शब्दवन्तम् —Venkata; also renowned (क्षुमन्तं शब्दवन्तम् । "टुक्षु शब्दे" । अनेन पुत्रादिकं लक्ष्यते । स्तोत्रादीनि कुर्वाणम् —Causing praises by means of the children which it will produce —Sayana).

4. Gotamah, enlightened sages; the sons of Gotama, like Nodhas —Sayana); the most devoted worshipper (गोतम: गच्छतीति गो: स्तोता, सोऽतिशयत: —Daya. on I.62.13; विद्यायुक्तो जन: —on I.78.2; बहुधेनुयुक्त: —on, I.79.4; मेधावी —on I.183.5; गोतमा: अतिशयेन स्तोतार: — on I.78.1).

Hymn-89

For verse, 7, see Nir. VI.14.

Nṛmedha and Purumedha of the Angirasa family are the Ṛsis.

1. Ṛtavṛdhah, Upholder of truth; devoted to knowledge and truth (eternal laws) ऋतावृध: य ऋतेन वेद विज्ञानेन वर्धन्ते, तान् —Daya. on Yv. XIX.65; सत्यविद्या वर्धका: —on VI 52.10; ऋतावृधा यावृतेन जलेन यथार्थतया शिल्पक्रियया वा वर्धेते तौ अश्विनौ; or यावृतेन सत्यानुष्ठानेन वर्धेते तौ अश्विनौ —Daya. on I.47.1.

6. Arkah, अर्कः , hymns of RK.

Haskrtih, that which indicates pleasure and satisfaction; joyous (हस्कृतिः हर्षस्य सूचकः —Venkata).

Yat jatam yat ca jantaam, यत् जातं यत् च जन्त्वम्, whatever has been or will be born.

7. Girvanah, a god (गिर्वणा देवो भवति। गीर्भिरेनं वनयन्ति —Girvanah means a god; they win him over with hymns.

Justam girvanase brhat, जुष्टं गिर्वणसे बृहत्, the agreeable; the sublime hymn to the god—Nir. VI.14.

Hymn-90

1. Rcisamah, worthy of praise (ऋचीषमः स्तुत्या समः —Venkata).

Param' jyah, परमज्याः , the mighty crusher or subduer (परमज्याः प्रकर्षेण क्षपयिता —Venkata).

5. Rjisi, lover or possessor of divine elixir (ऋजीषीऽपार्जितोऽभिष्टुतः सोमः , तद्वान् — Sayana).

6. Asura, O living one, O Lord of vital breath (असुर ! हे बलवन् ! Venkata, बलवन्, प्राणवन् ! — Sayana)

Krttih, कृत्तिः ; the word has several meanings, (Nir. V.22) (i) fame or glory; and also food;

The word is derived from √कृत्, to cut; it signifies fame or food

(कृत्ति: कृन्तते: । यशो वा । अन्नं वा): Great like fame is thy protection, O Indra— महीव कृत्ति: शरणा त इन्द्र as in the present verse VIII.90.6. (O Indra, thy protection in the atmosphere is very great indeed like fame—सुमहत्त इन्द्र शरणमन्तरिक्षे कृत्तिरिवेति —Nir.).

(ii) Krttih also means garment; the word is derived from the same root √कृत् (इयमपीतरा कृत्तिरेतस्मादेव); it is made of cotton-threads—सूत्रमयी.

Clad in skin, trident in hand, and with bow outstretched—कृत्तिवासा: पिनाकहस्तो अवतत धन्वा—Kathaka Sam. IX.7; cf. अवतत धन्वा पिनाकवास: etc Yv. III.61; SBr II. 6.2.17; and अवततधन्वा कृत्तिवासा: पिनाकहस्त: —Tait. Sam. I.8.6.2), also wander about wearing the skin garment and come to us hearing the trident —कृत्तिवसान आचर पिनाकं बिभ्रदागहि—Yv. XVI.51.

(iii) The word is also used for the sake of comparison; (बाहूराजन्य: कृत: —X.90.12). This explained by Durga as giving the third meaning of the word i.e. 'a skin', from the analogy of a cotton garment.

Hymn-91

The Rsika of the hymn is Apala (अपाला), the daughter of Atri. Wilson summarizes the legend of Apala from Satyayana Brahmana thus;

Apala, the daughter of Atri, being afflicted with a disease of the skin, was repudiated by her husband. She returned to her father's hermitage and there practised penance. One day she went out to bathe, intending to make a Soma offering to Indra, and as she was returning, she found some Soma plants in the road. She gathered them and ate them as she walked. Indra hearing the sound of her jaws, thought it was the sound of the Soma stones, and appeared to her, asking whether there were any Soma stones braising there. She explained the reason of the sound, and Indra turned away. She called after him, "Why dost thou turn away? Thou goest from house to house to drink the Soma, now then drink the Soma ground by my teeth and eat fried grains of barley." She then added, without paying him respect, "I know not whether thou art Indra, but if thou comest to my house, I will pay thee due honour."

Feeling however sure that it was really Indra's he addressed the later half of the third verse to the Soma in her month. Indra then, falling in love with her, drank the Soma as she wished. She then triumphantly exclaimed (V.4): "I have been repudiated by my husband, and yet Indra comes to me." Indra then granted her a boon and she thus chose "my father's head is bald, his field is barren, and my body is destitute of hair; make these things grow". Indra granted the three boons.

2. Karambha, करम्भ, a mixture of fried barley, meal and butter and curds.

The word Apala, अपाला, occurs only once in the Rgveda (VIII.91.7); which means maiden, yet to be married (just as the word "pati", one that offers protection means a husband also, similarly the one who has not yet received protection, i.e., is yet unmarried, is known as Apala).

Apala, the unmarried virgin, is seeking Soma, the young person with blooming youth, a brahmacarin. Sruta (स्रुता) is that girl who has taken a purificatory bath after her menses, or the one who has completed her studies in the asrama of her preceptor; now it is for her to select the young man for her companionship (ब्रह्मचर्येण कन्या युवानं विन्दते पतिम् — Av. XI.5.18; अर्यमणं यजामहे सुबन्धुं पतिवेदनम् । उर्वारुकमिव बन्धनात्प्रेत: मुञ्चामि नामुत: — Av XIV.1.17); त्र्यम्बकं यजामहे सुगन्धिं पतिवेदनम् । उर्वारुकमिव बन्धनादितो मुक्षीय मामुत: — Yv.III.60).

This pativedana is indicated by the term sruta api vidat (verse 1) i.e. obtain or choose the husband with the feelings of love and attraction. The word "astam bharanti" means establishing herself in the household life (gṛhastha, गृहस्थ).

2. The verse (2) has the term virakah वीरक:, the boy hero with whom apala, the maiden, is going to be married. The word jambhe-suti, pressed by my teeth, means in this context the child born of the union of the two, husband and wife (जम्भसुतम् । जाया च पतिश्च जम्पती । जायतेऽस्यां जनयति इति वा जाया । बिभर्ति इति भ: । उभौ जम्भौ । ताभ्यामुत्पन्नो जम्भसुत: तम् । धानवन्तम् । धानं आधानम्, गर्भाधानसंस्कारवन्तम् । स्वयं विधिवत् आहितम् । करम्भिणम् । करम्य: करम्भ: । करोते रम्भच् प्रत्यय: । क्रियावान् कर्मकुशल: । अपूपवन्तम् । अपदूरे आचार्यगृहे उपवन्तं उपवीतवन्तम् । मध्यमपद-लोप: उक्थिनम । उक्थो वेदो गुरूपदेशो वा तद्वन्तम्).

3. In this verse, the young man to the married, is in the intense love for the girl, and is known as indu, इन्दु. Indu becomes Indra after marriage.

4 The verse has been addressed to such a husband or Indra, who is rich enough to maintain the familv.

5, 6. The maiden demands three things from the husband, (i) growth on father's head (the word tata, तत, also means the dear son, तनोति सन्ततिमिति तत: , i.e. the husband. (ii) her own fertility and (iii) the fertility of the agricultural land.

7. Rathasya khe, in the void or whole of the chariot.

Anasah khe, in the void of the cart.

Yugasya khe, in the void of the yoke.

This refers to the three means of transport.

Surya-tvacam, with the splendour of the sun (सूर्यत्वचं सूर्यसमान त्वचम् । त्वग्दोषमपनम्य सूर्यसदृशकान्तिमिन्द्र: करोति — the blemishes of skin are removed and replaced by the shining skin—Sayana).

Triḥ putvi akṛnoh, thrice did'st thou purify, According to the legend quoted by Sayana, Indra dragged Apala through the wide hole (kha) of the chariot, the narrower hole of the cart and finally through a small hole of the yoke, and she cast off three skins. The first skin became a hedge hog, the second an alligator, and the third chameleon. According to wilson, and also Prof. Ausfrecht, the hole or space of the chariot and cart represents the opening between the four wheels; the whole of the yoke is the opening through which the animal's head passed. (Homer's II 19,406).

Anih'kṛtam, अनि:अकृतम्, consecrated by none.

Vasavanam, hiding treasures in his stores (वसवानं धनान्याच्छादयन्तम् —Sayana).

Vasujuvam, sender of wealth to his worshippers (वसुजुवं यजमानेभ्यो वसूनां प्रेरयितारम् —Sayana).

Hymn-100

For verses 10 and 11, see Nir. XI.28. and XI 29 respectively. For verses 10 and 11, the Ṛsi is Vac and the term occurs in both these verses.

1. Maya kṛṇavah viryani, Put fourth thy strength on my side. यदा त्वं मह्यं शत्रुषु स्थितं भागं दीधर: धारयसि इन्द्र! अनन्तरं एव मया सह मच्छतं जेतुं वीर्याणि कृणव: कुर्या:—Venkata, i.e. if thou wishest to give me the wealth of my enemies, come and help me to overcome them (शत्रुजयार्थं गच्छत: सपुत्रस्य मम साहाय्यं कुरु, यदि शत्रुधनं मह्यं दित्ससि —Venkata, in that case, help me along with the son while you proceed to overcome the enemy).

3. Vajayantah, in case you intend to proceed to the battle field (वाजयन्त: संग्रामिच्छन्त:)· war loving companion.

Prabharata, प्रभरत=प्रहरत, offer fervently.

Nemah um iti tvah aha, नेम. ॐ इति त्वा: आह-न इन्द्र: अस्ति. Nema says, "verily, there is no Indra" The word nemah means certain persons, like, agnostics. To those who raise doubts in the benevolence and existence of the supreme Lord Indra, Indra replies forcefully in the next verse—(4).

6. Paravatam; पारावतम्, paradise, According to Sayana, the name of a certain enemy. Literally, it means brought from afar; existing afar. (परावन्नाम्न: कस्यचित् स्वभूतम् —Venkata).

Sarabhaya, शरभाय, austere sage (according to traditionalists Sarabha is a Ṛsi).

Purusambhrtm, पुरुऽसंभृतम् —collected by many (—Venkata); that wealth of Paravat thou hast opened (अपऽअवृणोः) to Sarabha, so that it may be collected by many. (Sayana).

7 Sayana reads नि for न of the second line, and seems to explain the verse: "that enemy who was running forward and stayed not apart and did not hinder (अवावरीत्) you, Indra has thrown (अपीपतत्—नितरां अपातयत) his belt in the vitals of that enemy (वृत्रस्य मर्माणि)"

Wilson's rendering is thus:

"Haste now severally forward; he is not here who stopped your way,—has not Indra let fall his thunderbolt in the very vitals of that enemy?"

8. Again a reference to suparna (Gayatri) who brought soma from heaven.

10. When vac, (वाक्), speaking unknown words (अविचेतनानि) sat own as the charming queen (राष्ट्री), of the Gods, the four (चतस्र) milked (दुहे) food and milk, but where did her best portion go (क्व: स्विदस्या: परमं गामेनि)

When Vac, speaking unknown, i.e. unintelligible, words (अविचेतनानि अज्ञातानि) sat down as the charming pleasing queen of the gods (राष्ट्री देवानां निषसाद मन्द्रा मदना), all the four quarters milked food and waters (चतस्रोऽनुदिश ऊर्जं दुदुहेपयांसि). But where did her best portion go? (क्व स्विदस्याः परमं जगामेति). It may be that which goes to the earth or that which is taken away by the rays of the sun (यत्पृथिवीं गच्छतीति वा । यदादित्यरश्मयो हरन्तीति वा)—Nir. XI.28.

11 The gods (देवाः) generated the divine speech (देवीं वाचं मजनयन्त). Animals (पशवः) of all shapes (विश्वरूपाः) speak it (वदन्ति). May that charming milch cow (सा नो मन्द्रा दुहाना धेनुः), in the form of speech (वाक्), bestowing on us strength-giving food (मस्मान् उप इषं ऊर्जं) easily (सुष्टुता) approach us (उप मास्तु).

The gods generated the goddess Vac; animals of all shape speak it, i e. the animals whose sounds are articulate and those whose sounds are inarticulate (देवीं वाचमजनयन्त देवाः । तां सर्वरूपाः पशवो वदन्ति । व्यक्तवाचश्चाव्यक्तवाचश्च). May that pleasant milch cow, in the form of Vac bestowing food and juice on us, easily approach us (सा नो मदनान्नं च रसं च दुहाना धेनुर्वागस्मानुपैतु सुष्टुता)—Nir. XI.29.

Visvarupah, विश्वरूपाः, of all forms, shapes or kinds (Venkata and Sayana mean all the creatures speaking articulate or inarticulate sounds (सर्वं रूपा व्यक्तवाचश्चाव्यक्तवाचश्च, the idea taken from Yaska).

12. Dehi lokam vajraya viskambhe, देहि लोकं वज्राय विस्कम्भे, give room to contain the thunderbolt. The Brhad-devata gives a legend in this connection:

' Vrtra had enveloped the three worlds and stood there in his fierce energy, Indra could not conquer him, and he went to Visnu and said, "I will smite Vrtra; do thou stride forth and stand by my side, and let the heavens give room for my uplifted thunderbott, Visnu consented and did so and heavens gave an open space. All this is related in the verse" (Wilson). Obviously all this refers to clouds, the sun and lightning.

Hymn-101

Jamadagni of the family of Bhrgu is the seer of the hymn. For the word Jamadagni; see verse 8.

Jamadagni, जमदग्नि=jamat+agni (जमत्ऽग्नि). see:

जमत्ऽग्निना —III.62.18; VIII.101.8; IX.62.24; 65.25

जमदग्निऽदत्ता —III.53.15

जमदग्निऽवत् —VIII.96.3; IX.97.51.

Jamadagni'datta, जमदग्नि दत्ता, cognized by eye; the self evident (जमदग्निदत्ता चक्षुषा प्रत्यक्षेण दत्ता; Jamadagni is eye, चक्षुर्वै जमदग्निऋषिः —SBr. VIII.1.2.3. Daya. on III.53.15).

Jamadagnina, जमदग्निना, evidently cognized by eye (चक्षुषा प्रत्येक्षण — Daya. on III.62.18).

Jamadagnih, जमदग्निः=प्रज्वलिताग्निः=नयनम्, the eye (Daya. on Yv. XIII.56, jamat=जमत्=synonym of jvalatah, Nigh. I.17, a name concerning fire, flame, or ignition: We have in Nir. VII.24, जमत्ऽग्निभिः आहुतः Asva-layana Srauta Sutra, VIII 9). i.e. sacrificed with blazing fires. Blazing fires, i e. profusely generated fires, or burning fires; it is with them that the sacrifice is made. (जमदग्नयः प्रजमिताग्नयो वा । प्रज्वलिताग्नयो वा).

1. Ittha, इत्था, truth, reality; in this way; (Nigh. III.10; the synonyms for truth, सत्य, are बट्, श्रत्, सत्रा, श्रद्धा इत्था and ऋत, (for ittha, see V.59 2, बट्+इत्था=बलित्था) (See Yv. XXXIII.87 for this verse).

Mitra, मित्र, light; in-breath.

Varuna, वरुण, bliss; up-breath.

Ṛdhak, ऋधक्, truth, truly, verily (यः संमृध्नोति सः —Daya.; संमृद्धियंथा स्यात् तथा—Daya. Yv. VIII.20; स्वीकारे, III.25.1; सत्ये VII.57.4; यथार्थम् VI.40.5.

Devatataye, for the good of every one; for the sacrifice; for a control on mind and sense organs. Also for attaining divine qualities (देवतातये दिव्यगुण प्राप्तये —Daya. III.26.2; देवेभ्यः विद्वद्भ्यो दिव्यगुणेभ्यो वा —Daya.)

"Verily that man who worships Mitra and Varuna (friend and venerable lord) for the attainment of his desires and the one who gives oblations, becomes thereby perfectly tranquil and able to perform the sacrifice (ऋधग् देवतातये)" (Mahidhara).

Havyadataye, हव्यदातये, to the offerer; to the Yajamana (हव्यदातये हव्यानामादातुमर्हाणामादानाय —Daya.).

2. Bahutana, बाहुता न, like two arms (बाहुता भुजौ न इव —Venkata), that is, they obtain the sacrifice as the arms accomplish an object (यथा भुजौ स ह कर्म प्रविशतः, तद्वत् यज्ञं प्राप्नुत इति —Venkata).

3. Ayah'sirsa, अयःशीर्षा, iron (or golden) helmet (हिरण्यालंकृत शिरस्कः —Venkata).

5. Varuthyam, produced in the sacrificial chamber (वरूथ्यं यज्ञगृहभवम् —Venkata; यज्ञगृहे भवम् —Sayana).

Rajasu, to the kings (राजसु-मित्रादीन् राज्ञः, i.e. Mitra, Varuna, Aryaman etc. —Venkata).

6. Jenyam, victory-giving; also what is to be conquered or won (जेन्यं जयसाधनम् —Venkata).

Vasu=vasum, the sun as one of the Vasus, "they send him for the dispelling of darkness of the three worlds." (ते प्रेरयन्ति अरुणवर्णं जयसाधनम् वसु इति । एतदेव आह एकम् पुत्रम् तिसृणाम् पृथिव्यादीनाम् आदित्यं प्रेरयन्ति —Venkata).

Vasu may also mean wealth or gold; then "it was these who sent the red gold victory—giving", or "the reward of victory." (Wilson)

10. Adhvaryuh veti, अध्वर्युः वेति. the priest comes; i e. from the havirdhanam, a cart for the Soma (वेति गच्छति अध्वर्युः हविर्धानात् रजिष्ठैः ऋजुतमैः पथिभिः मार्गैः —Venkata).

Rajisthaih रजिष्ठैः, by the straight—most, or by the shortest path.

Niyutvah, O Lord of the vital world; O Lord of the Niyut steeds.

11. See Yv. XXXIII.39; Bat, बट्, synonym of truth, Nigh. III.10.

Panasyate addha, पनस्यते अद्धा, is praised rightly.

12. See Yv. XXXIII.40.

Asuryah, slayer of the asuras (असुर्यः असुराणां हन्ता —Venkata); also beneficient to living beings—Mahidhara. Also असुर्यः=असुभ्यः प्राणेभ्यो हितः परमेश्वरः —Daya. on Yv.XXXIII.40).

13 Dasasu babusu, from the ten quarters or cardinal directions

(बवसु वांहुषु स्थानीयासु दिक्षु इति —Venkata).

In this verse, we have a praise of Usas or dawn or the light of the sun (उषस: स्तुति: सूर्यप्रभाया वा —Sayana).

14. Haritah, the quarters (दिशो वै हरितस्ता अयं पवमान आविष्ट: —Venkata).

To explain this verse, the Satapatha Brahmana (II.5.1.4; 5) gives a legend: Prajapati desired to create, and after intense penance, produced in succession three kinds of creatures (प्रजा हि तिस्र:)—birds, small snakes (Sarisrpa, सरीसृप), and serpents, but they all died. He then reflected on the cause of the failure; and perceiving it to be the want of nourishment, he caused milk to be produced in his own breasts. After this, he created a fourth kind, which were thus fed and lived. The other (अन्या:) are those which thus survived.

Brhat, the great; this refers to the sun; and alternatively to Prajapati (बृहत् महान् असावादित्य: । प्रजापतिरित्येके—Sayana).

For the cretion, compare Ait. Br. II.1.1 and SBr, II.5.1.1-5 .

16. Vacovidam vacam ut' irayantim, (the cows) who herself utters speech and gives speech to others. So long as men are hungry, they remain silent, but when they have taken milk and are thus fed, they start talking (क्षुधितो हि न वाचम् उदीरयति, पय: पीत्वा पश्चात् उदीरयति —Venkata).

Martyah dabhracetah, man who does not possess sense; the one who is a fool (मर्त्य: मनुष्य: दभ्रचेता: अल्पचेता: —Venkata).

Hymn-102

For verses 11 and 21, see Nir. IV.14 and III.20 respectively.

The Ṛsi of the hymn is Prayoga of the family of Bhṛgu; or Agnirbarhaspatya or Pavaka or one or both of the two Agnis, the sons of Sahas; called Grhapati, and Yavistha

4. Aurva Bhṛgu vat, like मौर्वभृगु ; it may be the dvandva compound मौर्व+भृगु, like Aurva and Bhṛgu (Benfey) Aurva is sometimes called the son, sometimes the grandson, and sometimes only a descendent of Bhrgu.

Aurva, inside the earth.

Bhṛgu, shining, glorious.

The compound of the two may mean the sun; or the austere-sage.

Apnovanavat, like a honest toiler.

Samudravasasam, the one existing in waters, the submarine fire (समुद्रवाससम् वाडवम् —Venkata; or Omnipresent in the entire space of the firmament.

7. Adhvaranam, अध्वराणाम्, of the inviolable rites; pertaining to the rites free from violence.

8. Tvasta, त्वष्टा, creator.

Taksya, carpenter (तक्ष्या विकर्तव्यानि रूपेव त्वष्टा रूपाणि वर्धकिरिव, may deal with us as a carpenter deals with the timber he has to cut—Sayana).

11 Siram pavaka-socisam, शीरं पावकशोचिषम् (praise) Agni of purifying flames, i.e. of pure light (पावक दीप्तिम्); it rests through all or pervades all (अनुशायिनमिति वा । आशिनमिति वा —Nir. IV.14).

14. Tridhatu-avrtam barhih, triple-uncovered (त्रिधातु अनावृतम् बर्हि: —Venkata: त्रिधातु त्रि: अवृतं अनावृतं च असन्दिनं अबद्धं च । स्तरण काले हि बर्हिरबद्धं भवति —Sayana).

Apah cit ni dadha padam, the waters find their place in him (आप: अपि पदं निदधति अन्तरिक्ष्या माध्यमिके —Venkata, Sayana).

Barhih, बर्हि: , firmament.

Asam'dinam; असम्‌दिनम्, united, unbound.

15. Anadhrstabhih utibhih, अनाधृष्टाभि: ऊतिभि: , with inviolable protections.

Midhusah, the bestower of happiness, auspicious.

17. Angirah, fire divine.

21. Yat atti upajihvika yat vamrah ati'sarpati, when the emmet eats, when the pismire crawls (यत् अत्ति उपजिह्विका यदा वम्र: अतिसर्पति), vamribhih and upajihvikah are synonymous of emmets (वम्रीभिरुपजिह्विका इति सीमिकानाम)

Vamryah, (emmets) are so called from vomiting (वम्र्या वमनात्).

Simika, (emmet) is so called from crawling (सीमिका स्यमनात्);

Upajihvikah, smellers. (उपजिह्विका उपजिघ्रय:). See also वम्रीभि: पुत्रमग्रुवो अदानम् —IV.19.9.

[unmarried maidens (have taken) the undivided son from the emmets.] —Nir. III 20.

22. Vivasvibhih, विवस्विभि: , priests.

Hymn-103

Sobhari of the family of Kanva is the Ṛsi of this hymn.

2. Daivah'dasah, invoked by Divodasa according to the traditionalists. Here it, however, means sunshine or enlightenment. The term दैव:ऽदास: occurs nowhere else in the Ṛgveda.

Divodasam, दिवोदासम्, the giver of light; ('दिवश्च दास उपसंख्यानम् —Astadhyayi VI.3.21; विज्ञानमयस्य प्रकाशस्यदातारम् —Daya. on IV.26.3; दिवोदासस्य =प्रकाशदातु: (सूर्यस्य) —Daya. on VI.16.19; दिवोदासेभि: प्रकाशस्य दातृभि: —Daya. on I.130.10.

Majmana, मज्मना, with speed or force (मज्मना बलेन —Venkata शुद्धिकारण-क्षेपणाऽऽख्येन बलेन —Daya. on I.64.3; अनन्तेन बलेन on I. 143.4; मज्मना= बलनाम Nigh. II.9).

3. Rejanta, tremble (रेजन्त कम्पन्ते —Venkata).

Sahasra'sam, सहस्रऽसाम्, thousand of blessings; giver of thousands (सहस्रसाम् सहस्रस्य दातारम्).

5. Dṛdhe cit, strong; stronghold of enemies (स दृढे चित् अपि शत्रुपुरे स्थितम्).

Abhi-tṛnatti, spoils, wastes, destroys, defeats (अभि-तृणत्ति हिनस्ति —Sayana).

He (who is devoted to you) by his own strength and power destroys or defeats the enemy in a battle, and attains immense inexhaustible wealth, food or prosperity.

Vamani, wealth, treasure (वामानि धनानि —Venkata).

Alternatively, he (thy worshipper) spoils with his steed food laid up even in strongholds, he possesses imperishable wealth. (Wilson)

Puruvaso, O Lord of vast wealth (पुरूवसो ! हे बहुधन ! — Venkata).

7. Deva-yavah, Yajamanas, worshippers or householders, (देवयव: यजमाना: —Venkata).

Gibhih, गीर्भि: , by songs.

Sudanavah, liberal givers (सुदानव: शोभनदाना —Venkata).

Dasma, O graceful Lord (दस्म ! दर्शनीय ! —Venkata).

8. Ṛtavne, ऋतावने=ऋतऽवने, observant of truth (ऋतवने=यज्ञवते —Venkata; यज्ञवते सत्यव्रते वा —Sayana).

9. Vira vat, with children (वीरवत् पुत्रवत् —Venkata).

Maghava, wealthy (मघवा धनवान्).

Yasah, यश: , fame, i.e. fame-giving food (यश: यशस्करं अन्नम्—Sayana).

Dyumni, one possessing food; famous; glorious (द्युम्नी अन्नवान् यशस्वी वा । ' द्युम्नं द्योततेर्यशो वान्नं वा" —Nir. V.5. dyumnam is derived from the root √द्युत्, to shine and means glory or food. See VII.25.3 for dyumnam).

14. Svah'nare, स्वर्नरे=स्व:ऽनरे; in the yajna-performance (यजनि लक्षणे कर्मणि —Sayana)

Sobharyah. सोभर्यः , of sobhari; of the virtuous devotee=सोभरेः .

IN MEMORY OF

VED RATAN MOHAN

Col. Ved Ratan Mohan, M.P. was born at Rawalpindi on July 30, 1920. He graduated from the Punjab University and later took his Master of Commerce Degree from Delhi University.

Shri Ved Ratan Mohan's father Shri N.N. Mohan was a prominent industrialist and a generous philanthropist. Shri Ved Ratan Mohan made his own memorable contribution to the success of the enterprises in which his family was interested. He also took active interest in public life and supported many worthwhile causes.

In 1961, the honorary rank of Captain was conferred on Shri Ved Ratan Mohan; in 1966, he became a Lieutenant Colonel in the Territorial Army; in 1972, the honorary rank of Colonel in the Territorial Army was conferred on him.

He was elected as Deputy Mayor of the Municipal Corporation, in Lucknow. Later he was elected to the office of the Mayor. In 1964, he was nominated as a Member of the Uttar Pradesh Legislative Council. In 1967, he was awarded Padama Shri. In 1971, he became the recipient of the Padma Bhushan Award. In 1972, he was elected to Rajya Sabha, the Upper House of Indian Parliament, from Uttar Pradesh.

He died on July 28, 1973, deeply mourned and widely lamented.

He had travelled extensively and had a wide range of interests and accomplishments. Photography, painting, music and poetry had a claim on him. Equally, he gave generously of himself to the solution of public problems and to personal hardships of individuals in distress. He was deeply interested in Indian culture and in educational institutions as vehicles of India's cultural renaissance and socio-economic reconstruction. The Vedas and their message energised his inspiration and impelled him to consecrated action for human welfare.

Ved Ratan Mohan

Foreword

by

Dr. L.M. Singhvi
Executive Chairman, Veda Pratisthana.

The Vedas enshrine the cosmic vision and vitality of our ancestors and epitomise a living legacy of divine inspiration, intuition and insight.

The glory of the Vedas is their universal and timeless quality.

The subtle and symbolic invocations of the Sruti and the mystic and melodic music of the celestial hymns have hallowed human consciousness through trackless centuries with a sublime glow.

The Vedas exemplify a carefully nurtured and elaborately systematized oral tradition which is unrivalled in the annals of civilization.

The evocative poetry of joyous and spontaneous affirmation of life and nature, the unravelling explorations of the seers into the terrestrial and transcendental destiny of mankind, the pervasive immanence and the pristine omnipresence of primeval reality and primordial matter, and the wisdom and philosophy of Moral and Social Order in an harmonious equilibrium unfold the luminous realm of the spirit of the Vedas.

The Vedas are unique in their perspective of time and space.

Early in the history of human civilization, the Vedas proclaimed the essential unity of mankind, untrammelled by geographical barriers and tribal parochialism.

The Vedas declared the enduring filial allegiance of Man to Mother Earth: माता भूमि. पुत्रोऽहं पृथिव्या ......अथर्व. 12.1.12.

The Vedas articulated the essential equality and intrinsically equal dignity of men and nations and the need for cooperative effort for common benefit: अज्येष्ठासो अकनिष्ठास एते, सभ्रातरो वावृधु: सौभगाय । ऋक्. 5.60.5.

The Vedas cautioned against recrimination, jealousy and ill-will among the human kindred: मा भ्राता भ्रातर द्विक्षन् मा स्वसारमुत स्वसा......अथर्व. 3.30.3.

The Vedas aimed and aspired for an ambiance of unfailing and ubiquitous friendship:

मित्रस्याहं चक्षुषा सर्वाणि भूतानि समीक्षे ।
मित्रस्य चक्षुषा समीक्षामहे । यजु. 36.18.

The Vedas celebrate the vac whose array of thousand syllables and thousand postures of consciousness manifested in a thousand ways appear as flame-songs of the earth and the empyrean. In their innermost recesses are embedded the eternal and cosmic powers of illumination. The Vedic words rising from the oceanic depths of creative consciousness provide a panoramic vision and a thousand vignettes of that real inner illumination, svar, reached by dhi, the two facets of which are karma (action) and prajna (knowledge). In that realm of invocation and sacrifice, faith (sraddha) converges with reason (tarka); intuition assimilates perception; light combines with vigour; wisdom coalesces with valour; speech and action become one. The science of Vedas seeks that true synthesis of faith and reason, and in that pursuit, its prayer is that we may be blessed with "faith" that has not degenerated into the somnolence of the spirit and that we may be endowed with "reason" that has not, in the words of Gurudeva Tagore, lost "its way into the dreary desert sand of dead habit" and which has its habitation in the meandering maze of pointless prolixity:

त्रातारो देवा अधिवोचता नो मा नो निद्रा ईशत मोत जल्पि: ।
वयं सोमस्य विश्वह प्रियास: सुवीरासो विदथमावदेम ॥ ऋक्. 8.48.14.

The true Vedic faith does not countenance dogma; the Vedic reason is not a euphemism for sophistry; the Vedic word is not a victim of verbiage. The essential perception of the Vedas is not a prisoner of perversions. The humanism of Vedas is not a hypocrisy and the Vedic teaching of tolerance is not a transient contrivance. The core commitment of Vedas is to truth and dharma, to harmony and happiness, to freedom and justice. The soulful Vedic voyage in ceaseless quest of the experience of inner illumination and with its rich symbolism and manifold meanings is perhaps the oldest and the most magnificent and many-splendoured pilgrimage of the human spirit.

The Vedas gave the Magna Carta of Human Brotherhood and Universal Goodwill and proclaimed a noble prayerful Preamble to the humanitarian Constitution of One World based on friendship, fellow-feeling, freedom and fearlessness in words which are immortal and ever inspiring and which are central to the basic teleology and technology of building impregnable defences of peace in the minds of men. The Vedic seers who viewed the world of perception and the world of thought as a continuum prayed for the composite benediction of hearing noble thoughts and seeing noble deeds: भद्रं कर्णेभि: श्रृणुयाम देवा भद्रं पश्येमाक्षभिर्यजत्रा: । यजु. 25.21

In that endeavour of building a universe of noble thoughts and noble deeds, the Vedic seers convened a cosmic convocation based on the fundamental human quest for truth and the acceptance of its many facets (एकं सद् विप्रा. बहुधा वदन्ति):

आ नो भद्राः क्रतवो यन्तु विश्वतोऽदब्धासो अपरीतास उद्भिदः ।
देवा नो यथा सदमिद् वृधे असन्नप्रायुवो रक्षितारो दिवे दिवे ॥ ऋक्. 1.89.1.

In the Vedic vision of human society, man in his relation to man was not predatory, aggressive and oppressive as in the Hobbesian nightmare which conjured up homo homini lupus. The Vedic ideal was that Man was under an obligation to protect and preserve and to aid and comfort mankind everywhere: पुमान् पुमांसं परिपातु विश्वतः । ऋक्. 6.75.14.

The Vedic philosophy of freedom and fearlessness reached a credal and climactic crescendo in the earthy yet ethereal invocations:

अभयं मित्रादभयममित्रादभयं ज्ञातादभयं परोक्षात् ।
अभयं नक्तमभयं दिवा नः सर्वा आशा मम मित्रं भवन्तु ॥ अथर्व. 19.15.7

Equally, the Vedic hymn of togetherness remains a refreshing reminder and a beacon light to the fractured and fragmented world out of whose womb the new world order is struggling to be born:

सङ्गच्छध्वं संवदध्वं सं वो मनांसि जानताम् ।
देवा भागं यथा पूर्वे सञ्जानाना उपासते ॥ ऋक्. 10.191.2.

These noble thoughts made the culture of the Vedas the first and foremost foundation of the edifice of universal values: सा प्रथमा संस्कृतिर्विश्ववारा: । यजु. 7.14.

These enduring verities of the Vedas are not a relic of the past, nor are they the exclusive preserve or the sole inheritance of Indians and Indo-Aryans. They belong to the common heritage of humanity and are relevant in our contemporary world and in our age. We owe it to ourselves and to the peoples and the nations of the world to share this precious heritage and to disseminate its message and meaning.

It is the proud privilege of Veda Pratisthana to be the chosen instrument of the monumental project for preparing and presenting a readable and systematic modern translation of all the four Vedas. The Veda Pratisthana has had the credentials and the capacity to attempt this ambitious task because it was founded on the deep understanding and encyclopaedic erudition of Swami Satya Prakashji, an eminent scientist and a distinguished professor before he became a parivrajaka, the firm financial support and the bounteous benefaction of Narendra Mohan Foundation, an eloquent and tangible testament of the Mohan family's liberal and public-spirited disposition, and of the intrepid faith, fortitude, vision and dedication of the late Shri Prakash Vir Shastri.

The munificence of Major Kapil Mohan and his family and their deep devotion to the cause of Vedic learning enabled the Veda Pratisthana to embark on this noble enterprise. It was Major Kapil Mohan's resolve to raise a truly meaningful memorial in the form of a new edition of the Vedas in remembrance of his elder brother, the late Col. Ved Ratan Mohan that led the Narendra Mohan Foundation to offer its generous and unsparing financial assistance for this project. We acknowledge our debt of gratitude to Major Kapil Mohan and to Narendra Mohan Foundation. We also take this opportunity to pay our tribute to the memory of Col. Ved Ratan Mohan whose life was a superb saga of service and an inexhaustible treasury of goodwill.

The late Shri Prakash Vir Shastri was the main architect of Veda Pratisthana. It was to him that we owed the initial organization, the basic conception and the purposeful momentum of the project. Indeed, we are only trying to translate his dream into a reality. An eminent and gifted parliamentarian, whose cascading eloquence, sparkling wit, mature wisdom and intrinsic goodness had a singular charm, Parkash Vir Shastri was an articulate exponent and a selfless missionary of the fundamental values of India's creative and spiritual culture. Spun and woven with the warp and woof of Indian sensitivity and perception, the tapestry of his life and work was as authentic as it was inspiring. He shunned the pettiness and parochialism of politics and strove to reinforce our national life with the tensile strength of our quintessential heritage. He lived and worked for national goals. In national politics he was the ambassador of the larger cultural claims on life. In his tragic and untimely death, Mother India lost an illustrious son who distinguished himself not by the office he held, nor by his wealth or material acquisitions, but by his dedicated and singleminded service to the cause of the nation. In his death, Veda Pratisthana lost its moving spirit, regained mainly because his memory is a motive force. We savour the exhilarating fragrance and see the inspiring and exhorting presence of his personality, pervasive, permeating and perdurable, in the fruition of this project and pay our affectionate homage to his everlasting memory.

Deepavali, 1978.

Preface

The Vedas are the Word of God. At the very beginning of the Creation, man received knowledge of the Vedas. The Ṛgveda is the most ancient of all the holy scriptures in the world.

Knowledge of the Vedas is not intended for a particular race or country. God revealed this knowledge for the greatest good of mankind. This noble objective is reflected in the following words of the Vedic sages :

May all be happy and rid of diseases,
May all have a happy and harmonious life,
May nobody ever be afflicted with suffering.

The Vedas have been translated into several languages. Scholars like Griffith, Wilson and Max Müller have written commentaries on the Vedas in English. But the need for bringing out an unconventional and standard translation of the Vedas has been felt for quite sometime. The task, however, involved dedication, hard work and considerable financial resources.

Col. Ved Ratna Mohan, ex-M.P., was a promising youngman, the scion of a family which had implicit faith in the Vedas. His brilliant career was cut short by untimely death in 1973. His father, late Shri Narendra Mohan, was a leading industrialist of India. Devoted to social service, he took keen interest in the dissemination and distribution of religious literature. He had unshakable faith in God. Daily he would perform yajna and once in a year he would perform this on a big scale when all the mantras of one of the four Vedas would be recited. He had named his eldest son Ved Ratna (Jewel of the Vedas). He had desired the late Ved Ratna to do some service to the Vedas. But fate had willed otherwise. Col. Ved Ratna died before he could fulfil his father's wish.

His younger brother Major Kapil Mohan, who has great reverence for the Vedas like his father, made the noble resolve to get all the four Vedas translated into English and publish them on behalf of the Narendra Mohan Foundation in the sacred memory of his elder brother. This Foundation was endowed by the sons of the late Shri Narendra Mohan, the founder of the Mohan Industries, in accordance with the wishes of their father. A hospital, a college, and several other charitable institutions devoted to public service are being run by the Foundation.

The task of rendering the four Vedas into English was entrusted to the Veda Pratishthana by the Foundation. Dr. Govardhan Lal Dutta, a famous educationist and Head of the Pratishthana, requested the Vedic scholar Svami Satya Prakash Sarasvati to undertake the highly onerous responsibility. Indeed one could think of no other scholar better qualified than Svami Satya Prakashji to accomplish this task. I am happy that Svamiji was kind enough to accede to the request. He is devoting most of his time to the translation work though he is a parivrajaka, a peripatetic monk. In this task, he is collaborating with Pandit Satyakam Vidyalankar.

Thanks are particularly due to Shri Vishwanath for his unstinted cooperation in the excellent printing of this work. No words would be adequate to express my warm appreciation and grateful thanks to Major Kapil Mohan, Svami Satya Prakashji and other colleagues and co-workers of the Veda Pratisthana who have generally helped in the accomplishment of this sacred task.

Our labours would be fully rewarded if through this English translation of the four Vedas, attempted for the first time in India, the divine message enshrined in the Vedas impregnates human consciousness everywhere.

BOOK EIGHT

Hymn-41

May you offer priase to that opulent venerable Lord and to the vital principles. The venerable Lord protects men by His acts as the herdsman guards the cattle. May all our adversities vanish. 1

I praise him (the sun-divine), the venerable lord, with that song and hymn with which our ancient sages have been praying and with that song, repeated by a pain-despiser too. The lord of vapours rises up in the vicinity of rivers; there are seven streams (sisters) in the midst of them. May all our adversities vanish. 2

He embraces beautiful nights and with swift movements He encompasses the universe by His mysterious power. Visible over all is he. All who are desirous of his favour diligently offer him worship at three times a day (morning, noon, and evening). May all our adversities vanish. 3

He is visible above the earth and sustains the quarters of the horizon. He mèasures out (the entire space) which is the eternal abode of his venerability; he is our lord like the keeper of cattle. May all our adversities vanish. 4

He is the sustainer of all the regions, knows the hidden and secret names of the mysterious rays, He is a sage who cherishes the act of sages, as the heaven cherishes numerous forms. May all our adversities vanish. 5

In him all pious acts are concentrated like the nave set within the wheel. May you worship him, quickly, who pervades all the three worlds. As men assemble the cattle in their pasture, in the same manner, the horses have been gathered (to assail us) by our opponents. May all our adversities vanish. 6

He wraps these regions as a robe; he gives refuge to all the creatures. All Nature's bounties precede the chariot of the venerable Lord, while manifesting His glories at the time of worship. May all our adversities vanish. 7

He is the hidden ocean; swiftly he mounts the heaven as the sun ascends the sky. When He establishes the cosmic sacrifice in those regions, He demolishes with his brilliant radiance the devices of obstructing forces and ascends to heaven. May all our adversities vanish. 8

His bright far-seeing rays pervade all the three regions, and have further filled the three superior realms of heaven. Firm is the abode of the venerable Lord, who rules over the seven cosmic streams of firmament. May all our adversities vanish. 9

In his successive functions, he emits his bright rays (during day) or turns them dark (during the night). He measures out the eternal abode, and supports with the pillar of the firmament, both heaven and the earth. May all our adversities vanish. 10

42

The powerful venerable Lord, the possessor of all wealth has fixed the heaven. He measures out the wide expanses of the broad earth, and presides over all worlds as a supreme monarch. All these are the holy operations of the venerable Lord. 1

May you glorify the mighty venerable Lord and revere this guardian of immortality. May He bestow upon us a triply-guarded habitation. May heaven and earth preserve us within their lap. 2

O venerable Lord, may you inspire the worshipful devotee and sharpen his intellect to perform benevolent acts. May we ascend the ship that bears us safely to get across all difficulties. 3

O evertrue twin-divines, the pious worshippers, with their songs, induce you to come hitherward to enjoy devotional elixir. May all our adversities vanish. 4

O evertrue twin-divines, as the triply detached sage has been eagerly calling you with his hymns to enjoy the devotional elixir, so I also invoke you. May all our adversities vanish. 5

As all the wise men have been invoking you for protection, O evertrue twin-divines, I also invoke you to come and enjoy our devotional elixir. May all our adversities vanish. 6

These reciters of praises invoke the fire-divine who is all-wise, creative and performer of uninterrupted cosmic sacrifice. 1

O all-beholding, all pervading fire-divine, I repeat earnest prayers to you for your delight. 2

O fire-divine, your fierce flames consume the forest, as the sharpened teeth of wild animals destroy (the plants). 3

Your consuming fire flames, urged by the wind, bannered with the smoke, rise and go aloft diversely to heaven. 4

These diversely-kindled fiery flames are all around made visible even as the ensigns of the dawn. 5

As this all pervading fire speeds along, the black dust is raised by its feet when this fire spreads upon the earth. 6

Making the plants its food the fire-divine consumes them and is never satiated, and falls upon the tender shrubs again. 7

Bending the trees down with all its tongues (flames), it flickers in its fiery glow; the fire-divine looks splendid in the woods. 8

O fire-divine, your original place is in the waters, yet you force your way into the plants and becoming their embryo, you are born anew. 9

O fire-divine, worshipped with offerings, your flames shine out from the sacred butter with kisses on the ladle's mouth. 10

Let us adore with hymns the fire-divine, who is fed on agricultural products, dairy products, and who bears the herbal plants on the back. 11

We solicit you, O fire-divine, the invoker of Nature's bounties and performer of sacred rites, with oblations and with fuel. 12

O adorable lord, may you bestow upon the pious worshipper infinite riches, food and brave progeny. 15

O fire-divine, our brother, the source of strength, driven as if on red horses, performer of pure acts, may you be propitiated by our laudations. 16

My praises hasten to you, O fire-divine, as the cows enter their stalls to meet the lowing calf that longs for milk. 17

O fire-divine, most vital among vital forces, all people, howsoever rich, turn towards you for attainment of their desires. 18

The intellectuals, the wise and the sagacious, with their thoughts and actions propitiate the fire-divine for the furtherance of their prosperity. 19

While making preparations to adore you in their homes, the worshippers glorify you, O powerful fire-divine, the bearer of the oblations and the invoker of Nature's bounties. 20

With cheerful heart and delightful sweet hymns, we venerate the gladdening fire-divine, dear to all, abiding in sacred acts, and burning with purifying brilliance. 31

O fire-divine, rich in light like the rising sun, displaying strength by your beams, may you boldly destroy the darkness of ignorance. 32

We solicit from you, O fire-divine, the source of energy, that choicest wealth which you grant with blessings and which does not decay. 33

44

May you honour the fire-divine, dear as honoured guest with your fuel and awaken it by offering butter. Dedicate your offerings in it. 1

O fire-divine, may you accept my laudations and be magnified by my prayers. May you welcome my sweetly spoken words. 2

I establish to the fire-divine the foremost status of the messenger. I adore it as the bearer of the oblations; may it inspire Nature's bounties to occupy their functional places. 3

O brilliant fire-divine, as you are kindled, your great flames start blazing up. 4

O propitious fire-divine, let my ladles filled with butter come near you. May you accept our offerings. 5

I adore the fire-divine, the exhilarating invoker, the priest who shines forth with various lustres and is rich in brilliance; may it hear my invocations. 6

(I worship) the fire-divine, the eternal invoker, adorable, beloved, the performer of wise deeds and the visitant of solemn ceremonies. 7

O fire-divine, best of all vital forces, may you continually accept our offerings and conduct cosmic sacrifice at the proper seasons. 8

O brilliant-flamed, the virtuous, the knower, may you, while enkindled, bring Nature's bounties of celestial region towards us. 9

We solicit the wise invoker of Nature's bounties, the beneficient, the smoke-bannered, the resplendent and the ensign of sacred acts. 10

O brilliant fire-divine, procured by mechanical strength, may you protect us against those, who injure us, and drive away our adversities. 11

The wise fire-divine, decorating its form with brilliant flame, and chanting of hymns, grows in night through the singing of hymns. 12

I invoke the fire-divine of purifying lustre, the source of all energy in this inviolable sacred ceremony. 13

O fire of spirituality, faithful to your friends, may you be seated in our hearts with divine attributes and cherish our sacred deeds with your brilliance. 14

Whosoever mortal worships the divine fire within his house for the attainment of wealth and riches, to him it gives all these. 15

The fire-divine is the head (of Nature's bounties), the summit of the heaven, the lord of the earth; it sustains the seed of aquatic life. 16

O fire-divine, may your shining, pure and bright flames go upward with your lustre and splendour. 17

O fire-divine, lord of heaven, you preside over all that is desired or given; may I become your admirer for my solace. 18

O fire-divine, they, who understand, invoke you; they please you by their actions; let our prayers magnify your glory. 19

We ever solicit the friendship of fire-divine, the invincible, the powerful one, the messenger and admirer of Nature's bounties. 20

May my dedicated actions and devotional songs ever invigorate you; may you always think of our friendly bond. 22

O fire-divine, if I were you and you were I, your blessings here should come through. 23

O fire-divine, you are the giver of dwellings, the lord of wealth and rich in light; may we always enjoy your favour. 24

O fire-divine, observant of pious acts, our resonant songs of praise proceed to you as rivers hasten to a sea. 25

I glorify with hymns the ever-young fire-divine, the supreme lord of men, the all-wise, the all-consuming and inspirer of all sacred acts. 26

Let us seek with our hymns the fire-divine, the guide of all sacred sacrificial acts, strengthened with sharp-jaw of justice. 27

May my fellow brothers also be your worshippers, O adorable fire-divine, O purifier, give them happiness. 28

Verily you are wise, the sharer of oblations and ever wakeful as the seer (for our well-being). May you, O fire-divine, shine in the sky. 29

O wise fire-divine, giver of dwellings, may you prolong our lives before misfortunes or assailants fall on us. 30

The sages who enkindle ritual fire, continually purify their hearts; in case their close friend is the ever-young resplendent Lord. 1

Ample is their fuel to burn, many their hymns to sing and wide their splinters; in case their close friend is the ever-young resplendent Lord. 2

Though unequalled in power to combat, the brave devotee is sure to subdue his adversaries, howsoever equipped by their own forces, in case his close friend is the ever-young resplendent Lord. 3

As soon as born, the resplendent self, the destroyer of evils, seizes an arrow and asks the mother Eternity "who are the terrible, who are the renowned opponents?" 4

The powerful mother answers, "O son, he who seeks your enmity, fights as lightning in clouds." 5

O bounteous Lord, may you hear this: "surely you grant all what your devotees ask of you; whomsoever you make firm keeps firm." 6

When the resplendent Lord, the fighter, goes to battle borne by excellent vital energies, He is the foremost amongst the charioteers. 7

O Lord, the thunderer, may you repel all attacks coming on us from any directions; may you be to us a most abundant benefactor. 8

May the resplendent Lord, whom no wicked force can harm, set our chariot in foremost place for the aquisition of rewards. 9

O powerful Lord, may we escape our enemies; may we come to you for your generous rewards, rich in cattle. 10

O Lord, strong and resolute, may we slowly approach you to be rich in vital powers and be possessed of unrivalled treasure, and unharmed (by calamities). 11

Your exalted excellence gives day by day hundreds and thousands of precious and auspicious rewards to your worshippers. 12

O resplendent Lord, we know you as the winner of wealth and breaker of firm obstacles. You are the opener (of the gate of wealth) and (giver of shelter) as a house. 13

O all-wise, exalted and brave Lord, subduer of evil forces, when we solicit you, the barterer, may our adorations exhilarate you. 14

May you bring to us the treasure of that opulent person, who is unwilling to give, and who reviles you regarding your generosity of bestowing wealth. 15

O resplendent, these our friends, effusers, singers of devotional love, wait and look to you like men with fodder to the herd of cattle. 16

We invoke you here from afar for our protection, for you are not deaf; your ears are always open to hear. 17

Whenever we come to you in our distress and offer praises, we only think of you. O resplendent Lord, may you give us wisdom. 19

O Lord of strength, we lean on you as old men lean on a staff. We entreat you to be always with us in the sacred works. 20

May you sing a song of praise to the resplendent Lord who is rich in wealth and bountiful and whom no one challenges in war. 21

When the prayers are repeated, I pour out the libation to you, O showerer, for your acceptance. May you accept it to your satisfaction and enjoy the exhilarating elixir of devotion. 22

Let not the fools or those who mock, beguile you, when they seek your protection; may you not favour the unbelievers and godless. 23

Let the worshippers exalt you here with sweet devotion and sincere dedication for the attainment of munificence. May you drink the elixir as Gaura deer drinks water from a pond. 24

Proclaim in our congregations those old and new riches which our Lord, the destroyer of evils, sends from afar. 25

The resplendent Lord displays His manly might, after a successful fight against thousands of armed obstructions, and accepting the exhilarating elixir from the gourd-pitcher. 26

He finds undeniable strength in intellectual people and also in those toiling and thereby He conquers against the day to day miseries. 27

I praise the universal Lord, the deliverer of our families, the destroyer of evils, and the bestower of food and cattle. 28

I praise through hymns the mighty resplendent Lord, the augmenter of waters, for the attainment of wealth and wisdom while the devotional worship is performed with prayers. 29

It is only He who cleaves the hill for the people of three regions so that the wide womb is formed to allow the cows in captivity to issue forth. 30

Whatever anger you incur in your exhilaration, whatever you plan in your mind, or think to penalize us, O resplendent Lord, please do it not, but be kind to bless us. 31

O resplendent Lord, whatever little has been done by you for us is renowned on the earth. May your kindness turn to us. 32

O resplendent Lord, when you are kind to us, yours shall be this eulogy, and yours shall be these hymns of praises. 33

I am afraid of one like you only. You are terrible, the destroyer of evils and strong enough to endure all attacks. 35

O bounteous Lord, may I never live to see my friend or son in distress; may your mind remain ever favourable towards me. 36

"O mortals, which friend, has, without provocation, ever abused a friend? who again is one that leaves his friend in distress?" 37

O showerer of blessings, when the devotional prayers are offered, you have always been eagerly accepting them to your delight like a hunter rushing down to his victim. 38

I draw here towards you the two horses harnessed to a beautiful car and yoked by hymns, since you give precious wealth to the sincere devotees. 39

May you cleave asunder all the hostile forces, and frustrate their destructive attacks, and bring us that wealth which we long for. 40

O resplendent Lord, what is concealed in the strongholds of evil forces, and in places not easily accessible,—bring us that wealth which we long for. 41

O resplendent Lord, what all men recognize as given abundantly by you, bring us that wealth which we long for. 42

O resplendent Lord of ample wealth, our guide, we are privileged to belong to one like you. You are the controller of all cosmic vital energies. 1

O possessor of resolute will-power, we know that truly you are the giver of nourishment and conferer of wealth to all. 2

O performer of various selfless deeds and possessor of hundreds of aids, the singers celebrate your majesty with their devotional songs. 3

Fortunate in life is that mortal whom the faultless Supreme Lord, who is also the Lord of vital principles, Lord of Justice, and the Lord of light, gives protection. 4

He, who is directed by mother Infinity, ever increases in wealth desired by all. He possesses abundant wisdom, vitality and brave children. 5

We solicit rewards from the resplendent Lord who is fearless and strong; we solicit wealth from the bounteous Lord. 6

Verily, in Him are combined all the protective measures; He is the Lord of vast wealth. May His gliding-steeds like blessings bear Him to the sacred place of devotion for his exhilaration. 7

That ecstacy of joy which is pre-eminent and which utterly destroys your enemies and which wins tributes from men and which is invincible in battles of cosmic life,— 8

—that ecstasy of yours, O well-worthy of praise, and the deliverer from enemies, (is remarkable). May you come to accept our oblations, O most mighty one, the giver of dwellings, may we obtain a treasure full of wisdom. 9

O lord of wealth, greatest of the great, may you, responding to our wishes for cows, horses and chariots, be gracious to us as ever. 10

O brave and bounteous Lord, I find no limit to your munificence. O Lord of resolute will-power, may you bestow your rewards on us and bless our offerings by giving us ample wealth and wisdom. 11

The graceful resplendent Lord is glorified and praised by His friends; He knows all generations; all men adore Him at all times and offer devotion like the pure butter being poured by ladles. 12

O devotees, may you sing with a loud voice the sacred lores in the wild rapture of spiritual joy; may your wise and strong Lord, humbler of adversaries, be ever honoured by your praises. 14

O glorified by all (the resplendent Lord), may you give wealth, give treasure and vigour and provide abundant food in critical times of life-struggle just now, without delay. 15

May the Lord of all precious things, who according to His pleasure can change His charming forms, give us abundant wealth and wisdom just now, without delay. 16

We praise with oblations and hymns that blissful mighty Lord, showerer of bounties and very much wish that He comes. You are worshipped by every man, including cloud-bearing winds. May I adore you constantly with song and prayers. 17

We offer devotion to those loud-sounding clouds who rush along with streaming trains of rain showers; may we obtain in the worship the happiness which these loud roarers bestow. 18

O resplendent Lord, the mightiest, may you, O inspirer of intellect, bring to us suitable wealth that crushes men of evil minds. O inspirer, bring to us most excellent wealth. 19

O most bountiful, strong, wondrous, most splendid, excellent and supremely truthful; may you, by our prowess, O universal ruler, overpower them who attack us, and may you bring to us ample wealth for our enjoyment. 20

Let the new disciple, though not so divine, approach the one who has received the living gift of knowledge. May he, the God-dependent soul, the enjoyer of fruits, approach the loving Lord, the possessor of immense treasures, for enlightenment during the break of dawn. 21

I, the God-blessed wealthy person, thank Him for possessing sixty thousand horses, ten thousand cattle, twenty hundred camels, and a thousand brown mares with three red patches. 22

(Let me thank God and proclaim): "I have ten brown horses, who turn the wheel of my chariot with swift whirl; they are of high speed and mature vigour." 23

These are the gifts of the loving Lord, the possessor of immense treasures. He donates golden chariot and proves himself most liberal and wise. He Himself wins wide fame in the world. 24

Come to us, O Lord of vitality, to bestow upon us great wealth and glorious strength. We have been offering to you, O giver of abundant wealth, so that you give much to us; we are also just now offering the same to you, the giver of gifts. 25

He, the sun, comes speedily mounted on horses and invested with thrice seven times seventy (3x7x70=1470) golden rays of morning. He (the sun) comes to you, the Lord, with these healing herbs; and learned priests offer our invocations to you, the acceptor of loving devotion,—bright and pure. 26

Of His own sweet-will, He has been pleased to give me these honoured gifts. He is the performer of good works, and inspires men who are courteous, liberal, and determined to perform noble deeds on the basis of their preeminent good actions. 27

O Lord of vital energies, you are self-resplendent in your glorious form; you are bright like pure butter, you grant me the gifts of divine spirituality inspired by vital energies, willing efforts, and god-inspired love. Surely these are inspired by the blessings of our Lord. 28

May I enjoy these gifts worthy to be enjoyed by the beneficient kings, corresponding to sixty thousand bulls, vital and vigorous like horses. 29

As the cows approach the herd, in the same manner the castrated bullocks come for refuge; may the bullocks come to me for refuge. 30

He calls hundred camels (to be donated) when the herd has been grazing in the woods, and two thousand white cows from among the white herds. 31

O daughter of heaven (the dawn), whatever ill-dream threatens ourselves or relates to our cattle's distress, remove it to the wide far away regions of subconsciousness; even away from the three such regions; your aids are void of harm and verily your aids are true aids. 14

O lady of the light (dawn), whatever ill dream that threatens the maker of gold ornaments or the maker of garlands, let us trasfer it to the remote distances of wide regions of subconsciousness, second and the third; your aids are void of harm and verily your aids are true aids. 15

O lady of the light, may you drive away the evil dream to the second and third regions (of subconsciousness),—such a dream, in which we appear to be creatures and souls of remote distances, who are ordained to enjoy or do what we enjoy and do while awake; your aids are void of harm and verily your aids are true aids. 16

As we throw off the nails of fingers and hoofs of animals (as insignificant parts) and as we discharge debt, in the same manner disburse all the evil dreams to the remote regions (places of our subconsciousness); your aids are void of harm and verily your aids are true aids. 17

O dawns, may we be free from evil dreams; may these dreams. which we were afraid of, depart from us and may we feel today victorious and happy; your aids are void of harm and verily your aids are true aids. 18

May I with wisdom and devotion enjoy the delicious and widely honoured health-giving food, which all godly men and divine powers proclaim to be sweet, and try to procure for eating. 1

O delightful elixir, you are divinely pure and as you enter within unimpaired, you avert the anger of the divine forces; may you, enjoying the friendship of the resplendent, carry us to wealth as a swift horse brings the chariot speedily (to riches). 2

As we drink the elixir of divine love, we become immortal; we attain the heavenly light, we have known the secrets of divine forces. Now what would the malignant do to harm us? O immortal, what mortal man's deception now to us? 3

O pure divine elixir, may you be sweet and blissful when absorbed into our hearts, as a kind father to his son, or as a friend to a friend. O pure elixir, worthy of wide praise, may you extend our years that we live long. 4

I have drunk these glorious drops of divine elixir which give me freedom. Closely they knit together my joints as bullocks drawing together a chariot falling in pieces. Let them protect my foot from slipping on the way. May they deliver me from sickness. 5

O divine elixir, kindle me like the fire produced by friction; give us a clearer insight and make us rich in enlightenment; I praise you now for exhilaration; come now, full of wealth and wisdom, to nourish us. 6

May we enjoy the pleasure you give with an enlivened spirit as men enjoy paternal wealth. O love divine, may you prolong our lives as the sun makes the universal days grow longer. 7

O elixir, the glorious one, bless us for our welfare; we are your worshippers; may you recognize it. O the shining one, may not the enemy become strong and fierce; may you not give us up unto our foeman's pleasure. 8

O divine elixir, you are the guardian of our bodies, you dwell in each limb as the beholder of men. When we offend you against your holy statutes, may you, as a kind friend, best of all, be gracious. 9

O Lord of vital energies, may I have a friend whose heart is tender, and who will never harm me even when intoxicated with power. May this elixir be deposited within me permanently; for this I pray to the resplendent Lord. 10

May these irremovable sicknesses lose their strength and vanish. Let these terrible pains, which have made us tremble, go away. May the mighty elixir getting active be effective to the climax. Let us feel that we have attained that draught by which men prolong life. 11

That elixir, drunken into our hearts, has entered, immortal into us, the mortals, so let us, O fathers, invoke this elixir with devotion, may we rest securely in his grace and favour. 12

O divine elixir, you spread yourself extensively through earth and heaven in association with our guardians. So let us serve you with devotion and become lords of riches. 13

O Nature's bounties, the protectors, may you give us your blessings. Let not dreams or idle talks overpower us. May we be ever-dear to the divine Lord, and along with brave sons around us, may we address the synod. 14

O divine love, may you provide life-giving food from all sides. You are the bestower of happiness, beholder of all men; may you enter us, and, rejoicing with your protecting powers, preserve us from behind and before. 15

I praise to you, O bounteous resplendent Lord, granter of all riches, and who, with thousandfold treasures, loves to help those who serve Him with dedication. 1

He, equipped with his punitive forces, gets a control over hundreds of armies of adversities. He destroys the enemies of His munificient and liberal worshipper, and grants in ample rewards swelling like a stream flowing out of a mountain. 2

The delightful devotional prayers reach you, O resplendent Lord, the lover of hymns. These prayful melodies seek and surround you as waters seek and flow to their accustomed lake where they finally rest. 3

May you drink the elixir of devotion which strengthens and gives eloquence, and which is the sweetest of the elixir for your exaltation. May you in your exhilaration bestow your reward of treasure on us, just as the millstone pours out dustlike flour. 4

O resplendent Lord, self-strong, may you come quickly to our place of prayers, urged on by the repeated praises which are sweet as milk. Among wise devotees, these are the gifts to glorify you. 5

Your vital cosmic forces are agile and swift, and over-powering like the winds; with them, you encircle the realm of human world and therewith the entire luminous heaven becomes visible as if. 8

O resplendent, from you we solicit prosperity and wealth and wisdom. As a bounteous Lord, you help mendicants of venerability, and in the field of learning you help the leading ascetics interested in intellectual pursuits. 9

O bounteous Lord, as you have been giving abundant kine and gold to the wise devotees and to the terrifiers of the wicked, as well as favouring men of matured wisdom and persons of all-round discipline, men spiritually advanced and of straight-forward nature (in the same way may you favour us also). 10

I glorify the far-famed, the bounteous, resplendent Lord for the sake of his protection, who gives precious wealth by thousands to the dedicated devotee and the offerer of hymns. 1

The resplendent Lord is equipped with hundred-edged forces, and destructive invincible weapons. He showers blessings on His liberal devotees like a mountain rich in springs. He bestows these rewards on His devotees when exhilarated by the devotional prayers. 2

When sweet devotional prayers exhilarate the loving Lord, my homage is offered abundantly to Him like flowing waters. O gracious Lord, may it please you as it is like sweet milch kine to the worshipper. 3

The matchless elixir of devotion that strengthens and gives eloquence is the sweetest of the beverage that is offered to you; in the ecstacy of joy, may you bestow your gifts upon us. O gracious Lord, with these hymns, we have established you in our prayers. 4

He rushes speeding like a horse towards our devotional prayers, offered to Him in our ceremonies, which are adorned by our sweet hymns. O lover of devotional sweet homage, here we have a call to citizens, whom you have been loving the best. 5

The vital powers which draw your chariot of universe are harmless; they surpass the impetuous strength of wind; through them you silence the evil forces against men, and with them you go round the sky. 8

O gracious hero, may we learn afresh to know you as you are. Surely you have been helping the vigilant men in the decisive battle, and giving aid to get control over even all round disciplined forces of enemies. 9

O bounteous Lord, as you have been giving help to the wise and pious in their sacred works, and to the man constantly engaged in efforts and the one resisting sensuous pleasure, may you in the same manner, O Lord of resolute will power, give me a herd of kine and cattle and wealth shining like gold. 10

O resplendent bounteous Lord, may you inspire the mind of the true seeker as in the past you have been inspiring leading ascetics of profound knowledge and mendicants of venerability as well as those possessing extrovert and introvert intellects. 1

The outspeaking teacher approaches the man of wisdom, lying crippled and decrepid. Aided by you, (O resplendent Lord), may the seer, deadly hostile to the wicked, desire to obtain thousands of kine (i.e. thousandfold wisdom). 2

May you glorify that resplendent Lord with the newest hymns who has been presently praised by sacred lores. He is wise and inspirer of sages, ever eager to enjoy. 3

It is He, who is established in sevenfold rays of the sun and in the three regions extending to the loftiest. He sends His divine roars down to all the living things and so displays His divine powers. 4

We invoke that resplendent Lord who bestows precious things on us; for we know the way of seeking his newest favour. May our intellect be guided by his divine radiance. 5

O gracious Lord, the one whom you help to give so that he gives to others, gets from you abundance of wealth and prosperity. Through devotional effection, we invoke you, the resplendent and the bounteous Lord, as you love to hear the devotional songs. 6

Never are you fruitless, O resplendent Lord, never do you desert the worshipper; now, O bounteous, your liberality as the enlightened giver, is poured out ever more and more. 7

You overpower the violence by your might and silence the exploiter with his own weapons. When he spreads abroad the distant sky and props it up, then the first dweller on earth is born. 8

You (the bounteous and resplendent Lord) are that wealth personified which is coveted by every generous master of riches, and even by the humblest miser. May that wealth be brought directly close to you, the energetic devotee. 9

The zealous seers glorify you with sweet prayers and affectionate dedication; may the wealth and strength spread among us and so too the spiritual delight. 10

O resplendent self, as you enjoy the spiritual knowledge originated in the mind, and as you relish the melodious songs of the threefold-free-sages, so may you enjoy the nearness of the universal law. 1

O resplendent self, may you be delighted in the proximity of such seekers who are full of spiritual joy, swift and strong as the cosmic wind, full of tenfold happiness, helpers of their dependents, brilliant as sun-rays and straight-forward. 2

It is He, who appropriates these sacred hymns for Himself, who bravely accepts sweet devotion, for whom the all-pervading sun himself comes striding his three wide steps and helps Him in a friendly way. 3

O performer of hundreds of selfless deeds, you are bountiful to him, whose praises and oblations you accept delightfully; seeking renown, we invoke you as the milk-man invokes the cow who yields abundant milk. 4

He gives riches to us as our father. He is so powerful that He can make anyone sovereign at His will. May He, the strong and bounteous Lord, give us immense wealth, cows and horses. 5

O provider of comforts, whomsoever you bless, he obtains wealth and becomes prosperous; therefore, we call on the resplendent Lord of wealth, the performer of benevolent deeds, with our devotional songs. 6

O you, the sun-like resplendent Lord, you are never neglectful; you guard both types of men (good and bad) with your care. You are the source of all worldly pleasure; you are immortal. Your radiance is established in lofty heaven. 7

O resplendent bounteous Lord, worthy of invocations, may you hear our hymns and our invocations of praise, as of those whom you favour with your blessings and who are most wise. 8

We have been singing the songs since ancient times and chanting these prayers for the resplendent Lord. We loudly sing many Bṛhati verses in the ceremonies in which devotees have poured forth many hymns. 9

The resplendent Lord has heaped together vast stores of wealth and wisdom of both the worlds and of the solar region. The Lord is extremely delighted to hear brilliant, purifying and devotional prayers tuned with enlightenment. 10

We come to you, O bounteous resplendent Lord, the highest among the bounties, the strongest among the strong, the best destroyer of the strongholds of evils, the provider of worldly riches, and the lord of all treasures. 1

We glorify the Lord, who, increasing His strength day by day, provides long life, wisdom and hospitality. O performer of hundreds of noble deeds, arousing you by our offerings, we call you to come with your bay-horses (i.e.with your vital forces). 2

Let the stones pour forth the honey juice for us all, the drops of devotional elixir. These drops have been pressed and squeezed out by all our people who are at a distance or near us. 3

May you repel all enmities and keep them far away; let us all win treasures for ourselves. Even among the intellectuals, the exhilarating parts of the prayful verses are effective, where you, O Lord, saturate yourself with divine love. 4

May we fight the battle of life with the assurance of surely obtaining your help. With holy offerings and divine invocations, we worship you to fulfil our aspirations. 7

O Lord of vital forces, I go into prayer and into battle to obtain benefit with your aid. It is you, whom I make friendly, when I go seeking worldly gains and wisdom of and fight the opponents. 8

They approach the resplendent Lord with holy ceremonies for their protection. Surely their devotion delights you, just as you are pleased with the devotion of those who are possessors of worldly gains, and those who do not possess anything. May you, resplendent Lord, be delighted with us. 2

May all Nature's bounties come to us with one accord; let the cosmic forces provide comforts; and those, who punish for the offence, come near us to help, and may the vital principles listen to our call. 3

May the lord of divine forces, such as the sun, the omnipresent ether, and the divine speech, also seven rivers of the firmament, give ear unto my call. 4

O resplendent Lord, the destroyer of evil forces, best of all the bounteous forces, may you with your own precious gifts be our benefactor and companion for good. 5

O leader of heroic forces, the lord of battle, mighty in action, may you guide us in the conflict. May I be renowned like those who obtain their wishes by dedicated actions, by invocations, and by honouring Nature's forces. 6

Great indeed is the power of resplendent Lord. I clearly realise it and feel that we always obtain His rewards, O destroyer of usurpers. 1

May you have the blessings of Nature's bounties, O enlightened devotee. And may you, feeling young and ever young, step out vigorously like steeds. 4

Let the devotees extol the seven-yoked team of cosmic forces; great is the strength of the person, who is not yet fully grown. It seems that many dark-brown mares are rushing along the path so that no eye can follow them. 5

56

O destroyer of wickedness, your inexhaustible rewards are apparent. The fulness of your bounty is as broad as heaven. 1

The destroyer of wickedness, performer of sacred deeds has bestowed on me tens of thousands of rewards from his own undecaying treasure. 2

A hundred mules and donkeys, a hundred fleecy sheep, a hundred helpmates, besides garlands, have been awarded to me. 3

A well-adorned mare which is not one of the common horses of the herd has also been brought to be given as a gift to the performer of sacred works. 4

Then the fire-divine, with its resplendent flame, comes to shine as the sun shines in the sky. This divine fire, the bearer of the sacred offerings, comes with its cosmic chariot. 5

O sacred twin-divines, both of you come quickly with your cosmic chariot, endowed with your perennial wisdom. O ever-true divines, may you come with your mighty powers and accept our tributes in the afternoon (the third Savana) worship. 1

O ever-true twin-divines, the three and thirty—innumerable cosmic forces—witness your arrival before sunrise. O twin-divines, may you beaming with flames of fire-divine accept our elixir of devotional love. 2

O twin-divines, your performance has been worthy of veneration. Verily you are the showerer of blessings on the creatures of heaven, mid-region and earth. Also wonderful are your thousands of solar rays at the time of water-evaporation. For all these come here to accept our elixir of devotional love. 3

Who is he whom the wise priests bring when they arrange the offering of various forms? Who is employed as a learned priest? And what is the worshipper's knowledge regarding him? 1

The universal fire-divine is one though kindled in various ways. The sun is one pre-eminently shining over all; dawn is one that illuminates the firmament; one is that which manifests in all. 2

I invoke the one who is bright and radiant, rich in enlightenment, who possesses a comfortable chariot yoked with three wheels, that comes rolling lightly, and at whose yoking, the marvellous treasures are obtained. I invoke that person to participate in the enjoyment of the divine elixir. 3 59.

O lord of vitality and virtues, these offerings are presented to you as your share of our homage. At every worship or sacred act, you hasten to accept our oblations when you help the householder who pays homage to you. 1

O lord of vitality and virtues, the plants and waters gain their power, as you go beyond the path of the firmament. No godless man can afford to exist as your enemy. 2

O lord of vitality and virtues, true is that saying of your sage : "the seven sacred metres of speech distil the stream of honey." O lord of splendour, may you aid that pious man who unbewildered keeps you ever in his thoughts. 3

O lord of vitality and virtues, the seven sister streams (five senses, mind and intellect) who are blissful, life givers and bright like pure butter—pour out sweet and shining elixir. May you provide strength and wisdom to the offerer of the worship. 4

O lord of vitality and virtues, to our great pleasure, we declare these two bright ones, the real strength of the supreme Lord. O lords of splendour, help us, the offerers of shining elixir, through these three times seven (21) aids. 5

O lord of vitality and virtues, as I see you have been giving divine speech, wisdom, and fame to the sages. I would also see the places which the ancient sages prepare for themselves, as they spread the web of sacrifice with holy austerities. 6

O lord of vitality and virtues, grant to the devotees cheerfulness without pride, and abundance of wealth; may you grant us food and prosperity and lengthen out our days that we may see long life. 7

O adorable fire-divine, come here with your glorious virtues; we honour you as our invoking priest. Let the presented offerings anoint you, the chief sacrificer; to come and enshrine our hearts. 1

O most vital Lord, the source of strength, our offerings go to you, as if in ladles, to find your glory in the sacred cosmic sacrifice—the creation. We glorify the eternal fire-divine, the protector and the one with brandishing flames. 2

O adorable Lord, you are wise, the sage, the creator, and the showerer of benefits. O purifier, O bright one, you are the source of bliss, most adorable and worthy to be worshipped with hymns in all noble deeds by enlightened devotees. 3

O ever-young and eternal one, may you bring the loving divine powers to me, guileless, to accept my tributes; O granter of comforts, come to accept food oblations; and being set in the altar, rejoice with praises. 4

O adorable fire-divine, you are truthful, the seer and widely spread; O kindled refulgent lord, the devotees invoke you to come and bless all. 5

O fire-divine, you burn down the dry timber on the earth, so, O cherisher of our friends, may you burn him who injures us and whosoever evil-minded conspires to harm us. 7

Subject us not (as a prey) to strong mortal enemy, nor to the malevolent; O most youthful lord, guard us with your auspicious, unassailable and victorious protective measures. 8

O adorable Lord, protect us through the first, protect us through the second hymn. Protect us through three hymns, and through four, O lord of energy, O lord of riches. 9

May you preserve us from every violent demon and shield us in our battles of life. We approach you, our most intimate friend, and kinsman, to help us in our noble deeds and increase our strength to accomplish them. 10

O purifying Lord, bestow upon us excellent wealth, the augmenter of food. Bestow on us, O wealth-giver, that wealth of wisdom which all crave, and which is glorious, and which brings its own fame. 11

Wherewith we may overcome our adversities in the battle of life and destroy the designs of our wicked opponents, may you, O Lord of wealth and wisdom, bless us with food and quicken our thoughts so that we prosper. 12

The fire-divine brandishes his punitive powers as a bull who whets and tosses his horns; his sharp punitive jaws cannot be resisted. He is the son of strength, mighty-toothed. 13

O powerful fire-divine, when you spread out your teethlike flames on all sides, no one can resist them; may you make our oblations fruitful and grant us store of precious rewards. 14

You lie dormant within your mother's (womb) in the woods, which the mortal devotees kindle through attrition. Unweariedly you carry the offerings of the worshipper; thence you shine among Nature's bounties. 15

O fire-divine, the irresistible, now that we have made all preparations, let us invoke you. Having placed the oblation, let us invoke the cosmic fire-divine abiding in all places, the chief invoking priest of men. 17

O fire-divine, the worshipper pays homage to you by praises, chanted by the experienced priest in the ceremony celebrated with beautiful SAMAN hymns. May you of your own accord bring us such food and wealth of varied sorts, as are always within reach as aid to us. 18

O divine-fire, worthy of laudation, you are the guardian of men and destroyer of evil forces. You are powerful and 'never-absent' helper of the worshipper in his house, and you are the sustainer of heaven, ever-present there. 19

O lord of brilliant wealth and wisdom, let no evil enter us, and let no evil spirit torment our mind. O fire-divine, may you drive far away poverty and hunger beyond a pasture-measure (gavyuti), and chase away the strong demonic forces. 20

May the resplendent Lord come here and listen to both our hymns, whether recited or sung. May the mightiest supreme Lord with thought inclined to us be pleased to come near to cherish the elixir of devotion. 1

He is self-resplendent and powerful. The heaven and earth honour him as the showerer of benefits and supremely strong. He is unparalleled and undecaying in His might. He loves to accept our devotional offerings. 2

O resplendent Lord, rich in wealth and wisdom, may you shower strengthening food everywhere. O possessor of vital energies, we know you as unconquerable and the over-powerer in the fight. 3

O resplendent and bounteous lord of unbroken truth, let it be so as you in your wisdom decide to happen. May we, O lord of resolute mind, obtain food with your help; and may we without delay achieve highest wisdom, O Lord of justice. 4

O resplendent Lord of cosmic creation, may you fulfil our aspirations with all your possible assistance. We, O hero, obey your commands as you are bliss-giving, glorious, and granter of wealth and wisdom. 5

You are the increaser of our vital powers, and multiplier of our mental faculties. O embodiment of divine light, you are fountain of golden blessings; let no one impair the treasure laid up in you for me; may you grant me whatsoever I solicit from you. 6

Bounteous as you are, come, and get wealth to be distributed to your worshippers. O bounteous Lord, may you shower your bounty on a wisdom-seeker, and O resplendent Lord, shower your bounty on a vitality-seeker. 7

You keep hundreds and thousands of herds for granting; reciting long praises, we please you and bring you in our proximity for our protection, as you are the destroyer of strongholds of evils. 8

O resplendent Lord, performer of hundreds of selfless deeds, pride-personified, and with full confidence in self, whosoever, whether unskilled or skilled, offers devotion to you, his wishes are fulfilled by you. 9

With our prayers we invoke the resplendent Lord, the performer of hundreds of selfless deeds and the lord of riches, in case, He, the breaker down of strongholds of evils, equipped with strong measures to destroy the adversities, is prepared to hear my invocation. 10

We cannot worship Him with sinful mind, or miserly habits, or without faith in sacred fire-rituals. We assemble together to worship the resplendent Lord, the showerer of benefits with our pious deeds and make the Lord our true friend. 11

We approach our lord to help us in our struggles as He is powerful, the subduer of evils, the inviolate, to whom we are all indebted for prayers, and invincible. He, the best of charioteers, knows who is entitled for help and to whom should He extend His helping hand. 12

O resplendent Lord, may you give us security from the one whom we are afraid of. O bounteous Lord, be firm to give us your protections; drive away our enemies who try to harm us. 13

O Lord of wealth, you are the bestower of riches and home upon your worshipper; as such we invoke you with our devotional prayers, O bounteous resplendent Lord, lover of the sincere devotee. 14

The resplendent Lord is omniscient, all-knower, the destroyer of evils and most covetable adversities, the best protector. May He bless our son, also the last and middle ones, and keep watch from behind and before. 15

O resplendent Lord, may you protect us from the west, from the south, from the north, from the east and from every side. May He keep away far from us the supernatural calamities and far away the weapons of the demons. 16

Save us, O resplendent Lord, every today, every tomorrow and every succeeding day. O lord of the god, protect us, your praisers, in all days, by day and by night. 17

The bounteous Lord is the shatterer, the hero, rich in wealth and the conductor to victory. O performer of hundreds of noble deeds, both of your arms, which hold the weapon of justice, are also the showerers of blessings. 18

62

The singers of the sacred hymns magnify the might of the resplendent Lord with their recited hymns. May you present offering of praises to Him, as He enjoys it. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent Lord gives. 1

He alone, without a companion, and unlike any other divine power, surpasses men of yore. He excels in His strength all other beings. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent Lord gives. 2

The resplendent Lord is the swift giver of blessings, even with a stead unyoked. O resplendent Lord, your greatness displayed by your powers must be proclaimed. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent Lord gives. 3

O resplendent Lord, come hither; let us perform our sacred ceremonies to honour your might by which, O most mighty one, you will bless the devotee who strives for food and fame. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent supreme Lord gives. 4

The resplendent Lord makes the mind of that resolute devotee more resolute who worships Him with intense devotion, and constantly keeps praying with his reverent prayer. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent Lord gives. 5

The resplendent Lord, worthy of adoration, looks down with favour as a (thirsty) man looks down with eagerness on wells; and being well-pleased with a devotee in intense love with Him, He makes him His intimate friend. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent Lord gives. 6

O resplendent Lord, all Nature's bounties accept you as their superior in strength and wisdom. O Lord, adored by all, may you be the guardian of all the universe. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent Lord gives. 7

O resplendent Lord, I extol that might of yours, of highly coveted in sacred performances. You dispel darkness, O lord of cosmic sacrifice, by your strength. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent Lord gives. 8

The resplendent Lord confers division of Time on mankind, as a woman wins her lover of one mind. The Lord very well knows our deeds, so manifested for which He is renowned. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent Lord gives. 9

O resplendent bounteous Lord, rich in wisdom, those devotees who live under your refuge and comfort. greatly augment your glory since its manifestation and also speak high of your wisdom and achievements. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent Lord gives. 10

O destroyer of evils, O resolute and brave, may you and I be closely united for gaining wealth and bliss. Even malignant agrees with this (that your companionship gives this reward), O Lord of justice. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent Lord gives. 11

Let us extol the resplendent Lord as Truth and not Falsehood. Utter is the destruction of the infidel, and the regions of enlightenment are for the devotee. Blessed are the rewards that the resplendent Lord gives. 12

He (the resplendent Lord) is most ancient, beloved of all and is equipped with mighty powers. It is He at whose doors, the father of the family, the householder, makes his prayers effective and is honoured by Nature's bounties. 1

May the equipments, the press-stones etc. useful for the sacred ceremony, never foresake our Lord, the maker of celestial region, nor the praises and hymns which are to be chanted. 2

The wise resplendent self discovers the lost cows of wisdom and discloses it to the vital senses. This, his great achievement, must be extolled. 3

As in former times, so now too, the Self blesses tne worshipper and helps him, when he expresses his sincere faith. May He come among us auspicious for our protection during the devotional offerings. 4

Forthwith, O resplendent Lord, the priests offer oblation to the fire with the exclamation Svaha, and the reciters successively praise your deeds for the attainment of the wealth of kine. 5

The singers know that all the beneficial deeds of might, performed or yet to be performed, rest with the resplendent Lord, who is unharmful. 6

When praises are addressed to the resplendent Lord by people of five classes, He destroys their foes by His strength; He, the Lord, is the abode of the worshipper's. 7

This praise is verily yours, for you have accomplished these many deeds and sped the wheel on its way. 8

When sustenance of various kinds is distributed over by the resplendent Lord, the showerer of blessings, all men step out with wide strides since life is so dear to them. They receive their share as cattle receive corn. 9

Presenting our praise and desiring protection, may we, with you, O priest, obtain wealth and food to offer worship to the Lord, an associate of the vital principles. 10

True, O Hero, by our hymns we offer praise to you. You appear at the due time of worship wearing auspicious splendour. may we conquer our enemies with you as our ally. 11

May the cosmic forces of vitality and showering clouds come to us to rejoice in the battle-challenge of life, meant to destroy the devil of Nescience. We, the reciters and singers, invoke all Nature's bounties, along with the resplendent Lord at their head, to give us protection. 12

64

May our hymns please you; O lord of resolute will power, please display your bounty. May you drive off the infidels. 1

May you crush with your foot the niggard churls who offer no homage. You are powerful; there is none so powerful as you are. 2

You are the lord of these devotional prayers, either expressed or unexpressed. You are the sovereign king of all creation. 3

May you come hither from heaven to our dwelling, announcing to your men. You fill both, the heaven and the earth. 4

We invoke you at devotions offered by day and also invoke you by night; please fulfil our heart's desire. 6

Where is that showerer of benefits, ever-young, strong-necked and who bows to none? Who is that priest that worships Him? 7

Whose offerings does the Lord, the showerer, accept? Who is the person that knows the resplendent Lord? 8

O destroyer of evils, in what way do our devotional offerings or heroic praises honour you ? Who is your dearest and nearest in the land? 9

These devotional songs are offered to you among men by me, a mortal. May you come hither; come swiftly and be delighted. 10

These delightful feelings of ecstasy originate in the lake of our heart along the river of intellect and in the land of the sense organs. 11

Come today, O resplendent Lord; hasten and enjoy our devotional expressions for our prosperity, and for your own exhilaration when you successfully crush the foes. 12

O resplendent lord, when you are invoked by us, the leaders of the ceremonies, from the east, the west, the north, or the south, come here quickly with your speedy vital forces. 1

Whereas you rejoice the blissful heaven, full of divine light, or in the ocean-like expanse, or you are busy on the earth where sacrifices are performed,—2

—O resplendent Lord, supreme and vast, by my praises, you are invoked to come and drink the elixir of our devotional prayers with delight as a cow eats fodder. 3

Let your vital steeds yoked to your chariot, O resplendent Lord, O divine, bring you here with your splendours and majesty. 4

O resplendent Lord, the strong, the wielder of sovereignity, you are being invoked and praised; may you come here and accept our devotional elixir of praises. 5

We, who have made all preparations of offerings, and have arranged for dedicational prayers, are calling you to come and be enshrined in our hearts. 6

O resplendent Lord, you are the common Lord of all the worshippers; and as such we invoke you now. 7

The devotees have pressed for you with these stones, the sweet elixir of devotion. May you, O resplendent Lord, be pleased to accept it with delight. 8

O Lord, please ignore all other worshippers and come quickly to us and give us abundant food and fame. 9

May you worship the resplendent Lord for your protection against the miseries. He is full of might and the revealer of wealth. Invoke Him, singing loudly the Bṛhat-Saman in the ceremony where the devotional sentiments are cherished. I invoke Him as men invoke a beneficial master of a household. 1

He is the lord of resolute will power. when He is in the state of raputre of spiritual joy, even the powerful evil tendencies cannot withstand Him, nor the firm Nature's forces, nor mortal men can resist Him. He confers glorious wealth on him, who reverently praises Him, and offers devotion and songs. 2

He is the powerful lord, purifier and master of all vital forces; He is illustrious and splendrous like gold. He opens the closed gates of wisdom and destroys the devil of dark evil forces. 3

He scatters forth ample wealth, accumulated by many, to His devotees. The resplendent Self, possessor of adamant will power, handsome in appearance, lord of vital faculties, acts freely as He pleases when propitiated with admiration. 4

O resplendent Self, praised by all, we hasten to bring to you our devotion and appreciation, which you have been expecting to receive from your sincere devotees since ancient times. 5

May you, O possessor of adamant will power, invoked by all, O celestial being, O acceptor of devotional love, be present at our worship performed for your exhilaration. You are the giver of delightful wealth and wisdom to him who prays and offers sincere devotion to you. 6

Today, yesterday, and all the days, let the resolute will power accept our tribute to His full satisfaction. We offer Him our reverence. Let him now hasten here on hearing our admiration. 7

Even the wolf-like, wicked, the savage beast, that kills the sheep, is obedient to Him in many ways. O resplendent Lord, may you, graciously accepting our praises, come speedily to us with wondrous thoughts, and welcome our greetings. 8

What act of might is there, which now remains unaccomplished by the inner self? Who has not heard His glorious title and his fame? He is renowned to be destroyer of evils from His birth. 9

How great and resistless and how invincible and matchless is the power of this destroyer of evils? He, the self, by his energies excels and overpowers all the dishonest usurpers, who only see the bright today (but have dark days ahead). 10

O resplendent self, the destroyer of evils, invoked by all, we, your very constant worshippers, offer new hymns to you as a regular honorarium from us, O possessor of resolute will power. 11

O resplendent Self, doer of many great deeds, the devotees invoke you with manifold hopes for protections which you do offer. O mightiest Lord, bestower of comforts, hear my call and rejecting the offerings of our opponents, come to us to bless us. 12

O resplendent Self, we are verily yours, therefore, we, the worshippers, entirely depend on you. There is none but only you to show us favour, O bounteous divine power, invoked by all. 13

May you deliver us from this dire poverty, hunger and calumny. May you grant us your protection with your wondrous might and thought; O mightiest, only you know the right way. 14

O pious devotees, let your sincere devotion be offered only to the Lord; fear not, O dear ones, this darkening spirit shall depart and vanish of its own accord. 15

We solicit for protection these brave men, and the learned, who are kind to assist, in the fulfilment of our desires. 1

May the learned, the friendly, the virtuous, and the men of justice bear us across our distress as they know well how to assist. 2

To those learned men belongs wonderful wealth. They are worthy of all praise and help those who offer devotion and serve God. 3

You are great, O virtuous, O friendly and O men of justice; and great is your protection; we implore your protections. 4

O learned men, hasten to us before we die,—within our life-time; where are you, O hearers of our call? 5

May you graciously bless us with whatever wealth, whatever dwellings you can give to your devotees, who offer devotion and toil earnestly. 6

O godly learned men, great is (the crime) of the sinner; and treasure of happiness belongs to the sinless. I know you are void of sin. 7

Let not the snare bind us; may the resplendent Lord, subduer of all and renowned, release us from fetters for great acts. 8

O divines, ready to protect, molest us not with the destructive net of our wicked enemies. 9

O mighty mother Infinity, I call you to come to me; may you be kind to assist in the fulfilment of our desires. 10

They, who are at the top of men, invincible, benevolent and lord of self-sustained glory, abide by the accepted statutes. 13

O learned men, O mother Infinity, deliver us from the jaws of the ravening wolf as the thieves from captivity. 14

O learned men, let this snare, let the malevolent design, turn away from us without injuring. 15

O bounteous glorious men, we have enjoyed your help both now and in the days of old. 16

O wise divinities, keep us away from the host of sinners, working against us, so that we may live. 17

O learned men and mother Earth, may this latest protective measure release us from the bond of sin like a prisoner from his bonds. 18

O enlightened men, we have not enough strength to get rid of this snare of sin; may you graciously grant us your assistance. 19

O most powerful, resplendent lord, protector of the virtuous, we bring you here as if in a chariot to give us protection and well-being; you are the subduer of evil forces and rich in deeds. 1

You are rich in power, rich in actions, rich in knowledge and you have filled up everything with your comprehensive majesty. 2

You are supremely powerful, whose hands by virtue of your greatness grasp the all-pervading golden bolt of justice (that breaks all obstructions). 3

I invoke the (resplendent Lord) or that might which subdues all enemies and bows to none, and which rules over all mankind. He is followed by His men (the soldiers) and surrounded with chariots well-protected. 4

Men appeal to Him for aid in various ways in their struggles. I invoke Him for help, whose strength increases ever more and more. 5

I direct my praises to Him, and to Him alone, to the resplendent Lord, so that He may be pleased to accept devotions for my great gains; to Him, who is inspirer of success, who rules over all the sacred ceremonies performed at the start of all dedicated works. 7

You are so mighty that no mortal reaches the heights of your friendship, and none attains your might. 8

Protected by you, O Lord of justice, may we win ample wealth as your ally in battles of life, ever-bathing in the water and beholding the sun. 9

We adore you with sacrifices and with devotional songs, O resplendent Lord, a great lover of the devotional prayers, since you have been protecting me, the offerer of praises, in life-struggles. 10

O Lord of punitive justice, your friendship is sweet; sweet too is your liberality. Men must devote to dedicated actions in honour of you. 11

May you give to us, ourselves and to our children, ample wealth and spacious dwelling places. May you grant us our desires, so that we may live happily. 12

We solicit spacious path for our fellow-workers, for our cattle, for our chariot, for the successful performance of worship. 13

The six (two eyes, two ears and a pair of tongue and nose) come to me in pairs bearing pleasant gifts, in the exhilaration of the worldly joy. 14

I receive two straight-going steeds from the giver of the sense of sight, two bay-horses from the giver of the sense of hearing, and two red ones (roans) from the giver of the sense of smell and taste. 15

I receive two steeds with excellent chariots from the giver of the sense of sight; two horses with excellent reins from the giver of hearing and two horses with excellent ornaments from the giver of smell and taste. 16

With my other gifts I receive six steeds with their mares (the lingerings of sense-desires), from the pious giver of the sense organs, the son of the mental faculty. 17

Among these straight-going steeds, there is one matured roan-mare (the discriminating intellect) with excellent reins and whip. 18

O fellow sense organs (act in a way so that) not even the man who loves to blame may find a single fault in you. 19

69

May you present your sacrificial homage with the Trc or a three-fold song of praise to the bliss-giver Lord, the gladdener of brave men. May He come to bless you in your sacred works with divine wisdom and with plentifulness. 1

For your sake, I invoke you who are the creator of dawns, the giver of musical notes to the conjugating rivers, the protector of cows, whom none may kill. 2

These dappled kine yield milk in plenty as from a well; which is mixed with the medicinal elixir and offered three times a day in the fire-ritual; and the oblations rise high to the brilliant abode of the sun. 3

May you praise, as prescribed, with melodies the resplendent Lord, the son of truth, the guardian of wisdom and protector of the good. 4

Let the speedy brilliant vital divine forces bring Him down to our synod where we in concert sing devotional songs. 5

The cow-like divine speech has yielded the sweet milk of wisdom (i. e. the exhilarating elixir) for the resplendent Lord, the possessor of adamantine will power. This wisdom then gets assimilated in the proximity of heart. 6

I (the soul) and supreme Lord, in communion, mount high up to the realm of the spiritual light; then having drunk the draught of spiritual joy, let us be united and reach that summit where twenty-one divine powers are seated by. 7

O pious devotees, may you glorify the resplendent Lord and sing songs of His praise; may your children also sing laudations as warriors sing praises of strong forts. 8

The war-drum utters its sound; the leathern godha twangs; the tawny bow-string leaps to and fro; may this hymn be raised to reach the Lord. 9

When the streams of thoughts rush forth like the dappled cows unflinching and easy to be milked, seize them quickly and mix them with the elixir of spiritual devotion and offer the drink to the resplendent self for enjoyment. 10

The soul drinks this divine elixir; all the divine powers drink it with delight; let our virtuous mind taste it with joy, and may our pious seekers appreciate it as the mother cows love their calves. 11

O blissful Lord, you are full of divine light; the seven streams of sense organs keep themselves flowing into your palate as it were a pipe with wide mouth. 12

It is he (the self) who directs his well-harnessed prancing vital faculties for his well-being. He, the swift guide, a deliverer of blessings, comparable only to Himself, is delivered from mortal worries. 13

The mighty self verily overpowers his adversaries. He is lovable and far-abiding. He cleaves the clouds by his thundering voice. 14

Like a young boy, He mounts His splendid chariot and prepares for His father and mother (earth and heaven) the great deer-like multipurposeful clouds. 15

O lord of your home, handsome-jawed, may you ascend your heavenly golden chariot which is bright, thousand-footed, sinless and auspiciously moving, and let both of us meet there and enjoy. 16

Pious devotees, presenting praises, worship the self-resplendent Lord with reverence, so that they may obtain His well-stored wealth and wisdom at the right time, when vital faculties bring him on his way. 17

The wise devotee (having purified themselves with all the disciplines) have reached their original abode of divines. They have made all the preparations for the dedicated service, such as spreading the grass and placing the offerings. (This constitutes the ritual aspect; on the spiritual side, the discipline is of purification, contemplation and the enjoyment of final bliss). 18

I praise that pre-eminent Lord of resplendence who is the sovereign ruler of mankind, who moves unrestrained in his cosmic chariots, the vanquisher of all adversities and the destroyer of evils. 1

Pay homage to the Lord of resplendence, the wielder of the bolt of punitive justice for obtaining protection, for He is the upholder of twofold might; He holds in his hand the splendid bolt of thunder which is as great as the sun in heaven. 2

None can attain Him by deeds, or by performing rituals who is the giver of fresh strength to all, praised by all, great, unconquered, dynamic, ever-daring and extremely strong. 3

I laud Him who is not to be withstood, who is mighty and the conqueror of adversities. When he was manifested, the strong rushing rays of light greeted Him and the heavens and the earths sent their loud voices out to praise Him. 4

O Lord of resplendence, were there a hundred heavens or a hundred earths—not even a thousand suns could be equal to you at your manifestation nor both the worlds of heaven and earth could be equal to your splendour. 5

O mightiest showerer of blessings, you have overwhelmed everyone with your vast bountiful power. O bounteous, the wielder of thunder arm, O possessor of adamantine will power, may you, with your wonderful protective measures, lead us successful to the enemies' enclosure full of kine. 6

O eternally long-lived Lord of resplendence, the mortal who does not pay homage to you as the sole adorable deity, shall not get his food, nor the one flourish who does not praise the lord who yokes to his cosmic car a pair of variegated horses and a pair of bay steeds. 7

Great priests worship that resplendent Lord who is propitiated by sacrificial homage and who is to be invoked in the shallows of land and in the depths of oceans and who is to be invoked in battles. 8

O brave, the giver of dwellings, raise us up to enjoy abundant food; raise us up, O bounteous Lord for abundant wealth; raise us up, Lord of resplendence for abundant fame. 9

O Lord of resplendence, you delight in offerings. You trample down your slanderers. O possessor of vast wealth, give us shelter under your vital parts and strike down the infidel with your blows. 10

May your friend, the cloud, hurl that infidel down from heaven who differs from us in rites and rituals, is inhuman, who does not observe fire-sacrificials, and who does not show reverence to Nature's bounties. 11

O most powerful resplendent Lord, loving us may you please take these gifts of wealth and cattle in your hand as grains of corn, and give us. Please give us the same second time and repeatedly with the same favour. 12

O my companions, give good heed to the worship, for, otherwise, how can we worthily pronounce the praise of the Lord, the destroyer, who is the recompenser of enemies and the sender of rewards and who is unvanquished. 13

O resplendent Lord, the common object of our worship, you are praised by many austere sages, for, it is you, the destroyer of foes who thus gives calves, one by one, in succession to your worshippers. 14

May the bounteous Lord, taking them by the ears, take away the cows with their calves from the clutches of their enemies just as an owner leads a goat to a drinking pond. 15

O adoreble Lord, may you protect us by your greatness against all malignity and hate of mortal man. 1

O (fire-divine), loving by nature, no human anger can harm you—you are the glory of the night. 2

O source of strength, auspicious in your glory, associated with Nature's bounties, give us wealth, coveted by all. 3

O adorable Lord, verily that worshipful mortal whom you protect, the malignities cannot obstruct his path of prosperity. 4

O wise Lord, the devotee whom you urge to attain wealth, verily becomes rich in cattle, through your assistance. 5

O adorable Lord, you give riches and brave children to the man who offers worship. May you lead us on to higher bliss. 6

Defend us, O all-knowing Lord; hand us not over to the malevolent and to the evil-hearted man. 7

O adorable Lord, let not the godless take away the wealth which you, the divine, have given, for you are the lord of all treasures. 8

O source of strength, the friend, the giver of dwellings, you give us, your worshippers, abundant treasures. 9

Let our hymns come near the consuming flames, beauteous and bright. Let our devotion and oblations come for protection near him who is rich in wealth and rich in praise. 10

(Our invocations are) to the all-knowing fire-divine who is the source of strength, the giver of all desirable good things, who is doubly immortal amongst mortals (since it is perpetually alive) and who is supremely exhilarating ministrant-priest in the house. 11

(O worshippers), I praise fire-divine for the inauguration of your divine offering at the time of worship. The fire-divine is first in reverence amongst Nature's bounties at our rites; I praise the fire-divine when enemies approach and I praise the same for the procurement of land. 12

May the fire-divine in his friendship give us food, as he is the lord of all desirable things; we solicit abundance for our sons and grandsons from fire-divine, who is also the giver of dwellings and the protector of our bodies. 13

Ṣolicit with your hymns for protection the adorable fire-divine whose bright and consuming flames are spread all over. Praise the same for wealth, O much-renowned worshipper; the other devotees are praising that far-famed one on their own behalf. May you recommend to the same fire-divine for a house to me, his devotee. 14

We praise the adorable Lord so that He may keep off our enemies and their malignities; we praise the Lord so that He may give us peace and bliss. May He be worshipped well as the giver of cottage to the seers. He is verily the protector of all men. 15

May you present oblations. He has come and let the head priest (adhvaryu), who is well-skilled in devotional works, once again present offerings. 1

The invoker (the hotṛ) sits down by the side hot flame, rejoicing in his friendship towards the head priest. 2

For the sake of the offerer, they (the priests) thoughtfully place the fire in the forefront, and arouse it by prayers, while it sleeps. 3

The fire-divine, giver of food, scorches the vast bow of the firmament. He mounts the waters; and with his tongue-like flames he strikes the clouds. 4

Roaming like a calf, the bright-shining fire-divine finds none to fetter him and seeks a chanter to recite the praises. 5

And as soon as the great strong harness of his steeds and the traces of his chariot are seen—6

—the seven milk a single cow, of whom the two direct the other five to work on the resounding shore of the river. 7

Entreated by the ten fingers of the worshipper, the Lord of resplendence urges the clouds to fall from heaven with His threefold measure from the sky. 8

The newly-kindled flame fed on three materials (milk preparations, herbs and foodgrains), proceeds around the sacred fire; the priests annoint it with butter. 9

With reverence they pour out the inexhaustible cauldron, as it goes round and round from a height with its mouth below. 10

The reverent priests drawing near pour the superfluous butter into the large spoon, when they set the cauldron down. 11

Draw near, O cows, to the cauldron; the two mighty ones-heaven and earth. The sacrificial fire has been fed plentifully and is fruit-giving; both ears of the cauldron are golden. 12

Drop into the milked stream the admixture of sacred offering which reaches both heaven and earth; supply the offering of the liquids (mixture of Soma and milk) to the fire—the showerer of blessings. 13

They (the cows) know their own abiding place, as calves with their mothers, so they severally assemble with their kin. 14

They (the priests, out of the earthly oblations), consumed by flames, make sustaining food in heaven, for the fire-divine who devours it with his jaws, they minister all the food to the fire-divine as well as the resplendent lord (the sun). 15

The wind by means of the sun's seven rays milks the nourishing food and drink from the seven-stepped one. 16

O the Lord of light and plasma, I take the herbal juice when the sun is risen; it is a medicine to the sick. 17

He (the fire-divine), standing in the place chosen by me, the eager offerer, as a spot for presenting oblations, fills the sky on every side with his tongue-like blaze. 18

Rise, O twin-divines, on my behalf, as I prepare to perform benevolent works; may you yoke your car; let your protecting help be near us. 1

Come, O twin-divines, in your chariot which moves quicker than the twinkling of an eye. Let your protecting help be near us. 2

O twin-divines, you have cooled the fire (of worries) of the destitute by covering with ice (of refuge). Let your protecting help be near us. 3

Where are you? Whither are you gone ? Whither have you flown like hawks ? Let your protecting help be near us. 4

If this day, at any time or in some place, you listen to my invocation, let your protecting help be near us. 5

The twin-divines are the first to listen to our invocations; I approach for the closest friendship; let your protecting help be near us. 6

O twin-divines, you make a sheltering house for the destitute, let your protecting help be near us. 7

You ward off the fire from its fierceness for the destitute, while he adores you earnestly; let your protecting aid be near us. 8

Through his prayer, the seven-tongued dragon has obtained the flame-edge of fire (i. e. has come out of its basket); let your protecting aid be near us. 9

Come here, O lords of abundant wealth, listen to this invocation of mine. Let your protecting aid be near us. 10

Ignore us not with your thousands of herds of cattle and horses; let your protecting aid be near us. 15

The purple-tinted dawn has appeared, the mistress of the sacrifice spreads her light, let your protecting aid be near us. 16

O twin-divines, the splendidly-brilliant sun clears the darkness as the woodman with his axe a tree; let your protecting help be near us. 17

O bold (poet) entangled by the black band (of the basket), break through it as through a fort; let your protecting aid be near us. 18

O adorable Lord, desirous of strength and food, we glorify you with hymns for the attainment of happiness. You are dear and familiar friend and dear like the guest in every home. 1

(The fire-divine) whom men, bearing oblations and clarified butter worship with songs of praise as a friend;—2

—worship him, who is much lauded and omniscient. The earnest praiser of his worshipper sends to heaven the oblations presented in the worship. 3

We have come to that most excellent fire-divine who is the mightiest destroyer of the wicked. He is the benefactor of men, in whose beams (of radiations), the seer adept in the divine lore waxes great. 4

He (the fire-divine) is immortal and all-knowing visible through the gloom of darkness, worthy of praise and worshipped with invocations and affection. 5

That fire-divine is He, whom these priestly men worship with oblations and offer devotion as if with uplifted ladles. 6

This new hymn has been made by us for you, O the blissful, the well-manifested, the one glorious in deeds, the unbewildered, the beautiful and O the one dear as guest of men. 7

O adorable Lord, may it be dear to you, most pleasant and most agreeable. May you, well praised by it, grow mightier. 8

May this hymn be the rich source of wealth, and splendid with splendours. May it make your glory more glorious in the battle with the foe. 9

O men, adore the bright fire-divine who goes like a horse and fills our chariots (with the spoils of battle); and who is the protector of the good, like the Lord of resplendence and by whose might you win over (your enemies) the praiseworthy stock of wealth and food. 10

O most vital fire-divine, purifier, listen to my prayer. The seer of secret lore has made you the generous giver (of food) by his praise. 11

The worshippers implore you to obtain nourishment. May you listen to them during the battle with the foe. 12

Summoned before the seer of the divine lore, the humbler of the pride of adversaries, I purify with my hands the extremities (i.e. the longings and lingerings) of the four (sense organs—eye, tongue, nose and ear), as men shave the long wool of rams. 13

75

O fire-divine, like a charioteer, yoke your divine-steeds,—i.e. the forces, to invite Nature's bounties and first be seated yourself as their invoker. 1

O fire-divine, you are profoundly skilful; call for us hitherward the cosmic forces and assure that all our wishes will be fulfilled, 2

—since, O most youthful, the source of strength; O invoked one (in sacrifice), you are truthful and worthy of worship. 3

O cosmic fire technician, as craftsmen bend the felly, so direct the sacrifice towards yourself at our general call. 5

Which strong exploiter shall we overthrow to win kine in combat with the help of the missile of this fire-divine ? 7

Let the company of Nature's bounties not fail us, like dawns that float away or like cows who leave the unfaithful. 8

Let not the sinful tyranny of any evil-minded adversary harm us and smite us as the waves overwhelm a ship. 9

O divine adorable Lord, men sing reverent praises for the attainment of strength; may you destroy the enemy by strength. 10

O adorable Lord, may you send us abundance of wealth to fulfil our aspirations. O provider of space, grant us abundant space to live. 11

Leave us not in this conflict as a bearer of load; snatch up the wealth of infidels and give it to us. 12

O adorable Lord, may your fear pursue someone else (not us) to terrify him, increase our vigorous strength in battle of life. 13

The adorable Lord protects especially that person who is reverent and hard toiling, and whose holy labour He accepts. 14

76

For the destruction of my adversities, I invoke now; the wise resplendent self,—the one that functions in association with vital breath and is the sovereign ruler of all by his might. 1

The resplendent self, in association of vital breath, cleaves into pieces the head of Nescience with his hundred-knotted bolt of adamantine will-power. 2

The resplendent self associated with vital breath rends the devil of Nescience asunder, and releases the obstructed thoughts of higher level (i.e. the waters from the firmament) to flow freely. 3

This is that resplendent Lord, by whom, in association with vital forces, the yonder heaven is conquered for quaffing the spiritual elixir. 4

We invoke with our praises the mighty resplendent Lord, who is associated with vital forces, and is the vigorous accepter of the sacred residue of the oblation. 5

With an eternal hymn, we invoke the resplendent Lord who is associated with vital forces and enjoys this spiritual elixir. 6

O resplendent Lord, showerer of blessings, performer of hundreds of selfless works, invoked by all, may you associated with vital forces enjoy the spiritual elixir. 7

O mighty thunderer, the resplendent Lord, an associate of vital forces, verily these delightful spiritual experiences, expressed with sacred hymns, and recited with faith and devotion are offered to you. 8

Drink, O resplendent Lord, joined with your friends, the vital forces, this elixir of spiritual joy, expressed on the recurring sacred days, and sharpen your bolt of justice with renewed vigour. 9

O resplendent Lord, with full expression of joy on your face, you enjoy the quaff of divine elixir, effused between the press-stones. 10

Both the heaven and earth shudder when you, O the resplendent Lord, uttering your fearful roar, crush down the infidel. 11

I make this sacrificial hymn, rising through eight steps (through eight cardinal directions), and finally it takes the ninth one (the sun in the Zenith). This is still less than the dimensions of the resplendent Lord. 12

As soon as born (at the sun-rise), he (the sun-divine), the performer of hundred selfless works, asks his mother : who are the mighty powers, who are the renowned? 1

His strong mother answered—O son, the conceit and the wicked are your two opponents in the society; may they be vanquished by you. 2

The destroyer of wicked-forces (the resplendent Lord) crushes both of them as spokes are hammered into naves of a chariot wheel. Then. the vanquisher of enemies swells in vigour. 3

Then the resplendent Lord (the sun-divine), at one draught drinks the contents of thirty lakes, full of divine elixir. 4

The resplendent sun pierces the clouds' vacant regions of space for the prosperity of wise sages. 5

The resplendent sun from the mountains shoots down with his far-stretched arrow and thereby causes to ripen the paddy. 6

That single shaft of yours, O sun, which you have made your faithful friend, is hundred-pointed, and thousand-feathered. 7

May you, O mighty and firm in battle since your birth, bring wealth for sustenance to us who are your praisers'—to our men and women. 8

Unharmed by anyone, He brings low the wrath of mortals and can never be deceived; ere anyone reproches him, he humbles him down. 6

The heart of the lover of spiritual joy is always full by the praises of the devotee. He is the slayer of the all-shrouding darkness. 7

O cherisher of noble deeds, all the riches are combined in you and precious things and all unblemished gifts are easy for you to bestow. 8

All my hopes, seeking corn, kine and gold and my craves for possessing horses hasten towards you alone. 9

O resplendent Lord, I grasp in my hand my sickle with a prayer to you. May you fill (up my bags), O bounteous Lord, with your handful of barley already cut or piled up. 10

79

Here is this blissful Lord, all-creating, never restrained, all-conquering, producer of fruit, the seer and the wise; (may we pray Him) with a poem. 1

He covers the naked and heals them all who are sick. (By His grace), the blind sees and the crippled walks. 2

O love-divine, you offer us a wide defence against hatred of alien that wastes and weakens us. 3

O truth-seeker, by your wisdom and skill, driveaw ay the enmity of our oppressor whether he is on earth or in the sky. 4

The implorers beg for wealth, and they depend on the bounty of the liberal giver. By your grace, men satisfy the desires of the thirsty. 5

May he recover whatever is lost of him, and may (the Lord) inspire the pious man, and lengthen out his remaining life. 6

O most gracious blissful Lord, conferring tender love, void of pride in your achievements, and never failing, please dwell auspiciously in our hearts. 7

O blissful Lord, cause us not to tremble, frighten us not; O king, please injure not our sentiments with your wrath. 8

When in my house, I see the wicked enemies of Nature's bounties, then O king, drive away those who hate us,—O showerer ol blessings, drive away those who wish to harm us. 9

Truly, O resplendent Lord, performer of hundreds of self-less tasks, I know no other bestower of happiness; may you be pleased to be gracious unto us. 1

O resplendent Lord, the invulnerable, you have always been helping us to win the battle of life; may you bless us to be happy. 2

What now? You are as if the prompter of the worshipper and guardian of the faithful. Will you not strengthen us, O resplendent Lord? 3

O resplendent Lord, may you help our chariot on; though now left behind, set it in the front, O Lord of adamantine will power. 4

Hallo, O Lord, why do you sit at ease? Make our chariot the first; and bring the fame of victory near. 5

Protect our victory-seeking chariot; everything is easy for you to do; so make us finely victorious. 6

O resplendent Lord, be firm; you are strong as a fort; O the repeller of adversities, this our timely auspicious homage comes to you. 7

Let not reproach reach us; far off is the goal; stored is the wealth (obtained from the enemies); may the enemies be excluded. 8

May you assume your fourth sacrificial name, the sacrificial (the yajniya or somayaji); we long for it; surely then you would be leading us as our protector. 9

We know, you are the achiever of many great deeds, the bestower of many gifts, the lord of ample wealth, and vast in measure for the ample protections you give. 2

O victorious lord, when you wish to give, neither divines nor men can refrain you, just as it becomes difficult to face a fearful bull. 3

Hasten hither; let us glorify the resplendent Lord, the possessor of wealth and the self-sovereign. Let none harm us by his wealth. 4

O ever youthful divine, protect us, your offerers, hear our songs and yourself take care of our children. 3

O fire divine, O adorable, the Lord of vital forces, the son of energy, with what hymns shall I adore you, praise you, for your venerable pride? 4

O child of strength, tell me with what offering of the worshipper shall we present to you with devoted mind and what prayer shall I now speak to you? 5

O Lord, be it so that our songs, as rewards, bring to us happy habitations, abundant wealth and food. 6

O Lord of the house (or universe), tell me, whose offerings and songs delight you the most and whose prayers inspire you to grant us the wealth of wisdom. 7

They keep him bright in their houses, the one who is renowned for glorious deeds, who is mighty and champion in the battles of life. 8

Both of you, the wondrous, physicians, source of happiness and the object of the tributes of skilled sages. The family-head invokes you for the sake of his son—may you not severe our friendship, please come and set me free. 1

How shall we praise you now who is un-attentive? You have been giving him wisdom for the attainment of excellent wealth. The family-head invokes you for the sake of his son,—may you not severe our friendship; please come and set me free. 2

O twin-divines, possessors of great wealth, you have been giving to our posterity this prosperity for their full progress. The family-head invokes you for the sake of his son, may you not severe our friendship; please come and set me free. 3

We summon that brave leader to our protection, who is the possessor of bliss, and enjoyer of wealth. Though he dwells far away, we call him to help us. His gracious favour, like that of a father, is most sweet. May you not severe our friendship; please come and set me free. 4

In accordance to eternal order, the divine sun extinguishes himself (in the evening), toils and spreads far and wide the horns of eternal order (in the morning). The eternal order quells even the mighty assailants. May you not severe our friendships, please come and set me free. 5

O twin-divines, your praises filled with splendour as a well is filled with water in time of rain; come like fountain to pour the stream. The sweet elixir of devotion is effused; come and relish it like two wild bulls (Gaura) at a pool. 1

Drink, O twin-divines and drink the exhilarating drops of devotional love. Be seated yourselves, O leaders, in the sacred hearts of devotees and with joyful heart accept it in the house of the worshipper. May you preserve his life by means of wealth. 2

The dear worshippers invoke you to come with all your protective measures; come in the early morning to the dwelling of the offerer who has completed all preparations like clipping of sacred grass to worship you (at the fire-ritual). 3

O twin-divines accept the exhilarating love, sit down with your radiant glow on the sacred seat. Magnified by our praises may you come from heaven to our sacred works as two wild bulls to a pool. 4

Come, O twin-divines, full of splendour with your shining cosmic forces, riding in golden chariots. You are lords of good fortune and upholders of truth. May you accept our loving devotion.

We, your wise praisers, invoke you for obtaining strengthening food. So wondrous, fair and famed for great deeds, O twin-divines, when you hear our praises, come to us. 6

We offer love and praise with our hymns, as cows low to their calf in the stalls; we invoke that glorious resplendent Lord, the subduer of evil spirits, who delights in accepting the beverage of loving devotion. 1

We solicit the radiant, bounteous giver, surrounded by powers like a mountain by clouds, the supporter of all and swift to obtain wealth, rich in cattle, and multiplied by hundred and a thousand-fold. 2

The lofty and firm mountains cannot stop you, O resplendent Lord. Whatever wealth you wish to give to a worshipper, such as I, none can object you therein. 3

You are warrior by your strength, wisdom and wondrous deeds. In might you excel all. May this hymn, which the enlightened sages compose, attract you this way for their protection. 4

O resplendent Lord, by your might you extend beyond the limits of heaven; and the region of the earth cannot comprehend you. May you bring us food and drink. 5

None can refrain you from being a liberal giver to your devotee, O bounteous Lord. O most liberal giver listen to our praise so that we may win food and favour from you. 6

Priests sing to the Lord of resplendence, the most evil-destroying sacred hymn the Brhat-Saman, by which the upholders of truth generate divine ever-wakeful radiance for enlightenment. 1

The Lord of resplendence, the destroyer of unbelievers, drives away the malevolent and becomes glorious. O radiant one of mighty splendour, lord of the troops of vital forces, Nature's bounties are invoking you for your friendship. 2

O priest, may you utter forth the hymn to your great lord of resplendence. Let the performer of hundreds of self-less works, the slayer of shrouding Nescience, conquer the devil with his hundred-edged thunderbolt. 3

O daring and fearless (Lord of resplendence), there is abundance of food with you. Please bring it to us. Let the mother waters—the rain water—impetuously spread over the earth as you smite down the demon of shrouding clouds and conquer every one. 4

O bounteous Lord, there has been a time, when none existed prior to you, and you were born for the destruction of the shrouding darkness. At that time, you spread out far and wide this earth, and brought the heavens, the luminaries, into existence. 5

May the resplendent Lord who must be invoked in all the struggles of life accept our hymns and our libations. He is the powerful destroyer of the shrouding darkness, and therefore, is worthy of praise. 1

You are the best of all in giving bounteous gifts. You are truthful and lordly in your acts. We solicit blessings worthy of you, O lord of vast riches and mighty source of strength. 2

O resplendent Lord, you are the object of these hymns. The unexaggerated praises are offered to you by us. O lord of vital faculties accept these fitting hymns, which we have thought out for you. 3

A maiden going to the stream of water, finds a soma herb in the path; as she carries it home she says, I will press it for the supreme Lord, I will press thee for the all-powerful Lord. 1

We wish to know you well, yet we know you not. O loving elixir, flow forth for the resplendent Lord, first slowly, then quickly. 3

May the Lord of resplendence repeatedly make us powerful. May he help us and work for us. May he repeatedly make us wealthier. May He unite me with my husband, who has been indifferent, unconcerned and unfriendly with me so far. 4

May you cause to grow all these three places, my father's bald head, his barren field and the part of my body below my waist. 5

May you make all these three bear a crop—the (barren) field of my father, my body and the (bald) head of my father. 6

Thrice, the resplendent Lord, the selfless worker of hundreds of deeds, cleansed the sinning woman, first having dragged her through the hole of a chariot (i.e. her body physically cleaned); then she has been passed through the hole of a cart, (i. e. her vital breathing complex cleaned) and lastly from the hole of the yoke (i.e. spiritually cleaned by the system of the Yoga). Her skin thus finally becomes resplendent like the sun. 7

May you sing the glory of that resplendent Lord, who accepts all your ablotions, who subdues all enemies, who is the performer of hundreds of selfless deeds, the most liberal of all men. 1

Proclaim that divine force as the resplendent supreme, who is invoked by all, praised by all and who is worthy of songs and renowned as eternal. 2

May the resplendent who causes all to rejoice, be the giver of abundant riches to us; may He, the mighty, bring riches to the devotee, who pray with humility. 3

The resplendent supreme, handsome and resolute, accepts the over-flowing elixir of love and dedication offered by enlightened devotees who are assiduously engaged in worship. 4

May you loudly praise that resplendent supreme that He may be delighted to accept our love. Verily it is this, which gives Him strength. 5

When the Lord is pleased to accept delightful prayers, He, through the strength of the divine love, conquers all things which have been created. 6

May He be brought hither for our protection, who is the resplendent supreme, the conqueror of many, who pervades even all our praises. 7

The warrior whom none oppose and none can over-throw, the accepter of the devotion, the leader whose deeds cannot be hindered. 8

O resplendent omniscient, worthy of our praise, who knowest all things, may you send us plentiful riches. May you help us with the wealth seized from enemies. 9

Come to us, O resplendent Lord from any place with food that gives hundred fold strength, a thousand fold strength. 10

O glorious Lord, the wielder of the bolt of justice, the cleaver of obstructions, may we, the possessor of wisdom, overpower evils in the battle of life by your vigour and wisdom. 11

O performer of selfless deeds, we try to greet you with our praises, as the herdsman tries to please the cattle by taking them to pasture. 12

O performer of hundreds of deeds, wielder of bolt of justice, all mortal behaviours follow the innate desires may all that we crave be attained. 13

O source of strength, all men who cherish their wishes come to you for fulfilment; O resplendent Lord, none can surpass you. 14

O showerer of blessings, protect us through your care, with your most bounteous and speedy and yet terrifying actions. 15

O resplendent, performer of hundreds of deeds, may you be pleased to rejoice us whilst you rejoice in that most glorious exhilaration of our loving devotion. 16

O resplendent Lord, verily your carouse which is most widely renowned is most destructive of your enemies but most renovating to your strength. 17

O wielder of bolt of justice, smiter of enemies, truthful drinker of the elixir of loving devotion, we know the value of the reward, given by you to all you faithful devotees. 18

Let the songs of praises expressed to the exhilarated be effectual on every side, resplendent Lord. May the poets sing the songs of praises. 19

Now when the Prayers are recited the resplendent Lord we invoke in Him all glories rest and in His domain all the seven senses rejoice. 20

In the three regions, Nature's bounties extend their cosmic sacrifice, that inspire sacrificial acts in the minds of men. Let our songs inspire these performances for prosperity. 21

Let the drops of divine love enter your heart, as the rivers enter sea, none surpasses you. 22

The resplendent Lord, the Showerer of blessings, everwakeful, you attain by your strength the drinking of this celestial juice which enters into thy heart and mind. 23

O resplendent Lord, dispeller of darkness, may the divine love be enough for your heart and mind. May the drops be enough for your numerous bodies. 24

The learned preceptors sing their hymns to receive sufficient vigour and wisdom. May the Lord of resplendence come to enshrine their hearts. 25

When our devotional prayers are presented, you are very substantially able to accept them—May they be enough with you to be given liberally to us. 26

O wielder of bolt of justice, may our praises reach you even from afar; may we come very close to you. 27

You verily love to overcome the wicked, you are a hero and firm, your mind is to be propitiated. 28

O Lord of great wealth, your offerings are pursued by all the worshippers; therefore may the resplendent Lord be also my ally. 29

Be not like a lazy priest, O Lord of nourishment; rejoice by drinking the elixir of divine love mixed with dedication. 30

O resplendent Lord let not the ill-designs threaten and obstruct us at night; let us crush them with your help. 31

With the resplendent Lord as our helper, let us answer those who envy us, for you are ours and we are yours. 32

O resplendent Lord, may your friends, the poets devoted to your service sing loudly your praise-songs, again and again. 33

O Sun, you ascend to meet the Lord, the showerer of blessings, the bountiful giver, famous for wealth and who is the benefactor of men; 1

and, who cleaves, by the strength of His arms, the ninety-nine i.e. innumerable, strongholds of evil forces, and is the dispeller of the devil of ignorance and annihilator of the wicked. 2

May the resplendent Lord, our auspicious friend, milk for us, like a rich-streaming (cow), riches in horses, kine and barley. 3

Whatsoever, O sun, the destroyer of darkness, you have risen upon today as ever, it is all in your control. 4

O Lord of all, that is quite True, when at the height of your glory, you think, "I shall never die". This thought of yours is indeed true. 5

O resplendent, you go at once, unto all those sacred places where devotional elixir is effused, be they far or near. 6

We invigorate that great resplendent self, for overpowering strong evils; may He be a bounteous Showerer. 7

The Resplendent exists for giving (us blessings). He is the most mighty, established to enjoy the exhilarating divine love. He is lustrous, glorious and worthy of our devotional love. 8

The powerful resplendent is invincible and hastens to confer wealth on his worshippers. Strengthened by praises, He becomes formidable like thunderbolt, full of strength and unconquerable. 9

O resplendent, worthy of our priase, may you hymned by us, make our path plain even in the midst of difficulties; (hear us) bounteous Lord, since you love us. 10

You are the one whose commandments and Truthful domain can never be defied—neither by divine powers nor by men, howsoever irresistible. 11

O Lord of handsome appearance, the two divineṣ, heaven and earth, reverse your might which no one can resist. 12

It is you who deposits white milk in the black and the red and in the cows with spotted skins. 13

When in their state of misery, all the divine powers shrink in various directions, overpowered by the furious might of the wicked, the fear of the monster seizes them. 14

Then the resplendent supreme, the repeller of dark forces, conqueror of evils, puts forth His might. Verily He has n. enemies and is invincible. 15

The best evil-destroyer and the famous champion of mankind—I urge Him to grant munificence. 16

O Lord, bearing many names and praised by many, when you are present at our various sacred ceremonies, may we be endowed with keen intellect followed by virtuous actions. 17

May the destroyer of evils to whom many libations are offered, know our desires—may the bright and vigorous Lord hear our Praises. 18

O Showerer of blessings, with what type of help of yours you gladden us and with what type of wealth, you make your worshippers happy and prosperous? 19

O Showerer of blessings, the Lord of the fortune and the destroyer of evils, at whose hymn—accompanied libations, you come and rejoice to accept the loving devotion? 20

Rejoicing in your spirit, bring thousand-fold opulence to us and remember that you are the giver to your dedicated devotee. 21

These devotional elixirs with their consorts i. e. waters lovingly to be enjoyed. The exhilarating food or the elixir spreads to waters. 22

The devotees i.e. the sense organs with a desire to fulfil their aspirations, invigorate the soul by their strength and vigour at the time of worship and there by bring the task to completion. 23

(Repitition of VIII 32-29) 24

O fire, these sweet oblations of medicinal herbs are ready for you and all the preparations are complete, may the resplendent Lord be invoked now for the benefit of worshippers. 25

May He give strength, His brilliant light and precious things to you, His worshipper and to His praising devotees who adore the Lord of resplendence. 26

O performer of hundreds of selfless actions, possessor of wondrous strength I offer you all the praises; O resplendent Lord, be gracious to your worshippers. 27

Bearing the loving devotion of heart, we invoke you the mightiest repeller of evils; for O resplendent Lord, you have been kind to us. 30

O Lord of rapturous joy come with vital vigour to our expressed devotion, come with your vital faculties to our place of worship. 31

O resplendent Lord, the dispeller of darkness, your power is known in a two fold way. May you come with your vital divines to our effused libation. 32

O slayer of evil minded men, you are the acceptor of these sweet prayers. Come with your vigour to our effused libation. 33

May the Lord of respledence give us the bounteous enlightened person to partake of our sacred viands. May He, the mighty, give us physical strength. 34

The cow (Firmament), the famous mother of the wealthy rain shedding clouds—she pours her milk. She is worthy of all honour, who yokes (the two mares) to their cosmic chariots. 1

She is the one in whose bosom all Nature's bounties maintain rest and the sun and moon move in peace to maintain their ever-lasting laws. 2

Therefore all our priests in their worship always sing the glory of vital principles that they may drink the divine elixir. 3

This elixir is effused by us. Let the self-resplendent twin-divines and vital principles gladly accept it. 4

May the sun, the cosmic order and the Ocean accept the elixir, purified by the strainer, abiding in three places and granting posterity. 5

The sun also is eager in the morning to accept this effused elixir mixed with the milk of love, as a Priest. 6

When shall the divine sages gleam and shine like waters across the sky? When shall the vital principles, pure in vigour, destroyers of adversities, come to bless our offering? 7

Shall I to-day claim your Protection, O mighty divines, beautifully bright in yourselves? 8

For Him, the resplendent Lord, the dawns make their courses longer; for Him the nights utter pleasant voices; for Him the waters, the seven mothers and the seven rivers stand still and offer an easy passage for men to cross over. 1

By Him, the thrower of bolt, unassisted, the thrice-seven (21) ridges of the mountains are pierced as under. Neither divines nor any mortal can accomplish what He the Showerer does in his full grown vigour. 2

The resplendent's iron bolt of justice is grasped firmly in His hand; enormous strength rests in His arms. When He goes forth to battle His thoughts (in head) and speech (in mouth) are inspiring to every-one and His followers rush near to hear His commands. 3

I count you as the holiest of the holy and the over-thrower of the imperishable. I count you as the banner of warriors; and Showerer of blessings to men. 4

When O resplendent Lord you grasp in your arms thy pride-humbling thunderbolt to smite the dragon of evil clouds loudly roar and the cows loudly bellow. At that hour, the Brahmanas offer their worship to the Supreme Lord. 5

Let us praise that Lord of resplendence who made these Worlds and Creatures. All beings are indeed subsequent to Him. May we maintain friendship with supreme Lord by our hymns. Let us bring the Showerer of blessings near us by our praises. 6

All the divine forces, so far your friends, forsake you, and in fear fly away from the snort of dark evil forces. O resplendent, let your friendship with the vital principles continue as ever and may you conquer all adverse forces. 7

These three sixty vital principles have been worthy of respect and nourish your vigour like milch cows gathered together. We come to you, may you grant us a happy portion. We think that we produce strength in you by paying our homage. 8

Who can withstand your sharp weapon, the host of vital principles, and the thunderbolt of yours, O Lord of resplendence? The infidels are weaponless and they have been abondoned by godly men. Drive them away by your discus of straight-forward justice. 9

For obtaining wealth, offer melodious hymn to supreme Lord who is powerful, majestic, strong, mighty and most auspicious, sing many praises to the resplendent for He appreciates them immensely. For the sake of me, and for the sake of my child, may He instantly give ample wealth. 10

Send forth your Praise—songs to mighty resplendent who is borne by hymns as in a boat across the rivers. Bring that wealth for the sake of child through prayer of the Lord who is renowned and benevolent. May He instantly give ample wealth. 11

Perform those of your ceremonies that the resplẹdent Lord may accept. Praise Him to whom Praise belongs. Worship Him with your Service. O priest, adorn yourself, grieve not. Let Lord of respendence hear your praise. May He Quickly give ample wealth. 12

The swift-moving darkness of nescreves with ten thousand dark elements stood in the depths of celestial ocean. By His might resplendent Supreme (the Sun, the source of enlightenment) catches him shorting in the water; He, the benevolent to man, smites His malicious bands. 13

I see the swift-moving demon lurking in an inaccessible place, in the depths of the celestial ocean. I see the dark demon standing there as the sun in a cloud. I appeal to you, O Showerers; "Conquer him in battle". 14

Then the swift-moving one (the cloud) shining forth assumed his own body in the bosom of the celestial Ocean. The resplendent sun associated with the cosmic force of universe as his ally conquers the clouds of nescience that comes against him. 15

O resplendent, the lord of celestial light, with those enjoyable things, which you carry off from the wicked, may you prosper and along, O bounteous Lord, may they prosper who Praise you and who surrender their worldly gains at your feet. 1

Those horses, those cows, that imperishable wealth which you secure from infidels, bestow them on the faithful worshipper who offers loving devotion to you and is liberal to the priests, not on the niggard. 2

O resplendent, the one, who is careless and carelessly disregards divine powers and pays no homage to you – Let him lose his Precious Wealth by his own evil devices and then may you hide from him the wealth that gives prosperity. 3

O Lord of splendour, whether you are in the far-distant region or O the dispeller of darkness, whether you are near at hand—the worshipper longs to bring you, from thence by his hymns, as if speedily rushing on divine long-mained steeds. 4

Or whether you are in the brightness of heaven, or at the base of the sea, or whether, O mightiest dispeller of darkness, in some place on this earth, or in the firmament—come to us. 5

O Lord of resplendence, Cherisher of noble deeds of strength, now that our loving devotion is expressed, may you delight us with your wholesome food and ample wealth. 6

O Lord of resplendence, turn us not away but share in our joy; you are our Protector, you are our Kith and Kin; turn us not away. 7

Sit with us, O resplendent, at the place of worship to cherish the Sweetness of our benevolent deeds. O bounteous Lord, sit beside us and render great protection to your praiser. 8

O Thunderer, neither divine forces nor mortals equal you by their acts; you surpass all beings by your might; even the cosmic powers are not equal to you. 9

The assembled priests have roused the resplendent, the leader, the conqueror in all battles. They urge Him (through their hymns) to Shine. He is the mightiest in his acts, the destroyer of evil spirits, the terrible, the most powerful, the Stalwart and the furious. 10

The spiritually realized sages together Praise the resplendent that He may accept loving devotion. He is the lord of light and strength. He is observant of pious laws which enhance His strength and His protecting capacity. 11

At the first sight the realized sages bow to him, who is the circumference of the wheel. The priests worship with their praise the joy-bestowing Lord who is radiant and unharming. May you also, full of earnestness, whisper in his ear your hymns. 12

Again and again I invoke the strong bounteous resplendent Lord, who alone really possesses the irresistible might. May he draw nigh through our songs. He, the best bestower of wealth and worthy of worship. May He, the thunderer, make all our pathways pleasant for us. 13

The resplendent Lord, the mightiest and refulgent, you verily know how to destroy those strongholds (of wickedness). By your strength, all the powers of the World tremble,—O thunderer, heaven and earth tremble with fear. 14

O Lord of resplendence, hero, assuming many forms, may your truth be my guard. Bear us, O most powerful, over our many sins as across waters. O radiant when will you honour us with covetable opulence which may be all-nourishing and manifold? 15

Sing a Saman hymn, a Bṛhat song to the mighty, the resplendent sage; to the performer of sacred deeds, to the all knowing one and the one who loves to receive sincere devotion. 1

Your are the conqueror, O resplendent; you give splendour to the Sun; you are the creator of all things, the lord of all the divine powers, and the mighty. 2

O resplendent, you pervade the luminous realm of the sky, illuminating heaven by your splendour, and the divine powers submissively solicit your friendship. 3

Come to us, O resplendent, O beloved, a great triumphant, the whom none can canceal and lord of heaven, vast as a mountain spread on all sides. 4

O truthful cherisher of noble deeds, you surpass heaven and earth; O resplendent you are the fasterer of him who prepares the libation. You are the lord of heaven. 5

O resplendent, you are the stormer of many hostile cities, the destroyer of the infidels, the sustainer of mankind, the lord of heaven. 6

O resplendent, lover of hymns, we sent our earnest praises to you as people sporting in a water pool (splash their friends) with handful water. 7

As a lake swell with the rivers, so our praises, O hero, O thunderer, augment you as you grow more and more day by day. 8

As the gathering solar rays proceed to the sun, so the vital principles clouds turn back to Lord of resplendence and by their power divide all his loftiest glories among those who have been or will be born; may we meditate on our share. 3

Praise him the bestower of wealth whose bounties are never evil; gifts of the Lord of resplendence are fortunate. He never fails in fulfilling the desires of His worshipper and always unhesitatingly gives boons. 4

O resplendent Lord, you in conflicts are the subduer of all opposing elements. You are the vanquisher of the wicked, as well as the progenitor. You are the destroyer of all enemies. O opposer, you beat down the opponents. 5

Heaven and earth follow your destructive forces as mothers to the child; since you smite the demon of nescience, all the hostile hosts shrink and faint at your wrath, O resplendent. 6

Summon hither for protection; Him who never grows old, who is the repeller of enemies – himself never repelled. The resplendent Lord is swift in victory a good guide, the best of Charioteers, unharmed of any, the augmenter of water. 7

We solicit for our protection, resplendent, the consecrator of others but himself consecrated by none, source of strength, possessing hundred fold protection; possessing hundred fold knowledge, judicious to all, rich in wealth and granter of treasuries. 8

I with my child come here before you along with all nature's bounties who follow behind me. O resplendent Lord when you keep my share of wealth for me, may you put forth your strength in my favour. 1

I offer the elixir of the exhilarating drink first to you, let the effused enjoyable ambrosia be placed within you; may you be a friend on my right hand, then shall you and I cast down our all adversities. 2

O my companions, eager to put a fight against one's own evils, may you fervently offer sincere praises to the resplendent Lord. Since His name is Truth, He is personified truth. Only the agnostic says, "There is no Lord Resplendent. Is there any who has ever seen him? Whom shall we praise?" 3

"Here I am, O worshipper, behold me here; in my greatness I surpass all that exists. The holy commandments magnify me by their laudations, rending with strength I rend the World's as under". 4

When the lovers of sacred laws approach me, while I sit alone across Nature's Splendour, then my mind within proclaims to my heart, "my friends with their children are calling and crying for me." 5

Verily all those your deeds; O bounteous Lord, are to be declared at prayer halls, which you have achieved for him who offers libations. Verily you open the gate of paradise for the austere sage and his kith and kin. 6

Now haste severally and individually forward; he, your opponent, is not here who stopped your way,—has not the Lord of resplendence let fall His thunderbolt in the very vitals of that evil your enemy? 7

Rushing swift with the speed of thought, he, the falcon, the bird of wisdom, passes through the iron fort; then having gone to heaven, he brings the ambrosia to the thunderer. 8

The thunderbolt of punitive justice lies in the midst of the firmament with the cosmic waters compassed round about; and the enemies flying in front of the battle, bring offerings of submission to it. 9

When the divine speech, the queen, the gladdener of the divine forces, is enshrined uttering things not to be comprehended, she milks drink and sustenance for the four quarters of the earth. But whither now does her best portion vanish? 10

The offerer of worship who succeeds in invoking the Light and Bliss for the attainment of his desires, in truth consecrates the oblation for the cosmic sacrifice. 1

Those two leaders (Light and Bliss) of cosmic forces, who are great in might, far-seeing, resplendent and most far-hearing, perform their deeds like two arms, by the help of the rays of the Sun. 2

O light and bliss, the one who hastens to appear before you, becomes the messenger of Nature's bounties; he wears an iron head and exults in his wealth. 3

He whom no man questions nor summons back, who waits not for dialogue—defend us today from him and from his encounter; defend us from his arms. 4

O rich in righteousness, sing to the Lord of light and to the ordainer, a reverential hymn produced in the worship hall; recite a propitiating poem to the Lord of Bliss; sing a hymn of praise to these radiant divine forces. 5

It is these who inspire one radiant and victory giving source of strength for the three regions; they are invincible and immortal, and survey all the abodes of mortal men. 6

O ever true divines, come hither with accordant mind to listen to my uplifted glorious praises and my rites; come to partake of my offerings. 7

O Lords of great Wealth, when we solicit your bounty, that wealth which demons cannot thwart, then, both of you O leaders of our ceremonies, directed and adored by enlightened preceptors come to us, furthering our most ancient and glorious praises. 8

Come, O Lord of Vitality, to our heaven reaching prayers with its beautiful hymns of praise. This bright elixir of devotion has been kept aside and poured out for you through the purifying strainer. 9

The ministrant priest comes by the straightest paths to realise divine experiences of spiritual joy. Then, O lord of the Vital World, may you have both the drinks, one the elixir of pure devotion and the other, which is mixed with the milk of dedicated actions. 10

Verily, you are great, O radiant sun; verily, you are great O eternal, the greatness of the great one, we adore; Verily you are great, O supreme God. 11

Verily, O Sun, you are great in fame; O divine, you are indeed mighty among the divine forces in might. You are the destroyer of the wicked and the preceptor. Your glory is wide-spread and unconquerable. 12

She (dawn) bending lowly downwards, clothed in red hues and rich in rays, is seen advancing with various tints to the ten regions spread out like arms. 13

Three kinds of manifested Nature's Creatures—move across our sight. The others enter around the cosmic glows. The mighty Lord (the Sun) stands within the Worlds; wind, the purifier embraces all the quarters of space. 14

O divine adorable Lord, every young, wise, Protector of the household, it is you who give abundant food to the worshipper. 1

O all-wise resplendent adorable Lord, may you bring Nature's bounties hither with our reverential hymn of praise. 2

O ever-youthful, with you as our ally and inspirer of wisdom, we overcome all hurdles for the attainment of food and vigour. 3

At our solemn rite, free from violence, I call to the fire-divine—the one wide-spreading, most abundant and mighty, for attaining courageous grandson (brave progeny). 7

May He stand by us as a creator and through His power shape us into an exemplary model and may we find glory through His art. 8

The fire-divine is supreme surpassing the glory of other Nature's bounties; may he come to us with abudance of food. 9

May you praise him who is the most glorious of all the ministrant priests. The fire-divine is foremost at all places of worship. 10

(May we praise the fire-divine) who is pure light, and pervades all, is the eldest, and shines in all homes; he is the swiftest to hear from far away. 11

O sage glorify him who wins the battle like a strong steed; and who like a friend conquers all over adversities. 12

The cosmic waters find their place in him for whom the triple uncovered, but unbound firmament is established. 14

Highly pleasant is the place of the supreme God who pours forth all desires with His inviolable protections; auspicious in His appearance like the Sun. 15

O fire-divine, blazing with radiance through our oblation of pure butter, bear our sacrifice to Nature's bounties and honour them. 16

Nature's bounties, as mothers, have borne you, O fire-divine, the seer, the immortal and the bearer of the oblation. 17

O all-wise fire-divine, the seer, the messenger, the most excellent, the bearer of the oblation, the enlightened sages enshrine you at the altar. 18

Neither Cow I have, nor axe with me for cutting the wood, inspite of it, I have come to you to offer my sincere devotion. 19

Most youthful fire-divine, whatsoever fuel that we offer to you, may you be pleased there-with. 20

Whatever timber the white ant has gnawed or whatever the emmet has infested—may it all be welcome to you as butter. 21

Let a man, when he kindles fire ritual, perform the ceremony with a devout mind; he kindles it with the guidance of priests. 22

Our laudations are offered to that adorable Lord to whom all our actions and prayers are dedicated, to the one who is manifest as the noblest and wisest, and is the furtherer of the works of pious men. 1

Fire-divine when invoked during the sunshine runs around the mother Earth with speed and force, proceeds to Nature's bounties, and finally takes his place at the summit of heaven. 2

Men tremble (on account of the uncertainty of success) while they incessantly devote to the sacred sacrifices, unmindful of that, may you continue to devoutly worship in the solemn rite the adorable Lord the bestower of thousands of blessings. 3

O fire-divine bestower of dwellings the mortal whom you wish to lead the opulence and who presents offering to you is rewarded to possess a son who is brave and reciter of hymns, and a lord of great wealth. 4

O Lord of vast wealth, he (the devotee) with his vigour wins wealth stored even in the strong-holds of enemy and gains unperishable fame. O Lord, in your divine protection we constantly obtain all our cherished treasures. 5

May our praises like the principal cups of the exhilarating elixir of devotion proceed to Him who is the invoker of Nature's bounties and who cheerfully distributes all wealth to men. 6

The liberal worshippers honour you with their songs as the steed harnessed to the chariot. O Lord of men, grant wealth to us, to our children and grand-children. 7

O Chanters, sing forth to the mighty adorable Lord who is most bounteous, observant of truth and radiant with His refulgentce. 8

The opulent, glorious and adorable Lord when worshipped and enkindled, pours fourth on his devotees abundance of food along-with progeny; may his ever-fresh favour continually come to us with all kinds of strength. 9

Praise, O singer of hymns, the adorable Lord, the dearest guest of our friends, and the controller of the cosmic chariot. 10

He is the explorer of treasurer open and concealed, and brings them hither. When He rushes to fight with evil, His power is hard to be checked like waves of rivers rushing down a declivity. 11

May none obstruct adorable lord, praised by all, from coming to us. He is dear as our guest and giver of dwellings. He is excellent invoker of Nature's bounties and skilled in cosmic sacrifice. 12

O adorable Lord, giver of dwellings, let not those be harmed who approach you in whatsoever manner with hymns of praise, may you become the envoy of the Worshipper who offers his libation and duly performs sacrificial acts and praises you. 13

O adorable Lord, friendly to vital powers, come with cosmic vitality to cherish our loving devotion; come to bless the praises virtuous devotee; delight yourself at our solemn rite. 14

NOTES ON BOOK No. 8

Hymn-41

For verse 2, see Nir.X.5.

2. Nabhakasya, नाभाकस्य, of the pain daspiser; See नभाकऽवत् VIII.40.4.

Sapta-svasa, seven sisters; see also VI.61.10 (सप्तस्वसा सप्तार्थात् पञ्चप्राणा मनोबुद्धिश्च स्वसेव यस्याः सा सरस्वती, सत्यावाणी)-Daya. On VI.61.10—The seven means: five vital breaths, mind and intellect; सप्तस्वसारम्—Nir. X. 5; also seven kinds of metre or speech: सप्तिभः वाग्भिः "I praise him who possesses seven sisters at the birth of rivers, and who belongs to the middle region, with noble speech, hymns of the manes, and panegyrics of Nabhaka at the same time. Let all others be killed." (गिरा गीत्यास्तुत्या, with speech, i.e. song or eulogy, पितॄणां च मन्मभिः, मननीयैः स्तोमैः, equal to the respectable hymns of the manes and the panegyrics of Nabhaka—नाभाकस्य प्रशस्तिभिः, at the same time Nabhaka was a seer, ऋषिर्नाभाको बभूव, who in his speech, called him one having seven sisters at the birth of these flowing rivers—यः स्यन्दमानानामासामुपोदये सप्तस्वसारमेनमाह वाग्भिः स मध्यम इति निरुच्यते—He, Varuna, is called one belonging to the middle region; अथैष एव भवति, now this is he himself, नभन्तामन्यके समे, let all others be killed. By all others is meant, who bear enmity to us, who are evil-minded, i.e. whose minds or whose thoughts are sinful,—मा भुवन्नन्यके सर्वे ये नो द्विषन्ति पापधियः पापसंकल्पाः — Nir. X. 5.

Nabhakasya, also means "of the sky covered with clouds"—मेघावृतस्याकाशस्य (नाभाकः नभते वधकर्मा – Nigh. II.19).

Pitrinam, पितॄणां, of the seasons (ऋतवो वै पितरः —SBr. II. 4.1.32. The colour of lighting (विद्युत्) at the beginning of the rainy season (month of asadha, आषाढ़) indicates the forth-coming season:

वाताय कपिला विद्युदातपायाति लोहिनी ।
कृष्णा सर्वविनाशाय दुर्भिक्षाय सिता भवेत् ॥

If the lighting is of yellow colour, it indicates the forth-coming storms; if of intense red colour, then of abnormal hot weather; if of the dark colour, then it is indicative of utter destruction; and if white colour, then the forth-coming famine, if of ordinary usual colour, it indicates favourable and auspicious healthy and conducive conditions. Mahabhasye. II.3.13).

Hymn-42

The hymns have two triplets; verses 1-3 are devoted to Varuna and 4-6 to Asvins. The Ṛsi is Arcanas or Nabhaka and the metre anustup.

For Varuna, see earlier notes; he has meted the measure of the earth; is a supreme monarch, he is wise guardian of ambrosia; with his reliance, one ascends in life the safe-bearing vessel to cross over all difficulties.

For Atri, Asvins and Nasatya, see earlier notes.

Hymn-43

For verse 31, see Nir. IV. 14.

Virupa Angirasa is the Ṛsi of the hymn and it is devoted to Agni and is in the Gayatri metre; Agni is the fire divine; He is the most adorable Lord, all-beholding; knows all that is born, the Jatavedas; he is able to consume vast forests with his smoke-bannered fires, borne by the wind, diversely spreading in the firmament. His station is in the waters, he clings to the plants, becomes their embryo and is re-born. One of the finest description of Agni is in this hymn.

3. Arokah-Iva, आरोकाःऽइव, like wild animals (आरोचमानाः पशव इव—Sayana).

Dat-bhih, with teeth (दत्ऽभिः दन्तैः—Sayana).

4. Vṛthak, वृथक्=पृथक् diversely. See Yv. XXXIII. 2, where पृथक्, is for वृथक्.

Vasannaye, वशान्नाय, for the eater of the marrow (वशान्नं यस्यासौ वशान्नः —Sayana).

Somaprsthaya, सोमपृष्ठाय= सोमघृत पृष्ठाय, on whose back the libation is poured; bears the herbal plants on his back. (ox, fat and Soma libation). (सोमपृष्ठाय सोम-पृष्ठो येन तस्मै=अग्नये—Daya. on Yv. XX. 78).

13. Bhrgu-vat, like Bhrgu, as by Bhrgu (Bhrgu=man of distinction (भृगव इति पदनाम—Nigh. V. 5) विद्यायाऽविद्याया भर्जका निवारकाः, the one who dispels ignorance by his enlightenment.—Daya. on I.143.4; I.127.7.

Manusvat, मनुष्वत्, by Manus; by intellectuals.

Angirasvat, अंगिरस्वत्, by men of vitality.

14. Agni, thou art killed by Agni, a sage by a sage, a saint by a saint and a friend by freind, See Ait. Br. I. 16 : "For thou, O Agni, by Agni, sage by the sage, good by the good," (he says); one is a sage, the other a sage; one is good, the other good. "Friend with friend thou art enkindled" (he says); he is his own friend in that Agni is Agni's (अग्ने अग्निना विप्रो विप्रेण सन्त्सतेति विप्र इतरो विप्र इतरः सन्नितरः सन्नितरः सखा सख्या समिध्यस इत्येष ह वा अस्य स्वः सखा । यदग्निरग्नेस्त मर्जयत सुकृतु पुरोयावान माजिष—Ait. Br. I. 16).

16. Rohit-asva, रोहिदश्व, driven as if on red horses (one who has red horses).

18. Angirastama, अंगिरस्तम, most vital among vital forces

19. Manisinah, मनीषिणः, intellectuals (मनस ईश्वराः —Sayana).

Dhibhih, with actions and thoughts (धीभि: कर्मभि: —Sayana).

Admasadyaya, for the attainment of food; for the furtherance of their property (अद्मसद्या अन्नस्य भजनाय—Sayana).

28. Sahaskrta, procured by mechanical strength; i.e. by the process of attrition (सहस्कृत: सहस्साबलेन कृतश्चासि—Sayana).

29. Dhasim, food (धासि अन्न हवि. —Sayana; Nigh. II. 7).

31. Siram pavaka-socisam, शीरंपावकशोचिषं —(Praise) Agni of purifying flames, i.e. of pure light (पावक दीप्तिम्), it rests through all (अनुशायिनमिति वा) or pervades all (आशिनमिति वा—Nir. IV. 14).

32. Sardhan, doing with speed, boldness of force (शर्धन् बलं कुर्वन्—Sayana; वेगं कुर्वन्—Venkata).

Hymn-44

The hymn is devoted to Agni, the Ṛsi is Virupa Angiras.

2. Suktani, सूक्तानि, Su+uktani, sweet spoken words.

5. Haryata (vocative), O propitious one. O 'amiable one; O

beloved (हर्यंत कामयमान—Sayana).

6. Ṛtvijam, the priest (ऋत्विजं ऋतौ यष्टव्यम्, i.e. one that is to be adored in due season; see I. 1. 1 , also ऋतुयष्टारं, i.e. one who offers in due season (Sayana on V. 22 2).

7. Kavikratum, him by whom the rites are performed (कविक्रतु क्रान्तकर्माणम्); the wise; possessing sharp intellect; omniscient (क्रान्तप्रज्ञ, सर्वज्ञ—Sayana on III. 2.4; III. 14. 7; I. 1.5; कविः सर्वज्ञा सकलविद्यायुक्ता क्रतुः प्रज्ञा कर्म क्रमदर्शनं वा यस्यतम्—Daya. on Yv IV. 25; अग्नि=भौतिकम् on III. 2.4; कवीनां विदुषां क्रतुः प्रज्ञाकर्म वा क्रतुवता यस्य स तम्—Daya. on III. 27. 12).

Kavi, कवि, wise. He is so called because his presence is desired (√कम्), or the word is derived from √कव्, to praise (कविः क्रान्तदर्शनो भवति कवतेर्वा—Nir. XII. 13, on V. 81.2).

9. Santya, O giver of good (सन्त्य भजनशील—Sayana); bestowing gifts, bountiful (only vocative in addressing Agni); may be derived from Sat. सत्.=benevolent, kind.

11. Risatah, those who injure (रीषतः=रिषतः हिंसकान्—Sayana) (रिष हिंसायाम्; रिषे=रेषणाय, हिंसकाय Nir. X. 45; cf. VII. 34. 17; V. 41.16, usually occuring with Ahirbudhnya

13. Urjah, ऊर्जः, food (usually energy, or fuel) (ऊर्जः अन्नस्य—Sayana; from ऊर्क=अन्न, Nigh. II.7)

Urjah-napatam, source of energy, son of food.

14. Agne, O fire of spirituality.

Barhisi, बर्हिषि यज्ञे; in the hearts.

Devaih, divine attributes.

16 Apam retansi, seeds of aquatic life, (अपां रेतांसि स्थावर जंगमात्मकानि भूतानि—Sayana); the seed of waters, the movable and immovable productions of the creative waters.

27. Stomaih, स्तोमैः praises (स्तोत्रः)

28. Santya, see note on verse 9. (सन्त्य भजनीय, adorable even phala-prada, फलप्रद, or giver of success).

सन्त्य (vocative)—I.15.12; 36.2; 45.5; 9;III. 21.3; V.51.3; VIII.19.26; 44 9; 28.

29. Adma-sat, seated at the oblations; see Adma-Sadyaya: VIII.43.19.

अद्मऽसदः — VI. 30.3

अद्मऽसदाम् — VII.83 7

अद्मऽसद्याय — VIII 43.19

अद्मऽसद्वा — VI. 4.4.

30 Kave, O wise (कवे क्रान्तकर्मन् !—Sayana).

Duritebhyah, prior to sins (or enemies), or misfortunes (दुरितेभ्यः पापेभ्यः).

Mrdhrebhyah, prior to assailants, (मृध्रेभ्यः हिंसकेभ्यः).

Hymn-45

For verses 1, 20 and 37, see Nir. VI. 14; III.21 and IV.2 respectively.

1. Anusak, आनुषक्, it is the name of a series in succession (आनुषग् इति नामानुपूर्वस्य । अनुषक्तं भवति —Nir. VI.14). Also आनुषक् आनुकूल्ये.

Strnanti barhih anusak, स्तृणन्ति बर्हिः आनुषक्, they spread the grass successively.

For Anusak, मानुषक्, see : I.13.5; I.52.14; 58.3;72.7; II.6.8; III.11.1; 41.2; IV.4.10; 7.2; 5.12.3; V.6.6; 10; 9.1; 16.2; 18 2; 21.2; 22.2; 26.8; VI.5.3; 48.4; VIII. 44.8 etc.

(मानुषक्=अनुकूलं, II.6.8; मनुकूलतया I.58.3; मानुकूल्ये VI.48.4—Daya.).

2. Prthuh svaruh, broad their sacred shaving पृथु: स्वरु: ; Svaru is not explained by Sayana; it is the first shaving or splinter from the sacrificial post—Wilson. See Katyayana, VI. 4.12; VI. 9.12.

स्वरु: —IV 6.3; VIII 45.2; स्वरूणां VII.35.7.

Svarum, the giver of heat; the sun (स्वरुं तापकमादित्यम् —Daya. On I.92.5; Svaruh = स्वरु: उपदेष्टा, the instructor, Daya. on IV.6.3; Svarunam, स्वरूणां = यज्ञशालास्तम्भशब्दानाम्—of the sound coming from the sacrificial post); स्वृ शब्दोपतापयो:—Unadi I 10 (स्वरु: - स्वर्यन्त उपतप्यन्ते प्राणिनोऽनेनेति स्वरु: वज्रं वा).

3. Ayuddhah, Unopposed powerless to combat (मयुद्ध: इत् प्रागयोद्धेव). See also I.32.6. (मयोद्धेव०).

5. Apsah na, like a stately elephant (अप्स: न दर्शनीयोगज इव—Sayana; apsah is also beautiful lightning. See Nir III.5 and V. 13 for अप्सस् (निरिणीते मप्स: —I.124.7; अप्स इति रूपनाम—Nigh III.7); displays her beauty like a smiling damsel).

Apsas, is a synonym of beauty, it is derived from the negative of √प्सा, to devour; it is not to be devoured, but to be gazed at, or to be made pervasive. It is for clear perception (Sakapuni). In "whatever forbidden food." apsas signifies something which is not to be eaten.

From apsas is also derived the word 'apsarah', one who possesses a beautiful person (Nir. V. 13).

Girih, गिरिः, cloud—Nigh. I.10.

7. Svasvayu, स्वश्वयुः, borne by excellent vital energies, desirous of gallant steeds (स्वश्वयुः कल्याणमश्वमिच्छन्—Sayana).

8. Vajrin, वज्रिन्, O strong and resolute.

13. Gayam, गयम्=गृहम् (गयं गृहमिवो अपद्रवेभ्यो रक्षकम्).

Adasurih, the miser, one who does not give alms (अदाशुरिः अदानशीलः —Sayana).

20. Rambhah, रम्भः and pinakam, पिनाकम्, are synonyms of staff. Rambhah, i.e. people grasp it: We grasped thee as decrepit people their staff (आ त्वा रम्भं न जिव्रयः ररम्भ). The sense is that we lean on thee as decrepit man on their staff (रम्भः पिनाकमिति दण्डस्य। रम्भ आरभन्त एनम्। आरभामहे त्वा जीर्णा इव दण्डम् —Nir. III.21).

24. Goparinasa, by sincere dedication; also by the Soma mixed with milk (गोपरीणसा गव्येन पयसा संमिश्रितेन सोमेन—Sayana).

Gaurah—Buffalo (Wilson); deer (गौर: मृग:, deer or a beast—Sayana).

26. Kadruvah, pertaining to Kadru,—the name of a Ṛsi; a sincere seeker; Kadru is also pitcher. Kadruvah word does not occur anywhere else in the Ṛgveda.

27. Yadau, यदौ, from Yadu, people toiling hard. See earlier notes on Yadu.

Turvase, तुर्वशे, from तुर्वश, Turvasa; see earlier notes; also intellectual people; active person keen to obtain the four fruits: dharma, artha, kama, and moksa.

Ahnavayyam, अह्नवाय्यम्, day to day miseries. Name of an enemy (Wilson; Sayana). The word does not occur anywhere else in the Ṛgveda. Macdonell and keith have taken no note of it. Also ahnu= he prevailed indisputable in battle.

Turvane, in the combat or battle (तुर्वणे संग्रामे—Sayana).

29. Ṛbhuksanam, ऋभुक्षणम्=महान्तम्, mighty; see earlier notes:

ऋभुक्षण: — VII.48.1: X.92.11; (vocative); IV.37.3; 5; 7; 8; VII.37.1; 2; VIII.7.9; 12; 20.2; X.93.7.

ऋभुक्षणम् — I.111.4; VIII. 45.9; 93.34; X. 74.5.

See also ऋभुक्षा: (Nigh. III.3; महन्नाम: Nir. IX. 3; king of the Ṛbhus).

Tugrya-Vrdham, तुग्र्यावृधम=तुग्र्यऽवृधम्,, augmenters of water (उदकस्य वर्धयितारम् –Sayana; तुग्र्या=water, Nigh. I 12).

30. Trisokaya for attaining three splendours; for the one with triple splendour (see also X.29.2); for trisoka or for people of three regions. (त्रिशोकाय त्रिशोकनामर्ष्यर्थम्—Sayana), Trisoka being the name of an ancient mythical Rsi (I.112.12; VIII.45.30; also Av. IV. 29.6). A Saman or chant, named after him is referred to in the Pancavimsa Brahmana (VIII.1)—Macdonell and Keith.

Also the one who has regrets for being involved in malicious qualities, actions and temperaments (त्रिषु दुष्ट गुणकर्मस्वभावेषु शोको यस्य विदुषः सः —Daya. on I.112.12).

Girim, cloud (गिरिं मेघम्—Nigh. I.10).

37. See Nir. IV 2. O men, what friend has said, "Unprovoked I have killed my friend? Who flies from us."=Here the word मर्या, marya, is synonym of man, or it may be a synonym of boundary (since boudary is settled by men). (मर्या इति मनुष्यनाम मर्यादाभिधानं वा स्यात् मर्यादा मर्यैरादीयते). Boundary is the line of division between two bounded places (मर्यादा मर्यादिनो विभागः).

Methati (मेथति) means to provoke (मेथतिराक्रोशकर्मा—Nir. IV.2).

Hymn–46

1. Tva-vatah vayam smasi. त्वाऽवतः वय स्मसि "We belong to one like thee; since none other is like Thee, we are Thine."

8. Nrbhih, from men from foes (नृभिः नृभ्यः शत्रुभ्यः —Sayana).

9. Taruta, the deliverer from enemies (तरुता शत्रूणां तारकः—Sayana).

12. Visve manusa, all men; all priests associated with men (विश्वे सर्वेष्वध्वर्यवादय: मानुषा मनुष्य सम्बन्धिन: —Sayana).

14. Vah—व:=यूयं=you all (Sayana); or for your sake (वो युष्माक हिताय—Sayana).

Vaco yatha. वचो यथा. in your words, or, i.e. in the Gayatri or Tristubh metre (वच: वाग्युष्मदीया यथा येन प्रकारेण प्रवर्त्तते गायत्र्या त्रिष्टुभा वा—Sayana).

15. Nunam-atha, नूनमथ: it is not नूनमद्य (नूनं+अद्य) as mistaken by Sayana.

16. Athyatha (अति+अथ); it is not अद्यापि or अप्यद्य as mistaken by Sayana.

17. Visva-manusam marutam iyaksasi, thou art worshipped of all men: thou showest favour to all men and the Maruts; or to the Maruts who are known to all men (cf VI. 49.4).

18. Ajmabhih, with streaming trains of clouds; along with vehemently flowing waters (अज्मभि: बलै: बलकरैरुदकै: —Sayana); ajman is also गमनम् cf. I 112.17; also sangrama=अज्म=combat, Nigh. II.17; cf. I.112.17)

19. Codayat mate, O impeller, O inspirer; O thou whose mind sends or brings wealth to this worshipper (चोदयन्मते । चोदयन्ती धनं प्रेरयन्ती मतिर्यस्य स:—Sayana). Also see V.8.6, where it is applied to Caksuh, eye: चक्षु चोदयन्मति, having the mind as its instigator.

20. Bhujyum purvyam (cf. VIII.22.2.), these are the two epithets applied to the chariot of the Asvins, Purvyam, going before in the battle and Bhujyum the preserver of all. (पूर्व्यं संग्रामेष्वग्रतो गन्तार; भुज्युम्—"भुज्पालने", सर्वस्व रक्षकम्—Sayana on VIII.22.2); also भुज्यु भोजयितारम्; पूर्व्यं प्रवृद्धम् —Sayana).

21. Ivat, ईवत् – गमनवत् गवादिलक्षणम्, such, so great.

Purtam adade. पूर्तं आदद, would receive this complete gift.

Vasah, वश:, god-depending: having reliance in God. (कामयमाना:— विद्वज्जन — Daya. on I.129.1)

Prthusravas, possessor of immense treasures; far-famed (in mythology, a king of this name).

The term is mentioned twice in connection with Vasa, वश— I.116.21; VIII.46.21. In the present verse, it refers to the generosity of पृथुश्रवस कानीता. For the episode, see the Sankhayana Srauta Sutra.

Asvyah, अश्व्य: = अश्वपुत्र:, if refers to vasa as the son of Asva. (See I.112 10; 116 21; VIII.8.20: 24.14: 46.21: 23; 50.9; X.40.7).

Kanite, loving Lord. The word occurs twice in this hymn also:

कानीतस्य — VIII.46.24.

कानीते —VIII.46 21

27. Aratve, अरत्वे for the courteous (the term occurs nowhere else in the Rgveda)

Akse, अक्षे, for the liberal

Nahuse, नहुषे, for men.

Sukrtvani, सुकृत्वनि, determined to perform noble deeds.

These names Aradva, Aksa, Nahusa, and Sukrtvan are regarded in mythology as either the officers of Pṛthusravas or other Kings.

सुकृत्वनि — VIII.46.27

सुकृत्वने — VIII.13.7

नहुषः — I.122.8; 10.11; VII.6.5; VIII.8.3; X.49.8; 80.6; 99.7

नहुषस्य — I.31.11; V.12.6

नहुषा — VI.26.7

नहुषे — VIII.46.27

नहुष्यस्य — X.63.1

नहुष्याणि — IX.88.2

नहुष्येभिः — IX.91.2

28. Asvesitam, inspired by vital energies (or horses) (अश्वेषित अश्वैः प्रापितम्—brought by horses—Sayana).

Rajesitam, रजेषितम्, brought by camels or mules (रजः शब्दनोष्ट्रो गर्दभो वोच्यते—Sayana; Venkata).

Sunesitam, शुनेषितम्, brought by dogs.

Ajma, food (अज्म अन्नम्—Sayana, Nigh. II.7).

Hymn-47

The Adityas, as well usas (उषस्, dawn) are the deities. Various self-luminary bodies in the celestial region are the Adityas; or different solar rays of the widest spectrum are the Adityas. The Adityas advert evils: they are giver of happiness, as birds spread their wings over their young. Their aids are void of arms. It is only through painful means that their favours are gained, but he whom Adityas visit gains riches without difficulty. (1—7), Aditi, the mother Infinity, the Prakrti is the mother of Mitra, Aryaman and Varuna (9) The Adityas give us cattle, milch kine and male offsprings (12).

Trita Aptya ought to be free from all evils (the evils of physical, mental and spiritual realms, tri, the three), the Adityas, and the usas help in eradicating these evils (13-16) Usas is invoked to get rid of evil dreams, ill-omened dreams (14-18).

Anehasah vah Utayah su utayo va utayah, this is the refrain of verses 1-18; your aids are void of harm; your aids are true aids (अनेहस: व: ऊतय सुऽऊतय: व: ऊतय:).

4. Visvasya gha it, विश्वस्य घ इत्, of every one (who does not offer sacrifice; सर्वस्याप्ययष्टु:—Sayana).

6. Parih-vrta it ana, परिहृवृता इत् अना, by painful means; by observing penance etc. (परपीडितेनैव तपो नियमादिना—Sayana).

Ana janah, the living man; the man that breathes (अनो प्राणयुक्ता जन: —Sayana); one endowed with life; cf. IV. 30.3. विश्वे च न इह् अना त्वा—Sayana—"Verily men succumb through the loss of wealth given by you"—Wilson.

Asha vah (आश व:), swiftly moving (आशव: शीघ्र गमना: According to the Pada-Patha आश and व: are separate terms, but Sayana in interpretation has combined into one मानव:).

7. Sa-prathah sarma, सप्रथ: शर्म=समान प्रथना: सर्वत: पृथुभूता वा शर्म सुखम्; You have given great (सप्रथ:) happiness (शर्म).

Tam tigmam, that fierce or harsh (तिग्मं तीक्ष्णं).

Tyajah, wrath, anger (त्यज: क्रोधनामैतत्—Sayana).

9. Revatah, (Nigh. II.13) wealthy; rich (रेवत: धनवत: —Sayana)

Aryamnah, अर्यम्ण:, of Aryaman; of the vital wind.

10. Tridhatuh, Three gunas; three elements; three-fold — the three, cold (शीत), heat (आतप) and moist or wet wind (वात), (See VI.67.2 in connection with वरूथ्यम्—शीतवातातपानां वारयितृ; also त्रिवरूथ—VIII.18.21— शीतातपवर्षाणां निवारकम्—Sayana). According to Dayananda we have: त्रिधातव: (1)—सत्व, रजस् तमस्, (V. 47.4) three elements; (2) अस्थि, मज्जा, वीर्य — Yv. XXI. 37). (bone, marrow and semen).

त्रिवरूथ: (three abodes)—1. शीत (cold), उष्ण (hot) and वर्षा (moisture)—(VI.46.9).

2. भूमि. (ground), अध: (underground), अन्तरिक्ष (midspace) (Yv. XXI.55).

3. उत्तम (best), मध्यम (middle), निकृष्ट (worst)— (VI.15.9).

4. आध्यात्मिक (spiritual), आधिदैविक (mental), and आधिभौतिक (physical) Yv. XV.1) pleasures.

5. Rains, winter and summer (V.4.8).

11. Sutirtham, secure destination (सुतीर्थं शोभनावतार प्रदेशम्—Sayana); secure place to land (घाट) by the side of river.

Spasah, स्पशः, visible, shore (स्पशः स्पष्टाः, स्थिताइत्यर्थः—Sayana); from √स्पश्, to see: As a man standing on the shore looks down on the water below or on someone in it (यथा कूलस्थः पुरुषोऽधोगतमुदकं जिज्ञासुस्तत्रस्थं मनुष्यं वा—Sayana).

12. Na avayai na upayai (न अवय्यै न उपय्यै), neither to threaten nor to assail us; nor to him who threatens or assails us. (अवयै हिंसितुं भवगच्छते, उपयै उपगच्छते—Sayana).

13. Trite aptye, त्रिते आप्त्ये, Trita Aptya was a deity dwelling in remote distance, and consequently evil was sought to be transferred to him (Av.XIX. 56.4)—Trite Aptye asmat are dadhatana, keep it far from us in Trita Aptya (Roth), are (आरे) means far or at a distance (आरे दूरे—Sayana).

14. Tritaya Aptyaya para vaha, त्रिताय आप्त्याय परा वह, keep it far away for Trita Aptya.

The Asvalayana Grhya Sutras prescribe the verses 14-15 to be recited after an unpleasant dream.

Trita-Aptya are the three accessible regions (physical, mental and spiritual) the three regions of self-consciousness in which dreams submerge and from which dreams again rise.

15. Niska, gold or gold ornament; niska, is also a gold coin. (4 Survarnas= 1 Niska). See:

निष्कऽग्रीव—V. 19.3

निष्कम् —II.33.10; VIII.47.15

निष्कान् —I.126.2.

निष्कग्रीव: —निष्क चतुस्सौवर्ण-प्रमितमाभूषणं ग्रीवायां यस्य स: —Daya. on V.19.3; निष्कं सुवर्णाऽऽभूषणम्—Daya. on II.33.10; निष्कान् सौवर्णान् अश्वान् तुरङ्गान्—Daya. on I.26.2)

16. Tad-annaya. let the eating of honey etc. perceived in a dream produce happiness as in a waking state (तदन्नाय। यदेवजागरावस्थायां भोजयत्वेन प्रसिद्ध मधुपायसादि स्वप्नेऽपि भोक्त्र इत्यर्थः —Sayana).

17 Kalam, कलाम्, parts (proper parts, heart etc. as fit to be cut to pieces)—The word occurs nowhere else in the Ṛgveda.

Safam, शफम्, hoof (or bones etc. as unfit). See Taittiriya Sam VI.I.10; here शफ = 1/8 of the value of a cow, and कला as very small portion in the sale and purchase of Soma or कला = 1/16 of the value of a cow. The word शफम् does not occur anywhere else in the Ṛgveda; though we have

शफऽआरुज: — X.44.9

Hymn-48

For verses 7 and 10, See Nir. 7 and VI.4 respectively.

The entire hymn is devoted to Soma; which is an ecstatic elixir of life, which man by his life's efforts oozes out in the Anandamaya and Vijnanamaya Kosas or the inner-most core of the body complex. This there becomes the sap of life. It creates love, thrill and appreciation for the Highest Self, His creativity, and His love.

The Soma, as the sap of life, is enjoyed by all gods (the sense-organs), including Indra, the individual self. It emanates from the Highest Self, (1-2); we become immortal when we drink Soma, (3); It becomes the bliss of our hearts (4); it delivers one from sickness (5); it kindles our life, and is spiritually exhilarating (6). King Soma prolongs our life (7). Soma blesses us for our welfare, (8) and is the guardian of our bodies (9). Soma has been placed within us (10). When the mighty Soma climbs into us, our life is prolonged and we get rid of all sickness (11). On its accounts, we the mortals become immortal (12). May be ever be dear to Soma (14). It nourishes us from all sides; may it guard us from behind and front (15).

2. Srausti-iva, like the swift one (श्रौष्टी । श्रुटीति क्षिप्रनाम । तत्सम्बन्धी श्रौष्टी । क्षिप्रगाम्यश्व: —Sayana); like the swift moving horse.

7. Ahani-iva vasarani—"may we with an active mind partake of thy pressed Soma, as if it were paternal property. O king Soma prolong our lives as the sun prolongs the summer days."

Days (वासराणि) are so called because they are of different courses (वासराणि वेसराणि विवासनानि गमनानीति वा), or they are bright, or they pass away.

9. Vasyah, best of all (वस्य: श्रेष्ठान्).

10. Rdudarena sakhya saceya, ऋदूदरेण सख्या सचेय, Rdu-udara means Soma; its inside (उदर) is soft, or it is soft inside the man. (ऋदूदर: सोम: । मृदूदर: । मृदूदरेष्विति वा—Nir. VI.4).

12,13. Pitarah, parents.

14. Nidrah, dreams (निद्र: स्वप्ना: —Sayana).

Visvaha, विश्वह्, always; all the days (विश्वह् सर्वेष्वप्यह:सु —Sayana).

Vayodhah, the giver of food (वयोधा: वयोऽधा: अन्नदाता—Sayana).

Hymns-49-59

The Valakhilya Hymns

The eleven hymns of the Eighth Mandala of the Rgveda from 49-59, are commonly known as the Valakhilyam, वालखिल्यम्. Their Rsis and Devatas are as follows:

Hymn	Rsi	Devata	No. of verses
49 (i)	Praskanva	Indra	10
50 (ii)	Pustiguh	Indra	10

51 (iii)	Srustiguh	Indra	10
52 (iv)	Ayuh	Indra	10
53 (v)	Medhyah	Indra	8
54 (vi)	Matarisvan	Indra (Visvedevah, 3, 4)	8
55 (vii)	Kṛsah	Praskanva —Danam	5
56 (viil)	Prsadhrah	Indra Agni-Surya, 5	5
57 (ix)	Medhyah	Asvinau	4
58 (x)	Medhyah	Visvedevah	3
59 (xi)	Suparnah	Indra-Varuna	7

All the ṛsis belong to the family of Kanva, and the total number of verses are 80. With the exception of the hymn 55 (which relates to the munificience of Praskanva), the devata of the first eight hymns is Indra; Indra-Varuna pair is of the hymn 59, Visvedevah of the hymn 58.

The Bṛhaddevata takes notice of only 8 hymns (VIII, 49-56); "Now the following (49-56) eight hymns by seers of ardent brilliance, are addressed to Indra; but the twenty-sixth Pragatha couplet here (VIII.54. 3-4) is addressed to Visvedevah. The last verse (प्रचेत्यग्नि:, 56.5) is to Agni, but the ending of this verse दिवि सूर्यो भरोचत is devoted to the Sun." The Bṛhaddevata makes no reference to the hymns 57-59; and hence according to certain authorities, the Valakhilya Hymns are only eight in number. This is in agreement with the Kashmir Khila collection, which (Chapter III. 1-14) only contains the first eight (VIII.49-56), introduced with the words वालखिल्या: परेऽष्टौ (II.19).

The Taittiriya Aranyaka recognizes the Valakhilyas along with the Vaikhanasas and Apam as follows: ये नखा:। ते वैखानसा:। ये वाला:, ते वालखिल्या:। यो रस: सोऽपाम्। (from the intent determination of Prajapati were born Vaikhanasa seers from nakha, nails; Valakhilya seers from Vala (वाल) or hairs, and the marine creatures like tortoise (kurma) from the body sap or essence—प्रजापते: सत्यसकल्पात् तत्सकल्पानुसारेण तत्तद्वस्तूत्पद्यते; तस्यशरीरस्य ये नखा: मासंस्ते वैखानस नामका मुनयोऽभवन्। ये च शरीरवाला: केशास्ते वालखिल्य नामका मुनयोऽभवन्। य: शिरस्य रस: सारांश: सोऽपां मध्ये काश्चित् कूर्मोऽभूत्—Taitt. Ar.I.23.

The Valakhilya hymns are known as supplementary hymns to the Book VIII of the Ṛgveda, as if, they were not the original part of the revealed Samhita. The word Khila (खिल) and Khilya (खिल्य) appear to have the same meaning. According to Roth, these terms denote the waste land between the cultivated fields, but he admits that this sense does not suit the passage of the Ṛgveda (मभिन्ने खिल्ये निदधाति देव्युम्—VI.28.2; खिल्ये खण्डेषु भवे—Daya.) in which it is said that God places the worshipper on an unbroken khilya (मभिन्ने खिल्ये), and he accordingly conjectures the reading मखिल्य भिन्ने, the land unbroken by barren strips. According to Oldenberg, Khilya means the land which lay between cultivated fields, but which need not be deemed to have been unfertile.

The second reference to Khilyas in the Ṛgveda is X 142 3. (उत खिल्या उर्वराणां भवन्ति). These are the only two places where the word Khilya occurs in the Ṛgveda (VI.28.2; and X.142.3). The words Vaikhanasa and Valkhilya do not occur in the Ṛg. text.

In the Sarvanukarama (Index) of the Ṛgveda, there is no reference to the hymn 58, (५८ सूक्तविषये सर्वानुक्रम सूत्र नास्ति).

Khila-hymns in Book I—It is said that after the Hymn 73 of Book I (which begins with the Pratika (रयिर्नय: पितृवृत्तो), there were eleven Khilas, ten of which were addressed to Asvins and one to Indravaruna; for them, we have a reference in the Bṛhaddevata (III.119) as follows : दशाश्विनानीमानीति इन्द्रावरुणयोस्तुति: । This eleventh Khila, devoted to Indra-Varuna appears as the eleventh Valakhilya Hymn VIII. 59 (xi), the seer of which according to the Sarvanukramani is Suparna. This collection of the eleven Khila hymns in the Book I is spoken of in the Ṛgvidhana I.20.3 as the eleven purifying Suparna Hymns (सौपर्णानि पवित्राणि सूक्तान्येकादश) Of the ten Asvin Hymns, we know only the Pratikas of two (viz गाश्वद्विवाम—of the first, and one of the others प्रधारायन्तु मधुनो घृतस्य).

Valakhilya and the Aitareya and Kausitaki Brahmanas—The Valakhilya hymns have been used at several places in the Aitareya Brahmana, usually along with the Nabhanedistha (नाभानेदिष्ट), Vṛsakapi (वृषाकपि) and Evayamarut (एवयामरुत्): V 15. (xxii.10); VI.30 (xxx.4); VI.36 (xxx.10). The Kausitaki Brahmana of the Ṛgveda school also refers to the Valakhilyas (xxx 4; xxx 8): I shall quote the latter one : "Having recited the strophe and anti-strophe, he recites the Valakhilyas; the strophe and antistrophe are the body, the Valakhilyas the breaths; these breaths are not separated (from the body). They say "why are they (called) Valakhilyas?" That which is not in contact in two fields, they call Khila; these breaths are a hair (बाल) in breath and are not separated; therefore are they Valakhilyas.

Padapatha (पदपाठ)—Just as the Pada Pathas are available for other Ṛg .Hymns, similarly they are also available for the Valakhilyas. This also shows that reverence to the Valakhilyas was shown as much as to the other Ṛg. Hymns. Dayananda in his Caturved Visaya Suci चतुर्वेद विषयसूची, refers to the hymns (astaka VI, adhyaya 4, varga 14-31, with पदार्थविद्या), as the usual subject matter.

Arguments against these Hymns—

Sayana in is his commentary has not commented on the Valakhilya Hymns. The Sayana Commentary, edited by the Vaidika Samsodhana

Mandala, Tilak Maharastra University Poona (1941) gives a very recent Commentary of the Valakhilya verses, procured from the Government Sanskrit Pathshala Library, written by an unknown scholar. It might have been written by a Pandit of Punya-pattana, Poona (Pune). Venkata Madhava has commented on the Mandala VIII of the Ṛgveda, but he does not comment on these Hymns. The Nirukta of Yaska gives no reference to the hymns of the Valakhilya. Wilson's and Griffith' translations include these hymns only in the form of Appendix. Of course Cowell (in Wilson's Translations) and Griffith both of them have given their excellent translations on their usual lines.

The following words occur only in the Valakhilya Hymns and nowhere else in the Ṛgveda : नीपातिथिम्, पुष्टिगो, श्रुष्टिगो, सांवरणो, पार्षद्वाण:, दस्यवेवृक, पूतक्रतु, पूतक्रता, ऋजूनस्, दशोण्य, दशशिप्र, शीष्ट ।

Hymn-49

The Ṛsi is Praskanva; प्रस्कण्व; the deity Indra and the metre is Pragatha (the odd line Bṛhati and the even sato-bṛhati).

2. Satanika-iva, शतानीकाऽइव, like a weapon with a hundred edges (Cowell); with a hundred hosts (Griffith); with a large number of armies of enemy (शतानीकेव मपरिमितान्येव रिपु सैन्यानि); the commander of hundreds of battalions; Lord of hundreds of powers.

Dhṛsnuya, धृष्णुया, with boldness.

Dasnse, दाशुषे, for the charitable person; for the offerer.

Gireh rasah, गिरे: रसा:, like the water brooks from a mountain as water-streams from clouds (गिरि=मेघनाम=पर्वत, Nigh. I.10).

Vṛtrani, वृत्राणि, sins,evils, nescience.

3. Girvanah, गिर्वण:, O, the one praised by the speech of devotee (गिर्वण: गोभिर्वननीयेन्द्र; Lover of the song (Griffith); Lover of hymns (Wilson).

Madah, exhilarating (मदा: हृषकरा:).

Apo na okyam sarah, as waters flow to a lake, the reservoir.

Indavah, exhilarating; pleasing; the soft-hearted one (Soma juice);

4. Anehasam, always protecting, incomparable, matchless; free from sins.

Pratarnam, capable of taking across through difficulties; helpful (प्रतरणं प्रवर्धनम्); strengthening;

Vivaksnan, pleasing; swelling, praise worthy, energy giving, (विवक्षणं अतिशयेन स्तुत्यम्).

Ksudra-iva, क्षुद्रा इव, like the small honey-bee; like the meek and humble (क्षुद्रेव दीनेभ्य इव).

Dhṛsat =dṛsad (दृषद्=धृषद्=millstone).

Kirasi nah Ksudreva dhrsat, scatter thy gifts over us, even as the dust (Griffith); pour out treasure for us just as the millstone pours out meals (Cowell).

Tmana=atmana, त्मना=आत्मना, but itself (स्वयमेव).

5. Stomam, to our laud (Griffith); to our praise (Cowell).

Hiyanah, urged on (हियान: प्रेर्यमाण:).

Sotṛbhih, by the Soma-pressers (सोतृभि: सोमाभिषवकर्तृभि:).

Dhenavah, words or speech; cows; milk-products.

6. Udri-iva avatah, उद्री ऽइव अवत:, as a plenteous spring pours forth its stream; as an abundant fountain pours out its streams. (उद्रीव । उदकान् उदकवान् अवतो न कूप इव स यथा सस्यादि सेकत्रे जल क्षरति तद्वत्) udriva=one with the raised mouth.

Vibhutim aksita-vasum, विभूतिमक्षिता वसुम्, prosperity with unfailing wealth.

7. Asubhih, with swift ones, with speeds (आशुभि: शीघ्रगामिभि: with speedy horses, शीघ्रगामिभिरश्वै:). Ugrebhih, with mighty ones (उग्रेभि: उद्गूर्णबलै: Indras horses are said to be swift and mighty ones.

Vṛsabhah, the sun, the cloud-born lightning, and the terrestrial fire produced by attrition.

Hymn-58 (x)

1. Anucanah brahmanah, an intellectual person of deep learning;

a learned Brahmana.

2 The verse indicates that one and the same Agni or energy is present in the fire produced by attrition for consuming oblations; the same is in the sun, the one and the same shines everywhere, in all the heavenly bodies (अग्निं यथैको भुवन प्रविष्टो रूप रूपं प्रतिरूपो बभूव —Katha; तत्सृष्ट्वा तदेवानुप्राविशत् —Taitt. Up, II.6; सूर्य आत्मा जगतस्तस्थुषश्च—I.115.1); just as Agni, Surya and all these Nature's bounties are one but appear differently in different bodies, similarly the Supreme Self is also one, but His glory shines every where.

3. Citramagha yasya yoge addijanje—She of wondrous wealth was born to harness (चित्रं चायनीयं मघं गवाश्वादि लक्षणं धनं यस्याः सा चित्रमघा) Jyotismantam, bright and radiant (ज्योतिष्मन्तं ज्योतींषि सूर्यादीनि प्रकाश्यत्वेन सन्ति यस्य तम् । "तस्य भासा सर्वमिदं विभाति" —Up.

Ketumantam, diffusing splendour (ketu is banner; ketu is wisdom; केतुः-केतः-प्रज्ञा, Nigh. III.9).

Tricakram, त्रिचक्रम्, rolling three-wheeled.

Sukham susadam, offering an easy-seat or comfortable seat (सुषदम् । शोभने आत्मस्वरूपे सीदति तिष्ठतीति सुषत् सुप्रतिष्ठः तम्).

Bhurivaram, full of many gifts (Cowell); treasureladen (Griffith); dear to so many creatures (भूरिवारं भूरिभिर्बहुभिः प्राणिभिः वरो वरणीयस्तम्).

Hymn-59 (xi)

The Ṛsi of this hymn is Suparnah Kanva; and the hymn is devoted to Indra-Varuna, and the metres are tristup and jagati.

Indra is the energy-factor and varuna is the fluid factor, curative and exhilarating.

1. Bhagadheyani, shares (भागधेयानि भवदंश भूतानि) (in the rituals the shares of offerings line caru, चरु and purodasa, पुरोडाश etc.).

Sutesu, in the extracts; in the blessings obtained from spiritual efforts. (also सुतेषु अभिषुतेषु सोमेषु).

Siksathah, शिक्षथः, assist (शिक्षथः अभिमतं प्रयच्छथ: ; शिक्षतिर्दान कर्मा— Nigh. III 20).

2. Osadhih-apah, ओषधीः-आपः, plants and waters (व्रीह्याद्या ओषधयः, आपः उदकानि).

Nih sidhvari, निःश्षिध्वरी, one with efficacious vigour (निःषिध्वरी नितरां मंगलस्वभावा).

Rajasah, pare, beyond midspace (रजसः अन्तरिक्षलोकस्य सम्बन्धिनः पारे पारतीरे).

Adhvanah, of paths (अध्वनो मार्गस्य).

Na kih at eva ohate, none becomes strong enough to gain success, (also नकिः ओहते न कोऽपि तर्कगोचरो भवति).

Adevah satruh, the infidel, god-opposing, enemy, (अदेवा देवप्रतियोगी असुरादिः शत्रुः शातयिता).

3. Sapta-vanih, divine speech expressed in seven metres, from Samkhya.

Hym-60

2. Ghrtakesam, One with brandishing flames (घृतकेशं ज्वालाकेशम्—Venkata; butter-haired—Wilson cf. घृतपृष्ठम्, butter-backed; (प्रदीप्तकेशस्थानीयज्वालम्—Sayana).

Napatam, non-protector (नपातं न पातयितारम्—Sayana).

6. Surayah, wise persons, priests, the praisers (सूरयः स्तोतारः—Venkata; स्तोतारो मेधाविनोऽस्माकं पुत्रादयः ; hymners or sons—Sayana).

9. Ekaya, dvitiyaya, tisrbhih and Catasrbhih, by one, by second, by three, by four, i.e. Rc, Yajus, Saman and Nigada (एकयागिरा ऋचाः—Venkata; Sayana ; ऋगाद्यास्तिस्रः गद्यपद्यकाव्यलक्षणा चतुर्थी गीः—Uvat; एकया गिरा ऋग्लक्षणया उत अपि च द्वितीयया यजुर्लक्षणया स्तुतः सन्, तिसृभिर्गीर्भिः ऋग्यजुसाम लक्षणाभिः, चतसृभिः ऋग्यजुः सामनिगदलक्षणाभिः स्तुतो नः पाहि—Mahidhara on Yv. XXVII.43). May also be परा, मध्यमा, पश्यन्ती and वैखरी spesch.

10. Arvanah, one who does not liberally give; impious; a troublesome person (अराव्णः अदातुः —Venkata).

11. Vayahvrdham, food-augmenting (वयः वृधम् अन्नस्य वर्धयितारम्—Venkata; अन्नस्य वर्धकम्—Sayana; आ वयति= अत्ति कर्म; Nigh. II.8; वयः=अन्नम्; food; Nir. VI.4—See VII 69.4—परि घ्रंससोमना वां वयो गात्).

Upamate; O wealth-giver (उपमाते ! धनं यः समीपे करोति स तथोक्तः —Venkata; उपास्मत्समीपे माति नो धनमित्युपमातिः ; addressed to Agni—Sayana).

13. Sacivaso, O thou who by wisdom establishes our rites

(Wilson) (शचीवसो, हे प्रज्ञया वासीयत: —Venkata; also कमंधन ! Venkata and Sayana).

Vasuvidah, wealth obtaining (वसुविद: धनस्य लम्भकानि—Venkata).

Yahuh, child or son (यहु: पुत्र: —Venkata; सहसो यहु: सहस: पुत्र: —Sayana; यहु: सहस: —the son of strength—Wilson).

Asya hanavah. flames of the fire (अस्य अग्ने: हनवो न हनव इव हनुस्थानीया ज्वाला: —Sayana).

16. Pra agne tistha janan ati—O fire-divine, rest with Nature's bounties (प्राग्ने हे अग्ने जनान् अस्मान् अति अतीत्य प्रतिष्ठ प्रगच्छ हविरादाय देवान् प्रति—Sayana; go forth having overcome our enemies—Wilson).

Tapasa, by heat (तपसा तापकेन—Sayana).

Socisa, by glow (शोचिषा तेजसा—Sayana).

17. Vṛkta-barhisah, have cut the sacred grass; have made all preparations (वृक्त बर्हिष: विच्छिन्न बर्हिष: —Venkata)

20. Parah gavyuti, beyond a gavyuti (गव्यूति) a Krosas, about 4 miles (पर:उगव्यूति गव्यूते: क्रोशात् परस्तात् —Venkata; क्रोशद्वयात् देशात् परस्तात्—Sayana; गव्यूति मार्गम्—Daya. on V 66 3; क्रोशद्वयम् on III.62.16: क्रोशयुग्मम् on Yv.XXI.9).

Hymn-61

For verse 11, see Nir. VI.25.

1. Dhiya, धिया, thought.

Satracya, inclined to us (सत्राच्या अञ्चन्त्या—Venkata; अस्माकं सहाञ्चन्त्या —Sayana)

Savisthah, mightiest (शविष्ठ: अतिशयेन बलवान् —Sayana).

4. Aprami-Satya, Maghavan!, O bounteous of unbroken truth; and epithet of Indra, the resplendent Lord. (अप्रामिऽसत्य! अविनश्यत्सत्य! मघवन्! —Venkata; हे अहिंसित सत्य! हे इन्द्र! —Sayana).

5. Sacipate, O Lord of rites (शचीपते वेदवाच: पालक! —Daya. on 1.106.6; प्रजास्वामिन् on VI.45.9), (शचि=वाणी, speech; सत्कर्म=righteous actions; प्रज्ञा=wisdom; प्रजा=people).

Bhagam na, like happiness; bliss-giving (भगं न भाग्यमिव —Sayana; भाग्याधिपतिम् —Venkata).

9. Pracamanyo, O pride prsonified!, whose wrath presses ever forwards (प्राचामन्यो प्राचीन क्रोध अप्रतिहतक्रोध —Sayana).

Ahamsan, who meets the foe proclaiming "It is I". (अहमित्युक्तवा य: शत्रून् भजते स: अहसन: —Venkata; हे अहंसन्! संग्रामेऽहमित्यात्मनो महत्वं प्रकाशवन्, यं शत्रुं संभजते; —used for Indra—Sayana).

11. Na papaso manamahe narayaso na jalhavah, we do not think ourselves to be sinful, or destitute, or devoid of lustre. We are celibate, devoted to study, austerities, generosity and activity, said the seer (न पापा मन्यामहे । नाधना: । न ज्वलनेन हीना: । अस्त्यस्मासु ब्रह्मचर्यमध्ययनं तपो दान कर्मेत्यृषिरवोचत् —Nir. VI.25).

Na papso manamahe, we are not evil; we do not appear evil.

12. Rina' Katim, to whom we are all indebted (ऋणकातिं ऋणभूत स्तुतिं ऋणवत् फलप्रदानेन स्तोतारम्, him to whom praise is due as a debt—Venkata; ऋणकातिं ऋणसम्भूत स्तुतिम्। यस्मै स्तुतिऋ्णवदवश्यं क्रियते तं सदृशम्। अथवा ऋणवदवश्य फलप्रदस्तुतिम् —Sayana)

According to Wilson, Sayana's explanation of this verse is obscure; he seems to take vajinam twice over with a difference in meaning in each clause (वाजिनं बलवन्तमश्वं), the mighty horse; as well as वाजिनं हविष्मन्तं, the one with offerings. Wilson supposes that veda, i.e. knows is to be repeated in the second clause; he, the best of the charioteers, knows (among steeds) the strong racer, and (among men), he, the bounteous, (knows) the offerer whom he is to reach.

15. Spat-Uta, omniscient (स्पट् उत वेत्ता—Venkata; स्पशतिर्दर्शनकर्मा; स्पट् सर्वस्यज्ञाता --Sayana. स्पट् स्पष्टा (राजा)—Daya. on V.59.1; स्पशबाधन स्पर्शनयोः); also the seer of all (सर्वद्रष्टा).

17 Adyadya, Svah-Svah, अद्याद्या श्वः श्वः , every today and every tomorrow.

Hymn-62

For verse 11, see Nir. I.4.

1. Mahinam vayah, ample food (माहिनं वयः महत् अन्नम्—Venkata; महत् अन्नं सोमलक्षणम्—Sayana); also mighty strength.

5. Avatan' iva, like water-wells (अवतान् इव कूपान् इव—Venkata; just as a thirsty man looks for water deep into the well).

Sominah, devotee in intense love; a house-holder or sacrificer सोमिनः सोमातृष्णम्—Venkata, यजमानस्य—Sayana; सोमाः प्रशस्ताः पदार्थाः सन्ति यस्य तस्य गृहस्थ जनस्य —Daya. on I.151.2).

8. Upamam, near at hand (उपमं अन्तिकम्—Venkata)

Devatataye, for the sacrificer or devotee or worshipper (देवतातये यजमानाय —Venkata; यजमानाय यज्ञार्थं वा—Sayana); highly coveted in sacred performance).

9. Samana' iva vapusyatah, as a woman of one mind enjoys the body of her lover (or as a woman, who shows no partiality wins her lovers to her; or as a woman enjoys or wins the body of her lovers of one mind) (समनऽइव समनेव समानमनस्का योषिदिव सा यथा वपुष्यतः वपुरिच्छतः पुरुषान् कृणवत् करोति स्ववशान्—Sayana).

10. Ujjatam, since manifestation, when it was born जातं प्रादुर्भूतम् —Venkata).

Savah, strength (शवः बलम्—Sayana).

Kratum, knowledge (क्रतुं प्रज्ञां स्वानुकूलाम्—Sayana; प्रज्ञानाम् —Venkata).

11. Aham ca tvam ca vṛtrahan, अहं च त्वं च वृत्रहन्!,—Yaska in his Nirukta (1.4) quotes this phrase to show that the word ca is used in the sense of aggregation and is joined together with both as "I and you, O slayer of Vṛtra".

12. Asunvatah, infidel who does not offer (असुन्वतः अयष्टुः ; one who does not press out the Soma for sacrifice).

Sunvatah, the devotee who offers Soma in the sacrifice. (सुन्वतं अभिषवं कुर्वतः —Sayana).

Bhuri jyotinsi, भूरि ज्योतींषि, plenty of blessings.

Hymn-63

For verse 7, see Nir. III.8.

1. Manuspita, father of the family (पिता=sustainer; father; head of the family) (पिता सर्वेषा पालकः—Sayana; the protector of all).

Dvara, by whose door (द्वारा द्वारेण—Venkata).

7. Ksayah, abode; residence (क्षयः निवासः —Sayana).

Panca janyaya, by the Pancajana; by people of five categories; (i) intellectuals, (ii) people of defence, (iii) dealers in trade, agriculture and industry, (iv) labour class, and (v) the nonscheduled, the nisada,—(निषादपञ्चमाञ्चत्वारो वर्णाः पाञ्चजन्याः ; पाञ्चजन्यः पञ्चसु सकलविद्येषु अध्यापकोपदेशक, राजसभा-सेना-सर्वजनाधीशेषु जनेषु भवः — Daya. पञ्चजना इति मनुष्य नाम—Nigh. II.3; Nir III.8).

The Pancajana word occurs in X.53.4 also. Yaska in his Nirukta (III.8) comments on this thus : Ye five-tribes, enjoy my sacrifice (पञ्चजना ममोहोत्रं जुषध्वम्). According to same, (the five tribes) are the gandharvas, the manes, gods, demons and evil spirits: गन्धर्वाः पितरो देवा असुरा रक्षांसि; again, they are the four categories with nisada as the fifth (चत्वारोवर्णा निषादः पञ्चम इत्यौपमन्यवः), so says Aupamanyava (nisada is hunter, because he lives by killing animals, sin is embodied in him (ni+√sad)—निषादः कस्मात् । निषदने: भवति । निषण्णस्मि न्पापकमिति नैरुक्ताः (Nir. III.8). In its continuity, the Nirukta comments on यत्पाञ्चजन्यया विशा—when with the tribes of five peoples i.e. with the tribe consisting of five peoples. Five (पञ्च) is a united number (i.e it remains uniflicted in the masculine, feminite and neuter genders. (पञ्च पृक्ता संख्या स्त्रीपुंनपुंसकेष्वविशिष्टा).

Hymn-64

1. Brahmadvisah, the despiser of God and the Veda; an infidel

(ब्रह्मद्विष: ब्रह्मण: द्वेष्टॄन् राक्षसान्—Venkata; despiser of Brahmana, the holy educated class).

3. Sutanam, of the expressed one; the affused Soma; of the effused soma

Asutanam, of the non-effused.

4. Girim, cloud (गिरिं मेघम्—Venkata, Sayana).

Parvavantam, gharled or knotted (पर्वतं पर्ववन्तम्—Venkata).

11. Saryanavati, intellect; the innermost cavity of consciousness, (a lake of this name according to Sayana and others : शर्यणावति—'कुरुक्षेत्रस्य जघनार्धं भवे सरस्वन्ते'' कुरुक्षेत्रस्य जघनार्धभवे शरतृणोपेते सरसि, i.e. in the lower parts of Kuruksetra.

For reference, see :

शर्यणाऽवत: —X.35.2

शर्यणाऽवति—I.84.14; VIII.6.39; 7.29; 64.11; IX.65.22; 113.1.

According to Dayananda, the under-tract of ground with harmful creatures is Saryanavati (हिंसनीय पदार्थयुक्त भूमितल—on IX.113.1 in the Sanskara-vidhi); and also शर्यणोऽन्तरिक्षदेशस्तस्याऽदूर भवे—Daya. on I.84.14).

Susoma, सुषोमा, fine beautiful mortal body (to some, it is a river of this name. For references, see :

सुऽसोमया—X.75.5 (नदीसूक्त)

सुषोमायाम्—VIII.64.11

सुषोमे—VIII.7.29.

No river has been identified of this name. According to some speculations, it is the modern Suwan, mentioned by Megasthenes Soavon. To Roth, it is a Soma-vessel; when the word is used as masculine (VIII.7.29), it means people and it has been once used as feminine (VIII 64.11). The Nirukta identifies the word with Sindhu (सुषोमा सिन्धुः :— Nir. IX.26), which according to Macdonell and Keith is absurd.

Arjikiye, the sense-organs; a sacred land; also regarded as a river of this name. For references, see

आर्जीकात्—IX.113.2

आर्जीकीये—X.75.5

आर्जीकीये (with different accents)—VIII.64.11

आर्जीके—VIII.7.29

आर्जीकेषु—IX.65.23.

The two masculine forms (आर्जीक and आर्जीकीय) may denote people or land; the feminine (आर्जीकीया) designates the river of the land Macdonald and Keith). Hillebrandt locates the country in or near Kashmir, as Arrian mentions Arsaces, brother of Abhisares, who presumably took this name from his people, and Abhisara (अभिसार) bordered on Kashmir. According to Pischel, Arjika (आर्जीक) is an unidentified country. According to Roth or zimmer, the word is not a proper name. Hillebrandt recognizes arjikiya as the name of the Upper Indus; or it may even be Vitasta or Jhelum. Brunnhofer identifies it with Arghesan, a tributary of the Arghanab.

Hymn-65

2. Andhasah, usually pertaining to food (Nigh. अन्धः=अन्ननाम—II.7); according to Sayana here it means water as the cause of food (अन्धोऽन्नम्, तेन तत्कारणमुदकं लक्ष्यते—Sayana).

Samudre, in the midspace (समुद्रे समुन्दनापादान भूतेऽन्तरिक्षे भाग्रसि—Sayana).

Svah-nare, in this world (स्वः नरे=स्वर्णरे=सर्वनरे or अस्मिन् लोके—Venkata).

7. Sasvatam, to all the worshippers (शश्वतां बहूनां यजमानानां—Sayana).

Sadharanah, साधारणः, common; ordinary.

11. Brhatprthu, in a large quantity (बृहत्पृथ महत् विस्तृत—Sayana).

Pṛsatinam, cows of dappled colour (पृषतीनां गवः —Sayana).

Sahasre......bṛhat pṛthu, upon a thousand cows I obtain gold (Wilson); the cows came as it were laden with gold from Indra (एन्द्रेणानीत—Sayana).

Napatah, nominative plural, children (Wilson); unprotected (नपातः अरक्षितस्य—Sayana).

Hymn-66

For verses 8 and 10, see Nir. V.21 and VI.26 respectively.

2. Made Susipram, (मदे सुशिप्रम्) in the Ṛk. ; मदेषु शिप्र (in the Sama Veda, II.33. 688).

Adrtya, आदृत्य, from $\sqrt{dṛ}$ to tear. Sayana does not translate this word with respect.

3. According to Wilson, an obscure stanze.

Mṛksah, well-washed; purified (मृक्षः शोधकः परिचरणीयो वा—Sayana).

Asvyah, अश्व्यः , all-pervading; see previous notes.

Kijah, कीजः , wonderful (कीज. । कीज इत्यद्भुतमाह; किमस्य कथं जात इति——Sayana).

Gavyasya, stock of divine speech; the Veda; herd of kine (गव्यस्य गोसमूहस्य—Sayana).

4. Puru Sambhṛtam, accumulated by many, sustained by many sense organs.

Nikhatam puru- sambhṛtam vasu udvapati, digs out the treasure accumulated at one place, in that way, (निखातं चित् भूमौ खात्वा स्थापितमपि सम्भृत संगृहीत यागादानादिक कृत्वेदृशं पुरुबहु वसु धनम् उदिद्वपति उद्वपत्येव—Sayana).

Sayana separates the two words puru and sambhṛtam, "the buried wealth, plenteous and accumulated". He takes the wealth as accumulated stores from former sacrifices.

7. Samana, समना, for battle (समनम्=संग्रामनाम, Nigh. II.17); with uuited mind (समना संग्रामार्थम्—Sayana).

8. Vṛkas cid asya varanah ura'mathih, the destroyer of travelling enemies; the wolf, the killer of sheep; is indeed his warder. A dog is called vṛka on account of biting (श्वापि वृक उच्यते। विकर्त्तनात्—Nir. V.21. There are several meanings of Vṛka; wolf, dog, moon; the Sun, the thief—See Nir. V.21. (वृकश्चित्·स्तेनोऽपि वारणः वारयिता सर्वस्य सन्नपि उरामथिः शत्रूणां मार्गे गच्छतां मथिता सन्नपि—Sayana).

Vrkah cid uramathih, (i) one that digs the earth like a plough, (ii) the destroyer of darkness at the night time like a moon; (iii) the destroyer of nescience like a wolf devouring a sheep

10. Beka' natan, बेकऽनाटान्, usurer; Baka-natah are, indeed, the usurers, so called because they make their (principal sum) double, or because they advance (on security) of double (value) or because they demand double (price). In the present verse, we have : Indra overcomes all the usurers who behold the daylight and the dishonest merchants. (बेक नाटाः खलु कुसीदिनो भवन्ति। द्विगुणकारिणो वा। द्विगुणदायिनो वा। द्विगुणं कामयन्त इति वा—Nir. VI.26).

In the word "Bekanatah, बेकनाटाः ", the prefix बे, be, stands for two in the corrupted form (बे इत्यपभ्रंशो द्विशब्दार्थे। एकं कार्षापणमृणिकाय प्रयच्छन् द्वौ मह्यं दातव्य ······नयेन दर्शयन्ति, ततो द्विशब्देनैक शब्देन च नाटयन्तीति बेकनाटाः —Sayana).

For Bekanatah, also see Panini— न ते नासिकायां सज्ञायां टीटञ् नाटज्—भ्रटचः —V 2 31.

The other derivations are : बेकनाटा बेकनासिकाः भेकनासिकाः विकटनासिका वा। अथवा। विचिर पृथग्भावे। वेकः पृथग्भावः। वेकनाटाः छिन्ननासः। विनासिका। विवेकशील नासिकाः कुशला वा।

8. Adhardrsah, beholders of sunlight (अहर्दृशः सूर्यदृशः । य इमान्यहानि पश्यन्ति न पराणीति वा । अभि भवति कर्मणा—Nir. VI.26).

Panin, पणीन्, dishonest merchants (पणींश्च वणिजः —Nir. VI.26)

11. Bhṛtim, भृति, regular honorarium, wages of salary.

13 Vayam gha te tve, वयं घ ते त्वे, we are verily thus.

14 Sacistha, शचिष्ठ, mightiest.

Gatu'vit, गातुऽवित्, one acquainted with the path. (मार्गज्ञः —Venkata; मार्गज्ञ उपायज्ञस्त्वम्—Sayana).

15. Kalayah, dear ones, enlightened ones, sincere workers; children and close relatives (कलयः पुत्राणां ज्ञातीनां च सम्बोधनम् —Venkata).

Hymn-67

For verse 5, see Nir. VI.27.

1. Adityam, learned ones; sages of the highest austerity, Brahmacarins of the supreme level.

5. "O Adityas, run to us the living ones before the slaughter; where are you, the heares of our call". (जीवितो नोऽभिधावतादित्याः पुराहननात् । क्व नु स्थ ह्वानश्रुत इति—Nir. VI.27).

It is known to be the composition of the fish caught in net.

(मत्स्यानां जालमापन्नानामेतदार्षं वेदयन्ते).

The Nirukta then proceeds to give the etymology of the word matsya (मत्स्य, fish); the fish are so called because they float in water, or they ravel in eating each other (मत्स्या मधा उदके स्पन्दन्ते । माद्यन्तेऽन्योन्यं भक्षणा-येति वा)

Jala, (जाल, net) is so called because it moves in water (water= जल; जालं जलचरं भवति । जलेभवं वा । जलेशय वा—Nir. VI.27).

7. Amhoh, अंहो: , of the sinner.

11. Ugraputre, O mother of mighty children or full of mighty offspring in consistency of the word gabhira meaning water (गभीरम्= उदकनाम—Nigh I.12).

15. Saruh, Snare, an injurer (शरु: हिंसिका प्रसिति: जालिक प्रेरिता—Sayana).

Ajaghnusi, innocuous; without injuring (अजघ्नुषी अहिंसन्ती सती—Sayana).

18. Navyam, latest (नव्यं नव्यं स्तुत्यम्—Sayana).

Sanyase. protective measure, the measure for getting released (सन्यसे संभजनाय).

Tatnah Sanyase, that which releases us (tat or that may either be net or your favour—तत्बन्धकं or युष्मदनुग्रहादस्मान् मुञ्चतु—Sayana).

In the former case, the net itself is supposed by the favour of the gods to become as it were the instrument of deliverance—Wilson).

19. Tarah, strength; speed (तरः वेगः —Venkata).

20. Vivasvatah hetih, the weapon of Yama, or of the supreme sovereign. The wheel of time (विवस्वतः हेतिः वैवस्वतस्य यमस्य हेतिभूता—Venkata).

Hymn–68

For verse 1 and 4, see Nir. V.3 and XII.21 re pectively.

1. A tva ratham yatha utaye, to thee for protection as to a chariot.

Utih; protection, is derived from the √अव्, to protect (अवितरवनात्—Nir. V.3).

Sumnaya, for well-being (सुम्नाय सुखाय—Venkata; Sayana).

Tuvi, many, several, (तुवि=बहु).

Tuvi-kurmim, accomplisher of may deeds; rich in deeds, or actions (तुविकूर्मि बहोः कर्तारम्—Venkata; बहुकर्माणम्—Sayana)

Rtisaham, ऋतीषहम्=ऋतिऽसहम्, subduer or evil forces or cruel persons (ऋतीषहम् हिंसकानामभिभवितारम्—Sayana).

2. Tuvi-susma, O possessor of immense strength (तुविशुष्म ! बहुबल! —Venkata).

Tuvi-krato, O doer of many actions of repute. (तुविक्रतो! बहुकर्मन्!).

3. Jmayantan, the all-pervading or extensive (jma=ज्मा=पृथिवी, extensive earth; पृथिव्यां सर्वतो व्याप्नुवन्तम्—Sayana).

4. Evaih ca carsaninam uti huve rathanam, I invoke him to come with his protections in the onsets of your soldiers (चर्षणीनाम्) and chariots (रथीनाम्)—Wilson. "I invoke for you, and Lord of Visvanara, whose prowess is unhumbled, with the desires of human beings and with the protection of chariot"—In this sacrifice, I invoke Indra (Lord) of Visvanara, i e , the Sun, of unhumbled prowess or of mighty strength (शवस:), with desires (एवै: कामै:), courses (अयनै:), or protection (ऊती) of men (चर्षणीनाम्), i.e. of mortals along with the protection, i.e. the path of chariots.

Here Visvanara is Aditya, the Sun (विश्वानरस्य आदित्यस्य । अनानतस्य । शवसो महतो बलस्य । एषैश्च कामैरयनैरवनैर्वा । चर्षणीनाम् मनुष्याणाम् । ऊत्या च पथा रथानाम् । इन्द्रमस्मिन् यज्ञे ह्वयामि—Nir. XII.21).

7. Purvyam, ancient, old one, the best; also at the opening of sacrifice (पूर्व्यं यज्ञमुखस्थानम्—Venkata; पूर्वं भवा यज्ञमुखस्थाम्—Sayana).

Nṛtuh, the leader (नृतु: विनेता—Venkata; फलस्य नेता देव: —Sayana).

11. Gopavanah, गोपवन: , the seer of the secret lore (name of a ṛsi —Sayana). Name of a poet of the race of Atri. Gaupavana (गौपवन), pupil of Pautimasya, पौतिमाष्य, is mentioned in the first two traditions (list of teachers) in the Kanva recension of the Brhadaranyaka Up. III.6.1; IV. 6.1 (Macdonell and Keith) Gira, गिरा, praise.

13. Arkse Srutarvani, आर्क्षे श्रुतर्वणि, see verse 4.

Mrksa, to purify.

Sayana gives Vṛksa)वृक्षा) as a reading for Mrksa (मृक्षा), which he explains as Kesavanti (having hairs or wool) (वृक्षा वृक्षाणि । वृश्च्यन्त इति वृक्षा: केशा: । तद्वन्ति वृक्षाणि; he gives another alternative : अथवा वृक्षा वृक्षेण । व्रश्चनसाधनत्वाद् वृक्षो हस्त: । तेनो-मृजामि ।

Caturnam, of the horses; of the four horses (according to Sayana, the horses given by Srutarvan, श्रुतर्वण्)

Sardhamsi-iva, like well grown (long) hairs (शर्धांसि इव उच्छ्रितानि लोमानीव).

Stuka-avinam, wool of rams; (स्तुकाऽवि न ऊर्णायव: । स्तुक: केशसन्घान: ; bunch of hairs —Sayana).

14. Vayah, birds (a poetic metaphor for ships).

Tugryam, the imported material; for Bhujyu and Tugrya, see earlier notes. According to traditionalists, Tugra is the name of the father of Bhujya, a protege of the Asvins, and thus Bhujyu is known as Tugrya (VIII.3.23; 74.4) or Taugrya (I.117.15; 118.6; 182.5,6; VIII.5.22, X.39.4).

The word tugra means a strong man who can put up a fight with enemy.

Asavah, fast moving horses (आशव: अश्वा:).

15. Parusni, a carrier across; one consisting of knots; one who could bravely resist enemy at each step. (परुष्णीं पालिकाम्, the sustainer, the earth Daya. on VII.18 8; विभागवतीम्, having divisions as of an army, Daya. on IV.22.2; परुष्ण्याम् पालनकर्त्र्याम् पृथिव्याम्, Daya. on V.52 9).

Mahenadi, O great river (महाऽनदि, हे महानदि !).

Hymn-75

For verse 9, see Nir. V. 23.

1. see Yv. XIII.37.

4. Patih satinahpatih, sahasrinah, lord of hundreds and thousands.

Murdha kavi, an outstanding seer of piercing vision (मूर्धा उच्छ्रित: कवी क्रान्तप्रज्ञ: —Venkata; मूर्धा शिरोवदुन्नत: कवि: मेधावी —Sayana).

Rayinam, of wealth (रयीणां धनानाम् —Sayana).

5. Nemim ṛbhavah, as the Ṛbhus (the artisans) bend the circumference of a wheel; see also VII.32.20 (नमे नेमिं तष्टा इव).

6. Virupa, O one of multiform; name of a Maharsi (हे विरूप! नाना रूपे तन्नामक महर्षे —Sayana).

Nunam, now, this time (नूनं इदानीं —Venkata).

Abhidyave, all round shining (अभिद्यवे अभिगतदीप्तये —Venkata; Sayana).

7. Apaka-Caksasah, missile (Griffith); of un-measured radiance (अपाकचक्षसः अनल्पचक्षसः —Sayana; अनल्प तेजसः —Venkata).

Panim, पणिम्, exploiter.

Staramahe, shall we overthrow, or defeat (स्तरामहे । स्तरणं हिंसनम्—Venkata).

8. Usrah, उस्राः, milk-streaming.

Aghnyah, cows (inviolable), (Nigh. II.11; V.5 (पदनाम); also अघ्न्याहन्तव्या भवति; aghnya, cow is so called because she is not to be killed, अ + √हन्, or she is the destroyer of sin—Nir. XI.43).

9 Dudhyah, दूढ्यः = दुःध्यः, an evil-minded.

Samasya, of everyone (समस्य सर्वस्य —Venkata).

"Let the weapon of our numerous evil-minded vindictive foes not smite us as a wave does a boat", Evil-minded, i.e. whose minds are sinful (दूढ्यः=दुर्धियः पापधियः ; परिद्वेषसो सर्वतो द्वेषसो अंहतिः —Nir. V.23).

Urmi (wave) is derived from √ऊर्ण to cover.

Nau, a boat is so-called because it is to be pulled through (√नी) or the word may be derived from the root nam, नम्, to bend. (उर्मिरिव नावमावधीत । ऊर्मिरूर्णोते: । नौ: प्रणोत्तव्या भवति नमतेर्वा —Nir. V.23)

11. Uru-Kṛt uru kṛdhi, giver of abundance (or of wide space) give us abundance (उरुकृत् बहुकृत् उरु बहु न: अस्माकं कृधि कुर्विति —Venkata).

15. Yatra aham asmi tan ava, यत्र अहं अस्मि तां अव shield those among whom I stand (or among whom I am).

Hymn-76

9. Divistisu, दिविष्टिषु, on the recurring sacred days (दिविष्टिषु अस्माकह्वामभि गमनेषु; दिव· स्वर्गस्य वैषणेषु निमित्तेषु —Sayana).

10. Ut-tisthan ojase, rising up in thy strength (उत्+तिष्ठन् ओजसा बलेन —Sayana).

Camu, between the two boards (चमू चम्वो: अधिषवण फलकयो: —Venkata; Sayana).

11. Kraksamanan, whilst smiting foes (क्रक्षमाणं शत्रून् विलिखन्तम् —Sayana, Venkata).

Akripetam, follow thee (अकृपेतां अनुकल्पयेताम् —Venkata) ; shudder.

13. Astapadim, अष्टाऽपदीम्, eight points of the sky (eight cardinal directrons = north, south, east, west, and four half-quarters or corner points : ईशान (N—E); आग्नेय (S—E); नैर्ऋत्य (S—w); and वायव्य

(N—W); (दिग्भि: अवान्तरदिग्भि: —Venkata).

Navasraktim, rising to the ninth (i.e. the sun in the zenith) (चार्चदिग्भि: अवान्तरदिग्भि: च अष्टापदीम् ताभि: आदित्येन च नवस्रक्तिम् —Venkata).

Hymn-77

For verses 4, 6, 10 and 11, see Nir. V.11; VI.34; V.4 and VI.33 respectively.

1. Sṛnvire. शृण्विरे, renowned (विश्रुता —Venkata), heard even today.

2. Aurna'vabham, descendent of Urnavabhi (ऊर्णवाभि); literally it means abounding in wool; also a conceit. In the tradition, (i) this is the name of a pupil of kaundinya, कौण्डिन्य (Bṛhada. Up. IV.5.26. Madhyandina) (ii) a teacher of this name in the Nirukta VII.15; XII.19. He is normally said to belong to the school of Aitihasikas, the traditionalists. He was probably an eclectic.

Ahisu'vam. wicked (in administration). In tradition, the name of an Asura (Aurnavabham and Ahisuvam, both are regarded as Asuras or demons —Sayana, Venkata)

और्णवाभम्—VIII. 32.26; 77.2 (ऊर्णवाभि word does not occur in the Ṛgveda).

अहीशुव: —X.144.3

अहीशुवम्—VIII.32.2; 26; 77.2

Both the terms, Aurnavabham and Ahisuvam occur together in the Ṛgveda; VIII. 32.26; 77.2; Ahisuvam singly occurs in VIII. 32.2.

4 Saransi trimsatam, सरांसित्रिंशतम्, thirty lakes of soma.

At one single draught, Indra (the sun) drank thirty lakes full of Soma.

At one draught alone; Indra drank them together, i.e.a long with one another (साकं सहेत्यर्थः).

Lakes full of Soma, i.e. dear to his heart or full to the brim, or consecrated to Indra (इन्द्रः सोमस्य काणुका। कान्तकानीति वा। क्रान्तकानीति वा। कृतकानीति वा); or else Indra is a lover of Soma, or he drinks till he desires, till his appetite is completetely satisfied (इन्द्र. सोमस्य कान्त इति वा। कणेघात इति वा। कणेहतः। कान्तिहतः).

The ritualists explain like this : There are thirty libation-vessels consecrated to one deity at the meridional pressing of the Soma-juice. These (libation-vessels), they drink at a single draught. They are here called lakes. "There are thirty days and nights in the second and thirty in the first half of a month," say the etymolisgists. Then the rays drink those same lunar waters which fall on certain days in the second fortnight.

(तत्रैतद् याज्ञिका वेदयन्ते। त्रिंशदुक्थपात्राणि माध्यन्दिने सवन एकदेवतानि। तान्येतस्मिन् काल एकेन प्रतिधानेन पिबन्ति। तान्यत्र सरांस्युच्यन्ते। त्रिंशदपरपक्षस्याहोरात्राः। त्रिंशत्पूर्वपक्षस्येति नैरुक्ताः। तद्या एताश्चान्द्रमस्य आगामिन्य आपो भवन्ति रश्मयस्ता अपरपक्षे पिबन्ति —Nir V 11).

5. Gandhavram, the cloud (गन्धर्वो मेघः —Venkata; वायुरुदकं धारयतीति मेघः—Sayana) Gandharva also means wind or air (यो गां पृथिवीं धरति स वायुः; air the sustains that earth, Daya on I.163.2; also the sun, यो गां पृथिवीं धार्णा व धरति धारयति वा स सूर्यलोकः — Daya. on Yv. II.3; a learned one, यो गां वेदवाचं धरति सः विद्वान् पण्डितो जनः – Daya. on Yv. XXXII.9; also moon, यो गाः सूर्यकिरणान् धरति स चन्द्रमाः Yv.XVIII.40).

Gandharvas are also persons devoted to aesthetics and fine arts : गानविद्याकुशलाः —Daya. on Yv.XII.98. Beauty personified (रूपमिति गन्धर्वाः (उपासते) —SBr. X 5.2.20; lovers of maidens, योषित्कामा वै गन्धर्वाः —SBr. III.2.4.3; स्त्रीकामा वै गन्धर्वाः —Ait. Br. I.27; तत्गन्धर्वाः) उ ह स्त्रीकामाः —Kausitaki Br. II.9; wind, वातो गन्धर्वः SBr. IX.4.1.10; vital breaths, Jaim Up. III.36 3; mind, मनो गन्धर्वः —SBr. IX.4.1.11; fire, अग्निर्गन्धर्वः —SBr. IX.4.1.7; moon, चन्द्रमा गन्धर्वः —SBr. IX.4.1.9. the sun, सूर्यो गन्धर्वः —SBr. IX.4.1.8; they are twenty-seven, गन्धर्वाः सप्तविंशतिः —SBr. V.1.4.8.

Abudhnesu rajah-su, in the vacant or nonhabitable regions of space (अबुध्नेषु पदनिधानयोग्यस्थानरहितेषु रजःसु लोकेषु —Sayana).

6. "From the mountains, Indra transfixed the mellow cloud and held his well-aimed arrow." From the mountains Indra held the well-aimed arrow and transfixed the well-ripe cloud, the giver of rain-water. (ओदनं उदकदानं मेघम् । बृन्दे बुन्देन व्याख्यातम् । वृन्दारकश्च —Nir. VI.34)

Bundah, बुन्दः means arrow; it pierces; it inspires awe; or it shines while it flies (बुन्द इषुर्भवति । बिन्दो वा । भिन्दो वा । भयदो वा भासमानो द्रवतीति वा — Nir. VI.32).

8. Sadyah jatah, forth with increased (Wilson); सद्यः तदानीमेव जातः अस्माभिर्दत्तेन सोमेन प्रवृद्धः —Sayana); one who has immediately gained popularity.

Ṛbhu-sthira (vocative), O mighty and firm in battle ! (ऋभुष्ठिर! महान्-स्थिरः च तयोक्तः —Venkata, ऋभुः=उरु-प्रभूतः, and hence rbhusthira is उरुः प्रभूतः स्थिरश्च संग्रामे स तथोक्तः – Sayana).

Cyautnani, strengths, powers, energies; efforts; strong persons (च्यौत्नमिति बलनाम —Nigh. II.9.; च्यवन्ति शत्रवो येभ्यस्तानि बलानि —Daya. on VII.19.5); praises (च्यौत्नानि स्तोत्राणि —Daya. on I.173.4).

च्यौत्नः—X 50.4

च्यौत्ना—VI.47.2; VIII.2.33

च्यौत्नेन—X.49.11

च्यौत्नैः —VIII 16.6.

Mountains are regarded as the supporters or the stays of the earth (भूमेः कीलवद् धारणाय —Sayana).

Varsisthani, gigantic (वर्षिष्ठानि अतिशयेन प्रवृद्धानि —Sayana).

Parinasa, far reaching (परीणसा परितो न तानि, अतएव 'च्यौत्नानि' इति भाव —Sayana).

Vidu adharayah, वीळु अधारयः fixed them firm (वीळु स्थिराणि—Sayana).

10. Varaham, to a cloud (वराहो मेघो भवति । वराहार —Nir. V.4), Varaha is cloud; it brings (√हृ) the best means of livelihood (वर+आहार); this is supported by a passage from a Brahmana. (untraced) : "वरमाहारमाहर्षि" —इति च ब्राह्मणम् । See also "Vidhyat varaham tiro adrim asta."

विध्यद् वराह् तिरो अद्रिमस्ता (1.61.7) : from afar, he pierced the cloud by hurling his thunderbolt. This other meaning of Varaha (boar) is derived from the same root also; he tears up the roots, or he tears up all the good roots. (अयमपीतरो वराह एतस्मादेव । वृहति मूलानि । वर वर मूल वृहतीति वा —Nir. V.4)

We have a Vedic quotation : "Indra slew the ravening boar" (वराहमिन्द्र एमुषम्—VIII.77.10). Angirasas are also called "Varahas" ब्रह्मणस्पतिर्वृषभिर्वराहैः (the lord of prayer, with the powerfull Angirasas—X.67.7.)

The group of atmospheric gods are called Varahavah (पश्यन् हिरण्य चक्रानयो दंष्ट्रान् विधावतो वराहून् —I.88.5; seeing the groups of atmospheric gods, of golden chariot wheels, of iron-tusks, running) —Nir. V.4.

Sayana gives two interpretations of this verse : (i) The etymological school, Nairukta : Visnu is the sun, the bringer of rain, and also bringer of cattle and food ; the varaha (boar) is one of the personifications of the cloud as smitten by Indra's thunderbolt.

(ii) the school of mythology or tradition, Aitihasika : (For this see Tait. Samhita VI.2 4); the sacrifice went away from the gods in the form of Visnu and entered the earth. The gods sought him grasping hands. Indra passed over him. He said, "who has passed over me ?" "I am he who smites in the stronghold; who art thou ?" "I am he who brings from the strong hold." He said. "Thou art called he who smites in the strong hold. Now a boar, the stealer of the good, keeps the wealth of the Asuras which is to be one beyond the seven hills. Him smite, if thou art he who smites in the stronghold." He plucked out a bunch of darbha grass, pierced the seven hills and smote him. He said, "Thou art called, he who brings from the stronghold; bring him. So the sacrifice bore off the sacrifice for them; in that they won the wealth of the Asuras which was to be won; that alone is the reason why the Vedi is so called',' (i.e. the Upsads). A similar story is given in the Caraka Brahmana also. (For the legend, see I.61.7 also : मुषा यद् विष्णुः पचतं सहीयान् विध्यद् वराहं तिरो अद्रिमस्ता).

11. Bundah, arrow (since it pierces, it inspires awe, or it shines when it flies (बुन्द इषुर्भवति । बिन्दो वा । भिन्दो वा । भयदो वा । भासमानो द्रवतीति वा— Nir. VI.32)

"Thy bow is most powerful, strongly made, and well-shaped. Thy arrow is golden and swift. Both the arms which knock down enemies and increase sweetness for us) are well-equipped and fit for war."

Tuviksam, powerful, having a great capacity of discharging arrows (तुविक्षं बहुविक्षेपं महाविक्षेपं वा —Nir. VI.33)

Sumayam, delightful (सुमयं सुसुखम् —Nir. VI.33)

Ranya=ranyau (रण्या=रण्यौ=रमणीयौ सांग्राम्यौ वा; beautiful or well-equipped for battle

Ṛdupe, knocking down by movement, or by motion (ऋदूपे अर्दनपातिनौ, गमनपातिनौ) or, knocking down by sound or knocking down at a great distance (शब्दपातिनौ दूरपातिनौ वा) —Nir. VI.33.

Cid-ṛdu-vṛdha, चिदृदूवृधा, destructively piercing; piercing the vital parts by movement, by motion; piercing from the sound, or piercing from a distance (मर्मण्यर्दन वेधिनौ. गमनवेधिनौ । शब्दवेधिनौ । दूरवेधिनौ वा) —Nir. VI.33).

Hymn-78

The hymn refers to cows (गोनाम) ; food grains (अन्धस:, 1), condiments (व्यञ्जनम्, 2), horses (अश्वम्, 2); oils or cosmetics (अभ्यञ्जम्), sheep (हिरण्यया, 2; may mean gold vessels also), ear ornaments (कर्णऽशोभना, 3), barley (yavyuh यवऽयु:—seeking yava or barley, 9) along with gavyuh, गव्यु:—seeking cows and hiranyayuh, हिरण्ययु:—seeking gold or sheep, asvayuh, अश्वयु:—seeking horses, 9). The tenth verse refers to datram, दात्रम्, a sickle, held in hand (haste, हस्ते; barley cut and piled (dinasya, दिनस्य, cut; sambhṛtasya, सम्भृतस्य, piled यवस्य, of barley; Kasina, काशिना, handful, same as mustina, मुष्टिना, 10).

The word vrihi (व्रीहि) for rice does not occur in the Ṛgveda; we have the word dhana for fried or parched barley or other grains (धानानाम भृष्टयवाद्यन्नानां —Daya. on Yv. XIX.22; (पक्वान्नविशेषा: —III.35.7; अग्नि संस्कृतान्नविशेषान्—III.35.3; भृष्टान्नानि VI.29.4; यवा: IV.24.7).

धानम् — III.7.6

धाना: — 1.16.2; III.35.3; 7; 52.5-8; IV 24.7; VI.29.4; X.28 1

धानानाम् — VIII.70.12

धानाऽवत् — III 43.4

धानाऽवन्तम् — III.52.1; VIII.91.2.

It is surmised that rice was not known in the Ṛgvedic period; it was introduced during the age of the Atharva-veda, where we have the occurrence of the word vrihi (व्रीहि),—Wilson.

यवम् — I.23.15; 117.21; 176.2; V.85.3; VIII.3.4; VIII.2.3; 22.6; 63.9; X.27.8; 43.7; 131.2

यवऽमत् — VIII.93.3; IX.69.8; X.42.7

Hymn-79

1 Visvajit, (विश्वजित), conquerer of all.

Udbhit, producer of fruit (उद्भित उदभेत्ता —Venkata; फलस्य उद्भेदक —Sayana)

Krtnuh, all creating (कृत्नुः कर्त्ता —Venkata)

Agrbhitah, obustructed by none of the enemies (अगृभीतः शत्रुभि अगृहीतः —Venkata)

Visvajit and Udbhit are also the names of two special Soma ceremonies, and the Soma may be addressed under these names as the principal means of their accomplishment (Wilson) (विश्वजित् सर्वस्य नेता, उद्भित् फलस्योद्भेदकः। अथवा विश्वजिदुभिदौ सोमयागौ। तयोर्निष्पादकत्वात्तद्रूपः —Sayana).

3. Yantasi, (यन्तासि), provide or offer.

Varutham, Shelter, protection (वरूथं वरकम् —Sayana).

"Thou art the restrainer from the enmities etc.; thou art a wide shelter." (Mahidhara on Yv. V.35)

4. Ṛjisin, ऋजीषिन्, O straight forward gentleman : O seeker of truth : (हे तृतीय सवनस्थेन ऋजीषेण तद्वत् —Venkata) (ऋजीषिणं ऋजूनां सरलानां धार्मिकाणां जनानामीषितुं शीलम् —Daya. on VI.42.2; प्रशस्तमुपार्जनं विद्यते यस्मिंस्तम् —on I.64.12; ऋजीषिन् सरलस्वभाव —VII.42.3; ऋजीषि सरलत्वं यस्य प्रति तत्सम्बद्धौ —on VI.17.10) (O Ṛjisin : i e., thou, who possessest the remains of the Soma, offered in the Tṛtiya Savana (third season—of Tait.Samhita· VI.1.6).

6. Atirnam, life not yet crossed; the unending life.

Pra im ayuh tarit atirnam, प्र ईम् आयु: तरित् अतीर्णम्, lengthens out his unending life (i.e the life not yet crossed).

Ut irayati, urges him on (उत् ईरयति प्रवर्धयसि —Venkata).

Hymn-80

Ekadyuh, is the seer of the hymn; the word occurs in verse 10 (एकद्यू:); it means "the lone illuminator", —perhaps thus it refers to the Sun. The word does not occur anywhere else in the Rgveda.

3. Kim anga, किम् अङ्ग, what now (किम् क्षिप्रम् —Venkata).

Radhracodanah, director of the worshipper (रध्रचोदन: रध्रस्य राधकस्य य: चोदयति धनम्—Venkata; रध्रं राधकं चोदयतीति रध्रचोदन: —Sayana).

Sunvanasya avita, guardian of the offerer (सुन्वानस्य अविता, guardian of the faithful).

5. Vajayu, coveting for food or victory (वाजयु अन्नमिच्छत—Venkata; अस्माकमन्नमिच्छत—Sayana).

Sravah, श्रव: , fame; also food (श्रव: अन्नं हविर्लक्षणम्—Sayana).

6. Vajayum, वाजयुम्, coveting for food (or victory) (वाजयुं अन्नमिच्छुम् —Venkata).

8. Urvikastha, far off (उर्वी) is the goal (काष्ठा), (उर्वीकाष्ठा बह्वन्तराल आज्यन्त: । आज्यन्तोऽपि काष्ठोच्यते । 'क्रान्त्वा स्थिता भवति'—cf. Nir.II.15; Say. na).

The word Kastha, काष्ठा, is a synonym of many objects:

(i) Kastha means quarter; they are situated having gone across (तत्र काष्ठा इत्येतदनेकस्यापि सत्वस्य नाम भवति । काष्ठा दिशो भवन्ति । क्रान्त्वा स्थिता भवन्ति).

(ii) Kastha also means intermediate quarters; they are situated having crossed each other (काष्ठा उपदिशो भवन्ति । इतरेतरं क्रान्त्वा स्थिता भवन्ति).

(iii) The Sun is called Kastha also; it is situated having gone across (आदित्योऽपि काष्ठोच्यते । क्रान्त्वास्थितो भवति).

(iv) Destination is called Kastha also; it is situated having gone across (आज्यन्तोऽपि काष्ठोच्यते । क्रान्त्वा स्थितो भवति).

(v) Waters are also called Kastha; they are situated, having gone across i.e. stationary waters (आपोऽपि काष्ठा उच्यन्ते। क्रान्त्वा स्थिता भवन्तीति स्थावराणाम्)—Nir. II.15. (see also अतिष्ठन्तीनामनिवेशनानां काष्ठानां मध्ये निहित शरीरम् —I.32.10).

For Kastha, see:

काष्ठा — VIII.80.8

काष्ठाः — I.37.10; 59.6; 63.5; IV.58.7

काष्ठाम् — VII.93.3; IX.21.7

काष्ठायाः — X.102.9.

काष्ठासु — I.146.5; VI.46.1

Apavṛktah, be excluded

Aratnayah, enemies (अरत्नय. अरममाणाः शत्रवः —Sayana; अदाना: यजमाना: शत्रव: —Venkata)

9. Turiyam nama, the fourth name (Somayaji, सोमयाजी is the fourth name; सोमयाजीति तुरीयं नाम तच्च यज्ञियम् —Sayana).

The first three names pertaining to Yajna (यज्ञियं) are; (i) names pertaining to constellatious, नक्षत्रनाम like Arjunyau, Phalgunyau etc. (ii) the hidden or secret names, गुह्यनाम, (iii) the revealed names (open names), प्रकाशनाम.

In this case, one may refer to the Satapatha Brahmana (II.1.2 11) also. "He may also set up his fires under the Phalgunis. They, the Phalgunis, are Indra's asterism, and even correspond to him in name; for indeed Indra is also called Arjuna, this being his mystic name, and they (the Phalgunis) are also called Arjunis " Hence he overtly calls them Phalgunis, for who dares to use his (god's) mystic name? फल्गुनीष्वनीऽग्रादधीत् । एता वा ऽ इन्द्र नक्षत्र यत्फल्गुन्योऽप्यस्य प्रतिनामन्योऽर्जुनो ह वै नामेन्द्रो यदस्य गुह्यं नामार्जुन्यो वै नामैतास्ता एतत् परोऽक्षमाचक्षते फल्गुन्य इति को ह्येतस्यार्हति गुह्यं नाम गृहीतुम्).

Hymn-81

The Rsi of the hymn is Kusidi of the family of Kanva.

2. Tuvi kurmi, तुविऽकूर्मी, achiever of many great deeds,

Tuvi desnam, तुविऽदेष्णम्, bestower of plentiful gifts.

Tuvi magham, तुविऽमघम्, lord of immense wealth.

Turi matram, तुविऽमात्रम्=बहु प्रमाणम् —Venkata; of huge dimension's or vast in size.

3. Bhimam gam, भीमं गाम, terrible bull.

4. Ait u nu, एत उ नु, come at once, O dear one ! hasten hither.

5. Up gasi-sat, उप गासिषत्, may you sing the upagana or prelude उपगानं च करोतु —Venkata).

Abhi savyena pra mrsa, अभि सव्येन प्र मृषा, may you encourage us with your left hand.

Ma nirbhak, मा निर्भक्, deprive us not; exclude us not.

9. Visva candrah, All-rejoicing (विश्वचन्द्राः सर्वकान्ताः —Venkata; सर्व हिरण्योपेता बहूनामाह्लादका वा —Sayana).

Vasaih full of desires : with all aspirations (वशैः कामैः हेतुभिः — —Venkata; कामैरनेकैर्युक्ताः —Sayana)

Maksu, मक्षू, spontaneously : immediately (मक्षू शीघ्रम् —Sayana)

Hymn-82

4. Asatro , अशत्रो, O the one without any enemy (असपत्न —Venkata).

Upa' me, from close quarters (उपऽमे समीपे —Sayana).

Upa me rocane divah, from the resplendent heaven; in the highest splendour of heaven, from the world of heaven illumined by its own splendour; that is, by deities residing there (दिवः एव तेजसा दीप्यमानात् द्युलोकात् । तत्रस्थैर्देवैरित्यर्थः । रोचने अग्निभिर्दीप्याने च —Sayana)

7 Camasesu, in the bowls; in the cups (चमसेषु एतन्नामकेषु पात्रेषु —Sayana).

Camusu, in the saucers (चमूषु । चमन्ति यजन्त्यत्रेति चम्वो ग्रहाः (चमू=ग्रह) तेषु —Sayana; camu, चमू, is also army.

9. Yam te syenah pada a abharat, यं ते श्येनः पदा ग्रा ग्रभरत् —Whatever the hawk bore, according to traditionalists, this refers to Gayatri, who in the form of a hawk or falcon brought the Soma on earth from heaven (Tait. Samhita VI.1.6.4; At. Br. III. 25-27; गायत्री पक्षिरूपं धारयित्वा पद्भ्यां सोममाहरत् —Sayana) (Refer to kadru-suparna dispute; the metres are the descendents of Suparni. Kadru (earth) told Suparni (heaven). "In the third heaven from here is the Soma; fetch it; and by it buy your release". The Soma could not be brought by any of the metres like the Jagati and the Tristubh. Then the Gayatri flew up, of four syllables, together with a female goat and light. Then the goat won (Soma) for her, and so the goat has the name (aja, ग्रज). The Gayatri brought back the Soma and the four syllables (two of the Jagati and two of the Tristubh which they had lost in the effort of getting the Soma), and so became of eight syllables—Tait. Sam. VI.1.6.4.

Hymn-83

2. Yujah, allies; associate (युजः सहायः —Sayana).

4. Vamam, wealth (वामं धनम् —Venkata).

5. Risadasah, O repeller of enemies (रिशादसः रिशतामसि तारः —Venkata).

Aghasya yat, belongs to sin (ग्रघस्य यत् ग्रघस्य सम्बन्धि —Venkata).

6. Ksiyantah, stay at home (क्षियन्तः गृहेष्वग्निहोत्रार्थं निवसन्तः; stay at home for performing the Agnihotra —Sayana).

Adhvan yantah, go abroad on the road; go out for the collection of fuel etc. for the Agnihotra (ग्रध्वन ग्रध्वनि समिदाहरणार्थं यान्तः गच्छन्तः —Sayana).

7. Indra, इन्द्र, O Indra! O lightning!

Visno, विष्णो, O Visnu! O sun!

Marutah, मरुत: , cloud-bearing wind.

8. Bharamahe, we proclaim (प्रभरणं उच्चारणम् प्रकाशनं वा —Venkata; उच्चारयाम: प्रकाशयामो वा —Sayana).

Samanya, समान्या=सामान्येन (पूर्वं सर्वेषा देवानां सांहृत्येन तत: —Sayana)

Matuh, of the mother; of Aditi (मातु: अदिते: —Sayana).

Garbhe bhratrtvam pra bharamahe, brotherhood of yours in your mother's womb.

There is a legend in the Taittiriya Samhita to this effect (अदिति: पुत्रकामा साध्येभ्यो देवेभ्यो ब्रह्मौदनम पचत् —Tait. S. VI.5.6). Aditi offers a certain offering to the gods, and conceives four of the Adityas on eating the remainder which they gave to her. Thinking to conceive a still nobler offspring, she next eats the whole of the second offering herself, but she only conceives a barren egg. She then offers the third offering to the Adityas and conceives Vivasvat. But here in this legned, there is nothing of the birth of Pusan and Aryaman; though according to Sayana—तस्यै पूषा चार्यमा चाजायेताम्, i.e. these two are also born (Wilson).

Usnas, the son of Kavi, is the seer of this hymn.

2. Dvita, द्विता, in twofold ways; in twofold functions (द्विता द्वैध:).

This refers to Agni, with twofold functions as the garhapatya and the ahavaniya; or else the Agni as cosmic sacrifice and terrestrial fire.

Dvita Martyesu ni a'dadhus, amongst men (द्विता ईधं मर्त्येषु मनुष्येषु नि म्रादधुः । गार्हपत्यं म्राहवनीयं च । यद्वा दिवि वर्तमानस्य पृथिव्यां च यस्य निधानं कृतवन्तः — Venkata).

4. Urjah napat, son of food (नपात् अन्नस्यपुत्र!) (vocative along with Agne and Angirah) (in this verse urjah=food, not fuel).

Varaya manyave, to the venerable pride: to the excellent scorner of enemies (वरांय वरणीयाय मन्यवे अभिमन्यमानाय शत्रून् —Venkata).

5. Yaho, O son; sahasah yaho, O son of a strength (यहो सहसो पुत्र! —Venkata).

7. Gosata, गोऽषाता=गोऽसाता, wealth of kine, wealth of wisdom.

9. Kseti, stays at his home (क्षेति स्वगृहे निवसति —Sayana).

Ksemebhih Sadhubhih, with all efficient protections (क्षेमेभिः पालनैः सह साधुभिः साधयद्‌भिः —Sayana).

Hymn-85

Krsna Angiras is the seer.

The refrain of the verses of this hymn is "मध्वः सोमस्य पीतये"; may ye drink the exhilarating Soma; or for the sake of enjoying or accepting sweet enlightenment.

3. Krsna, कृष्णा, the charming devotee (according to the traditionalists, the name of the seer of this hymn; see Krsnasya, कृष्णस्य in verse 4 also. The tradition assigns to him or to Visvaka (विश्वक) son of Krsna (कार्ष्णि) the authorship of the next hymn VIII. 86. The word Krsniya (कृष्णीय) may be a patronymic formed from the same name in two other hymns of the Rgveda (I.116.23; 117.7), where the Asvins are said to have restored Visnapu to Visvaka Krsniya. In that case, Krsna would seem to be the grandfather of Visnapu—Macdonell and Keith).

7. Rasabham, ass, mule or horse, the animal that makes pleasing sound (रासभं शब्दायमानमेतन्नामकमश्वम्; "रासभावश्विनोः" इति रासभेवावाश्विनो रथस्यवाहनौ —Sayana).

Vidvange, firmly-built; all parts of body firm and strong (वीड्वंगे। वीड्वू दृढः। दृढाङ्गापेते —Sayana).

8. Tribandhurena, त्रिबन्धुरेण, three-seated (त्रिफलका संघाटेन—Venkata).

Trivrta, त्रिवृता, triangular (त्रिवृता त्रिकोणेन —Venkata; Sayana).

Hymn-86

Krsna Angiras, Visvaka or Karsni is the seer of the hymn. The refrain of the hymn is मानो वि यौष्टं सख्यामुमोचतम् (severe not our friendships, but fling loose or set me free).

1. Dasra, दस्रा, wondrous (दस्रा दर्शनीयो); subduer of enemies सर्वेषां शत्रूणामुपक्षपयितारौ —Sayana).

Visvakah, विश्वकः, the family-head (name of a Rsi —Sayana). The word visvaka विश्वक, occurs only in this hymn in the first three verses VIII.86.1-3, and nowhere else in the Rgveda.

Daksasya, of a sage with skill; Prajapati of this name (Sayana).

Tanu'krthe, for the sake of son (तनूऽकृथे पुत्रस्यकृते —Venkata).

Mumocatam set me free; fling loose (मुमोचतम् अस्मानागन्तु रथेस्थित्वाश्व-प्रग्रहान् मुञ्चतम् —Sayana).

2. Vimanah, विमना:, unattentive (a Rsi of this name —Sayana).

Visnapve, for the sake of posterity or son or grandson (विष्णाप्वे मम पुत्रे पौत्रे वा —Venkata).

Visnapu is the name of the Rsi's son or grandson also in mythology.

4. Uta tyam viram avase havamahe, उत त्यं वीरं अवसे हवामहे, we summon that hero for our protection (since it is for the son to protect the father, पुत्रोहि पितरं रक्षति —Sayana).

Rjisinam, the possessor of bliss; the possessor of Soma.

"Rjisin, is generally an epithet of Indra, and is always explained by Sayana, as here," possessor of stale Soma—III.32.1; 36.10 etc.), Rjisa, ऋजीष, also means "enemy-repelling."

ऋजीषम् — I.32.6

ऋजीषिण: — I.87.1; II.34.1; VIII.32.1

ऋजीषिणम् — I.64.12; VI.42.2; VIII.76.5; 86 4;

ऋजीषन् — III.32.1; 36.10; 43.5; 50.3; VI.17.10; 20.2; VII.24.3; VIII.79.4; 96.9

ऋजीषी —III.46.3; IV.16.1; 5; V.40.4; VI.17.2; 18.2; 24.1; VIII.90.5; X.89.5.

5. Ṛtasya Sṛngam, horn of truth (ऋतस्य सत्यस्य श्रृंगं प्रग्रम् —Sayana).

Savita, impeller; the sun; the creator (सविता सर्वस्य स्वस्वकर्मणि प्रेरक: — Sayana).

The verse is in the praise of truth (सत्य प्रशंसा). Ṣayana seems to explain the verse implying that as the sun swerves not from his appointed course, and as truth or adherence to right conquers earthly foes, so the Asvins must fulfil the duties of ancient friendship and hear the Ṛsi's prayer (Wilson).

Hymn-87

1. Dyumni, glorious (द्युम्नी).

According to traditionalists, this may be the sad-Vasisthah (षड् वसिष्ठ:) or Priyamedhah, (प्रियमेध:) or an Angirasa (आंगिरस). (वसिष्ठ पुत्रो द्युम्नीक ऋषिरांगिरस: प्रियमेधो वा —Sayana).

For Dyumni, see — I.36.8; 91.2; VIII.87.1; 89.2; 93.8; 103.9; IX.109.7; X.69.5; 96.3; 159.4; 174.4.

The word dyumnika does not occur in the Ṛgveda. (द्युम्नी प्रशस्तधना, यशस्वी, the well known, rich, famous, glorious—Daya. on I.91.2; बहु प्रशंसा-धनयुक्त, इन्द्र: Yv. XXXIII.95 ; द्युम्नानि बहुविधानि धनानि भवन्ति यस्मिन्—Daya. on I.36.8).

Krivih, well (क्रिविरिति कूपनाम —Nigh. III.23) (कूपो यथा सेके उदकसेचने वृष्टौ भवन्त्यां नाल्पोदको भवति, तद्वत्—Sayana, as a well (with water) in the time of rain).

Gaurau iva, like teo gauras (deers) drink at a pool. Again the same in verse 4.

Irine, at a lake or pool (इरिणे तटाकादिषूदकपानार्थं शीघ्रमागच्छत स्तद्वत् —Sayana).

2. Gharmam, as it drops (घर्मं 'घृ क्षरणदीप्त्योः' पात्रेषु क्षरन्त सोमम् —Sayana; or it may also mean as an earthen pot called mahavira, and signify the milk boiled in it : "Drink Asvins the exhilarating (Soma) and the milk" (Wilson).

Mandasana, rejoicing (मन्दसाना सोमपानेन मोदमानौ —Sayana).

3. Priyamedhah, those whose sacrifices are acceptable; worshippers (प्रियमेधः । मेधोयज्ञः प्रियतमयज्ञाः यजमानाः —Sayana). There is also a Rsi of the name Priyamedha in mythology; the plural is used as a token of respect (पूजायां बहुवचनम्).

5. Dasra, full of glory; worth seeing; the subduer of enemies (दस्रा दस्रौ दर्शनीयौ उपक्षयितारौ; epithet of Asvins—Sayana).

Hymn-88

The Ṛsi is Nodhas

1. Svasaresu, in the stalls (स्वसरेषु । स्वसराणि अहानि स्वयंसारीण्यपि वा । स्वरादित्यो भवति । स एनानि सारयति), svasarani means days; they move of their own accord. Or else, Svar means the sun; he causes them to move Nir. V.4): See I.3.8 (उस्रा इव स्वसराणि).

Normally, the word means days, but whilst Sayana takes it as "days" in the first clause, "We praise thee in the days" सूर्यनेतृकेषु दिवसेषु वयमभिष्टुम:), in the second clause he interprets the same word as "Stalls" (तत्र दृष्टान्त: । वत्सं न यथा धेनव: नव प्रसूतिका धेनव: स्वसरेषु । सुष्ट्वस्यन्ते प्रेर्यन्ते गावोऽत्रेति स्वसराणि गोष्ठानि).

Vasoh=Vasayituh, (cf. VI.16.25), in the excellent beverage (वसो: वासयितुर्द्ु:खस्य निवासयितु: । यद्वा । वसो: पात्रे निवसत: —Sayana).

2. Ksumantam, Sound-producing (क्षुमन्त शब्दवन्तम् —Venkata; also renowned (क्षुमन्त शब्दवन्तम् । "टुक्षु शब्दे" । अनेन पुत्रादिकं लक्ष्यते । स्तोत्रादीनि कुर्वाणम् — Causing praises by means of the children which it will produce — Sayana)

4. Gotamah, enlightened sages; the sons of Gotama, like Nodhas —Sayana); the most devoted worshipper (गोतम: गच्छतीति गो: स्तोता, सोऽतिशयन: —Daya. on I.62 13; विद्यायुक्तो जन: —on I.78.2; बहुधेनुयुक्त: —on, I.79 4; मेधावी —on I.183.5; गोतमा: अतिशयेन स्तोतार: — on I.78.1).

Hymn-89

For verse, 7, see Nir. VI.14.

Nṛmedha and Purumedha of the Angirasa family are the Ṛsis.

1. Ṛtavṛdhah, Upholder of truth; devoted to knowledge and truth (eternal laws) ऋतावृध: य ऋतेन वेद विज्ञानेन वर्धन्ते, तान् —Daya. on Yv. XIX.65; सत्यविद्या वर्धका: —on VI 52.10; ऋतावृधा यावृतेन जलेन यथार्थतया शिल्पक्रियया वा वर्धेते तौ अश्विनौ; or यावृतेन सत्यानुष्ठानेन वर्धेते तौ अश्विनौ —Daya. on I.47.1.

6. Arkah, अर्क: , hymns of RK.

Haskṛtih, that which indicates pleasure and satisfaction; joyous (हस्कृति: हर्षस्य सूचक: —Venkata).

Yat jatam yat ca jantaam, यत् जातं यत् च जन्त्वम्, whatever has been or will be born.

7. Girvanah, a god (गिर्वणा देवो भवति। गीर्भिरेनं वनयन्ति —Girvanah means a god; they win him over with hymns.

Justam girvanase bṛhat, जुष्टं गिर्वणसे बृहत्, the agreeable; the sublime hymn to the god—Nir. VI.14.

Hymn-90

1. Ṛcisamah, worthy of praise (ऋचीषम: स्तुत्या सम: —Venkata).

Param' jyah, परमज्या: , the mighty crusher or subduer (परमज्या: प्रकर्षेण क्षपयिता —Venkata).

5. Ṛjisi, lover or possessor of divine elixir (ऋजीषीऽपार्जितोऽभिष्टुत: सोम: , तद्वान् – Sayana).

6. Asura, O living one, O Lord of vital breath (असुर ! हे बलवन् ! Venkata, बलवन्, प्राणवन् ! – Sayana)

Kṛttih, कृत्ति: ; the word has several meanings, (Nir. V.22) (i) fame or glory; and also food;

The word is derived from √कृत्. to cut; it signifies fame or food

(कृत्ति: कृन्तते: । यशो वा । अन्नं वा): Great like fame is thy protection, O Indra—महीव कृत्ति: शरणा त इन्द्र as in the present verse VIII.90.6. (O Indra, thy protection in the atmosphere is very great indeed like fame—सुमहत्त इन्द्र शरणमन्तरिक्षे कृत्तिरिवेति —Nir.).

(ii) Krttih also means garment; the word is derived from the same root √कृत् (इयमपीतरा कृत्तिरेतस्मादेव); it is made of cotton-threads—सूत्रमयी.

Clad in skin, trident in hand, and with bow outstretched—कृत्तिवासा: पिनाकहस्तो अवतत धन्वा—Kathaka Sam. IX.7; cf. अवतत धन्वा पिनाकवास: etc Yv. III.61; SBr II. 6.2.17; and अवततधन्वा कृत्तिवासा: पिनाकहस्त: —Tait. Sam. I.8.6.2), also wander about wearing the skin garment and come to us hearing the trident —कृत्तिवसान आचर पिनाकं बिभ्रदागहि—Yv. XVI.51.

(iii) The word is also used for the sake of comparison; (बाहू राजन्य: कृत: —X.90.12). This explained by Durga as giving the third meaning of the word i.e. 'a skin', from the analogy of a cotton garment.

Hymn-91

The Ṛsika of the hymn is Apala (अपाला), the daughter of Atri. Wilson summarizes the legend of Apala from Satyayana Brahmana thus;

Apala, the daughter of Atri, being afflicted with a disease of the skin, was repudiated by her husband. She returned to her father's hermitage and there practised penance. One day she went out to bathe, intending to make a Soma offering to Indra, and as she was returning, she found some Soma plants in the road. She gathered them and ate them as she walked. Indra hearing the sound of her jaws, thought it was the sound of the Soma stones, and appeared to her, asking whether there were any Soma stones braising there. She explained the reason of the sound, and Indra turned away. She called after him, "Why dost thou turn away? Thou goest from house to house to drink the Soma, now then drink the Soma ground by my teeth and eat fried grains of barley." She then added, without paying him respect, "I know not whether thou art Indra, but if thou comest to my house, I will pay thee due honour."

Feeling however sure that it was really Indra's he addressed the later half of the third verse to the Soma in her month. Indra then, falling in love with her, drank the Soma as she wished. She then triumphantly exclaimed (V.4): "I have been repudiated by my husband, and yet Indra comes to me." Indra then granted her a boon and she thus chose "my father's head is bald, his field is barren, and my body is destitute of hair; make these things grow". Indra granted the three boons.

2. Karambha, करम्भ, a mixture of fried barley, meal and butter and curds.

The word Apala, अपाला, occurs only once in the Rgveda (VIII.91.7), which means maiden, yet to be married (just as the word "pati", one that offers protection means a husband also, similarly the one who has not yet received protection, i.e., is yet unmarried, is known as Apala).

Apala, the unmarried virgin, is seeking Soma, the young person with blooming youth, a brahmacarin. Sruta (श्रुता) is that girl who has taken a purificatory bath after her menses, or the one who has completed her studies in the asrama of her preceptor; now it is for her to select the young man for her companionship (ब्रह्मचर्येण कन्या युवानं विन्दते पतिम् — Av. XI.5.18; अर्यमणं यजामहे सुबन्धुं पतिवेदनम् । उर्वारुकमिव बन्धनात्प्रेत: मुञ्चामि नामुत: — Av XIV.1.17); त्र्यम्बकं यजामहे सुगन्धिं पतिवेदनम् । उर्वारुकमिव बन्धनादितो मुक्षीय मामुत: — Yv.III.60).

This pativedana is indicated by the term sruta api vidat (verse 1) i.e. obtain or choose the husband with the feelings of love and attraction. The word "astam bharanti" means establishing herself in the household life (gṛhastha, गृहस्थ).

2. The verse (2) has the term virakah वीरक:, the boy hero with whom apala, the maiden, is going to be married. The word jambhe-suti, pressed by my teeth, means in this context the child born of the union of the two, husband and wife (जम्भसुतम् । जाया च पतिश्च जम्पती । जायतेऽस्यां जनयति इति वा जाया । बिभर्ति इति भ: । उभौ जम्भौ । ताभ्यामुत्पन्नो जम्भसुत: तम् । धानवन्तम् । धानं आधानम्, गर्भाधानसंस्कारवन्तम् । स्वयं विधिवत् आहितम् । करम्भिणम् । करम्य: करम्भ: । करोते रम्भच् प्रत्यय: । क्रियावान् कर्मकुशल: । अपूपवन्तम् । अपदूरे आचार्यगृहे उपवन्तं उपवीतवन्तम् । मध्यमपद-लोप: उक्थिनम । उक्थो वेदो गुरूपदेशो वा तद्वन्तम्).

3. In this verse, the young man to the married, is in the intense love for the girl, and is known as indu, इन्दु. Indu becomes Indra after marriage.

4 The verse has been addressed to such a husband or Indra, who is rich enough to maintain the family.

5, 6. The maiden demands three things from the husband, (i) growth on father's head (the word tata, तत, also means the dear son, तनोति सन्ततिमिति तत: , i.e. the husband. (ii) her own fertility and (iii) the fertility of the agricultural land.

7. Rathasya khe, in the void or whole of the chariot.

Anasah khe, in the void of the cart.

Yugasya khe, in the void of the yoke.

This refers to the three means of transport.

Surya-tvacam, with the splendour of the sun (सूर्यत्वचं सूर्यसमान त्वचम् । त्वग्दोषमपगम्य सूर्यसदृशकान्तिमिन्द्र: करोति – the blemishes of skin are removed and replaced by the shining skin—Sayana).

Trih putvi akṛnoh, thrice did'st thou purify, According to the legend quoted by Sayana, Indra dragged Apala through the wide hole (kha) of the chariot, the narrower hole of the cart and finally through a small hole of the yoke, and she cast off three skins. The first skin became a hedge hog, the second an alligator, and the third chameleon. According to wilson, and also Prof. Ausfrecht, the hole or space of the chariot and cart represents the opening between the four wheels; the whole of the yoke is the opening through which the animal's head passed. (Homer's II 19,406).

Hymn-92

For verse 22, see Nir. VI.24.

The Ṛsi of the hymn is Srutakaksa or Sukaksa Angirasa.

1. Visvasaham, subduer of all enemies (विश्वासाहम्=विश्वऽसहम्, सर्वेषां शत्रूणामभिभवितारं सर्वेषां भूतजातानां वा —Sayana).

Satakratum, the accomplisher of cent per cent selfless actions; the knower of numerous disciplines of learning, and the accomplisher of a variety of actions (शतक्रतुं बहुविध प्रज्ञानं बहुविधकर्माणां वा—Sayana).

2. Gathanyam, worth singing (गाथान्यं गानयोग्यं गातव्यम्—Sayana).

3. Mahanam, of great (महानां महतां).

Vajanam, variety of foods (वाजानां अन्नानाम् or महानाम्। वर्णव्यत्यय:।

मघाना वाजानामन्नानाम् च).

Nṛtuh, the leader of worshippers, cows etc. (नृतु: स्तोतृभ्यो गवादि नेता —Sayana; Unadi —नृतिशृध्यो कू: —I.91).

4. Sudaksasya, of an enlightened devotee; (according to traditionalists, Sudaksa, सुदक्ष, is the name of a Ṛsi).

Prahosinah, assiduously engaged in worship or sacrifice (प्रहोषिण: प्रकर्षेण देवान् हविर्भिर्जुह्वत· —Sayana); प्रकर्षेण जुह्वत: —Venkata. The word does not occur anywhere else in the Ṛgveda. For Prahose (प्रहोषे), see I.150.2 (प्रहोषे यो जुहोति तस्मै—Daya) (प्र+हु दानादानयो:); प्र+होषि=प्रजुहोमु —VI.44.14; दानादानयो: —Daya.].

Yavasirah, यवाशिर:, Soma beverage cooked with barley (यवऽआशिर: । श्रीङ् पाके । यवैरामिश्रित यवै: सह पक्वम्—Sayana).

Andhasah, food, here Soma (अन्धस: सोमलक्षणमन्नम् —Sayana).

6. Visvabhi bhuvana, विश्वाभि भुवना=विश्वानि भुवनानि all worlds.

9. Parye dhane, by the wealth of enemies (पार्ये पारा: शत्रव: तत्र भवे । धने आजिहीर्षि ते शत्रुधने —Sayana).

11. Dhiyah, धिय:, wisdom.

Dhi'vatah, धीऽवत:, the possessor of wisdom.

Arvat'bhih, अर्वतऽभि:, by vigour; by horses (सर्वतो गन्तृभि: त्वया दत्तै अश्वै: —Sayana).

Godare, Cleaver of mountains (गोऽदरे गवां पर्वतानां दारयितर्हे—from √दृ, विदारणे, to cleave—Sayana).

12. Yavasesu, यवसेषु, on the pastures (gavah na yavasesu), cattles with different kinds of pastures (गावो न यथा गोपालः यवसेसु तृणविशेषेषु गावो गाः पशून् —Sayana).

15. Sanisthaya, most bounteous; by the induction; by thy action; by your gift (सनिष्ठया । 'षणु दाने' सनादेर्दातृतमया).

Ghoraya, awful (घोरया सपत्नानां भयकारिण्या).

Dravitnva, Many-cherishing, speedy; foe-repelling (द्रवित्न्वा द्रावयित्र्या —Venkata, शत्रूणां पलायित्र्या —Sayana).

Sam Avid-dhi, protect us from all sides; protect us at once (अविड्ढि समन्तात् पालय—Sayana, सम् अभिपालय —Venkata).

18. Visvasu Krstisu, among all votaries; or faithful devotees; amongst all cultured persons (विश्वासु कृष्टिषु सर्वेषु सोमस्य दातृषु यजमानेषु —Sayana, विश्वेषु यजमानेषु —Venkata).

19. Arkam, अर्कम्, songs of praise.

Karavah, कारवः, poets.

20. Sapta-Sansadah, the seven invokers (सप्तसंसदः सप्तहोता· —Venkata; five sense organs, mind and intellect, thus seven; सम्यक् यज्ञेषु कर्मकरणार्थं सीदन्तीति संसदम् —Sayana; सम्यक् सीदन्ति यासु ता सभाः —Daya. on Yv. XXVI.1).

Trikadrukesu, in three regions (see VIII.13.18, which adds two more words तदावृधम् at the end—तमिद वर्धन्तु नो गिरा तदावृधम्). According to Sayana, the three kadrukas are Jyotih (ज्योति:, light), Gauh (गो: , cows) and Ayuh (आयु: , life) (त्रिकद्रुकेषु आभिप्लविकेषु अहः सु । ज्योतिगोरायुरिति त्रिकद्रुकाः)—The first three days of Abhiplava, a religious ceremony which lasts six days and is a part of the gavamayana, गवां अयन, sacrifice. The first three days are known as jyotis, go and ayus and the last three days are known as go, ayus, and jyotis.—Wilson.

22. "आ त्वा विशन्त्विन्दवः", for this much see I.15.1 also; Yaska quotes आ त्वा विशन्त्विन्दव आ गल्दा धमनीम् (Nir. VI.24; let the Soma draughts flow into thee, aye; and the extracted juices of vessels. Galda means juices thus extracted in the vessels, or dhamanis), See गल्दया, galdaya,—VIII.1.20

10. Tanve, तन्वे, for my son, (तनेति कुमभिति तनूस्तनयः। तस्मै पुत्राय — —Sayana).

Anga, —instantly (अङ्ग क्षिप्रम्).

Kuvit, कुवित्, ample (wealth) (कुवित् बहुनामैतत् —Sayana).

13. Amsumatim, अंशुमतीम् by the side of celestial ocean (name of a river—Sayana, Venkata).

Krsnah, कृष्णः, the demon of nescience, Sayana quotes a legend: Indra aided by Brhaspati and the Maruts slew the asura Krsna (कृष्ण), who with ten thousand other asuras had occupied the river Amsumati (perhaps the present Yamuna). The Brhaddevata also gives a legend: Soma being afraid of Vrtra, took refuge with kuru by the river Amsumati; Indra followed it with Brhaspati and the Maruts, and begged it to return. It however, refused and attempted to resist, but it was ultimately conquered and carried back to the gods, who drank it and in consequence, vanquished the demons.

Drapsa, द्रप्स,=सोम, Soma; the dropping; swift moving.

Amsumati, the sunlight (Benfey) and Indra in the parable is the Sun, behind the cloud.

Krsna, cloud, the demon of nescience.

16. Saptabhyah jayamanah asatrubhyah, the seven born without any enemy of theirs (कृष्ण, वृत्र, नमुचि, शम्बर and others; the seven types of clouds like nimbus, cumglus, stratus, etc.)

Hymn-97

The Ṛsi of the hymn is Rebha (see verse 11 for this term, Rebhas).

3. Adevayuh, careless of gods; ungodly in actions (अदेवयुः देवान् युष्मान कामयमानः —Sayana).

Anusvapam, sleeping away (अनुस्वापम् अनुवृत्तस्वप्न यथा भवति तथा —Sayana; Venkata).

Avratah, regardless of duties (अव्रतः व्रतरहितो भूत्वा —Sayana).

Rayim, wealth (रयिं धनम्).

5. Vistapi, in some region (विष्टपि विष्टपे तत्सम्बन्धे कस्मिंश्चित् स्थाने — —Sayana).

8. Jaritre, for the sake of praiser (जरित्रे स्तोत्रे); जरिता:- स्तावकः — Daya. on V.63 3; स्तोता on IV.17.19;(जरित्रे विद्यागुण प्रकाशकाय याचमानायाऽर्याचिताय वा on IV.24.21; स्तुत्याय on IV.16.18).

11. Rebhasah, the praisers (रेभासः स्तोतारः —Venkata) (रेभति अर्चनकर्मा, Nigh, III.14; रेभः स्तोतृनाम —Nigh, III.16; see VI.3.6).

12. Mesam, rain sprinkling; joy-bestowing; also ram (मेषम् । सेचनकर्त्तारम् —Daya. on Yv. XXI.40; वृष्टिद्वारासेक्तारम् —on I.51.1; सुखजलाभ्यां सर्वान् सेक्तारम् —on I.52.1; यो मिषति स्पर्द्धते स पशुः —on Yv. XIX.90; अवि-जातिविशेषः —on Yv. XXIV.30).

14. Bhisarejete, भीषारेजेते, tremble by way of fear (भीषा भीत्या रेजेते कम्पन्ते —Venkata; भीषा त्वत्तो भीत्या रेजेते कम्पते —Sayana) (cf. अरेजेतां रोदसी; द्यावापृथिवी, 1.31.3).

15. Visva'psnyasya, विश्वप्स्न्यस्य, here psa, प्स is the name of form, रूपनाम, and hence of multiform or manifold in its kinds.

Hymn-98

The Ṛsi for verse 1, see Nir VII.2, is Nṛmedha of the family of Angiras.

1. Indraya Sama gayata, इन्द्राय साम गायत, chant the Saman verses for the sake of Indra. This line is quoted by Yaska (Nir. VII.2), as an illustration where the deity (as Indra here) is addresed indirectly (परोक्षकृता:). Such verses or stanzas are composed in all the cases (vibhaktis) of nouns, but the verb of the third person only (तत्र परोक्षकृता: सर्वाभिर्नाम विभक्तिभिर्युज्यन्ते । प्रथम पुरुषैश्चाख्यातस्य).

3. Rocanam divah, light or the sun of the sky (दिव: आदित्यस्य रोचनम् —Venkata; "thou has pervaded and illumined by the light heaven which manifests the Sun. (as being its receptacle)" (दिव: आदित्यस्य रोचनं प्रकाशकमधिकरणत्वेन —Sayana).

6. Manoh vṛdhah, the fosterer of man (मनो: मनुष्यस्य वृध: वर्धयिता —Venkata; मनुष्यस्य यागादिक कुर्वत: वृध: वर्धक: Sayana, man being the one who offers sacrifice).

7. Sasṛjmahe udeva yantah udabhih, men going by water (splash their friends) with handfuls; or, as men going by waters (उदेव यन्त:), i.e., a river or the waters, that is the sea (समुद्र लक्षणं.) desire an eightfold gain. (यथा उदकेन गच्छन्त: पुरुषा अञ्जलिनोत्क्षिप्य उदकै: समीपस्थान् संसृजन्ति —Venkata; उदेव यथोदकेन यन्त: गच्छन्त: उदभि: अञ्जलिना उत्क्षिप्य उदकै: समीपस्थान् पुरुषान् क्रीडार्थं संसृजन्ति — Sayana).

8. Vah na tva yavyabhih vardhanti, as the lake swells with rivers, so our praises augment thee (yavyabhih, with rivers, नदीभि: "अवनयो यव्या: — Nigh. I.13, अवनय: = यव्या: = नदीनाम).

10. A bhara viram pṛtana'saham, bring us a host-over powering champion, i e a son (Wilson) (पृतनाषहं सेनासहं सेनाभिभवितारम्).

Hymn-99

For verses 3 and 4, see Nir. VI. 8 and VI.23 respectively.

1. Ida, इदा, today (इदा = अद्य — Venkata).

Hyah, ह्य:, tomorrow.

Bhurnayah, ready with oblations (भूर्णय: हविर्भिर्भरणशीला: — Sayana); benevolent ruler; opulent.

3. "Dependent on the sun as it were, all will indeed divide the wealth of Indra among the born and yet to be born, with vigour; we did not think of every share."

Absolutely dependent they approach the sun (समाश्रिता: सूर्यमुपतिष्ठन्ते). Or else, it may have been used for the sake of comparison, i.e. they approach Indra as if he were the sun (अपि वोपमार्थं स्यात्। सूर्यमिवेन्द्रमुपतिष्ठन्त इति). Distributing all the treasures of Indra: as he distributes treasures among those who are born and who are yet to be born (सर्वाणीन्द्रस्य धनानि विभमाणा: । स यथा धनानि विभजति जाते च जनिष्यमाणे च) Let us think of that portion with vigour, with strength, (तं वयं भागमनुध्यायाम् । ओजसा बलेन).

Ojas, vigour, (ओज ओजतेर्वा, उब्जतेर्वा, the word is derived from √ओज्, to be strong, or from √उब्ज, to subdue).—Nir. VI.8.

4. Anarsaratim vasudam upa stuhi, अनर्शरातिं वसुदामुप स्तुहि, praise well the giver of wealth whose gifts are not vulgar.

Anarsadatim,, अनर्शदातिम् one whose gifts are not vulgar. Vulgar, sinful, unpleasant, crooked (अनर्शरातिमनश्लीलदानम् अश्लीलं पापकम् —Nir VI.23).

5. Visvatuh, विश्वतु: , smiter of all the enemies (विश्वतु: सर्वस्य शत्रुवर्गस्य हिंसिता).

Asastiha, अशस्तिहा, smiter of all the demons (देव्यानां अशस्तीनां हन्ता).

Praturtisu, in the conflict or battle (प्रतूर्तिषु सग्रामेषु —Sayana).

Visvah sprdhah, all the forces of the enemy (विश्वा: सर्वा: स्पृध: युद्धकारिणी: शत्रुसेना: —Sayana).

Turya, O the opposer of enemy! (हे तूर्य! शत्रूणां बाधकेन्द्र!) an epithet for Indra

7. Tugryavrham, augmenter of water (तुग्र्यावृधं उदकस्य वर्धयितारमिन्द्रम् —Sayana; तुग्र्या=उदक=water, Nigh. I.12).

8. Iskartaram, इष्कर्तारम्, the consecrator of enemies (शत्रूणां संस्कर्तारम् —Sayana).

Anih'krtam, अनि:स्कृतम्, consecrated by none.

Vasavanam, hiding treasures in his stores (वसवान धनान्याच्छादयन्तम — Sayana).

Vasujuvam, sender of wealth to his worshippers (वसुजुव यजमानेभ्यो वसूनां प्रेरयितारम् —Sayana).

Hymn-100

For verses 10 and 11, see Nir. XI.28. and XI 29 respectively. For verses 10 and 11, the Rsi is Vac and the term occurs in both these verses.

1. Maya krnavah viryani, Put fourth thy strength on my side. यदा त्वं मह्यं शत्रुषु स्थितं भागं दीघर: धारयसि इन्द्र! अनन्तरं एव मया सह मच्छत् जेतु वीर्याणि कृणव: कुर्या:—Venkata, i.e. if thou wishest to give me the wealth of my enemies, come and help me to overcome them (शत्रुजयार्थं गच्छत: सपुत्रस्य मम साहाय्य कुरु, यदि शत्रुधनं मह्यं दित्ससि —Venkata, in that case, help me along with the son while you proceed to overcome the enemy).

3. Vajayantah, in case you intend to proceed to the battle field (वाजयन्त: संग्राममिच्छन्त:)· war loving companion.

Prabharata, प्रभरत=प्रहरत, offer fervently.

Nemah um iti tvah aha, नेम. ऊँ इति त्वा: आह-न इन्द्र: अस्ति, Nema says, "verily, there is no Indra" The word nemah means certain persons, like, agnostics. To those who raise doubts in the benevolence and existence of the supreme Lord Indra, Indra replies forcefully in the next verse—(4).

6. Paravatam: पारावतम्, paradise, According to Sayana, the name of a certain enemy. Literally, it means brought from afar; existing afar. (परावन्नाम्न: कस्यचित् स्वभूतम् —Venkata).

Sarabhaya, शरभाय, austere sage (according to traditionalists Sarabha is a Ṛsi).

Purusambhṛtm, पुरुसंभृतम् —collected by many (—Venkata); that wealth of Paravat thou hast opened (अपऽअवृणोः) to Sarabha, so that it may be collected by many. (Sayana).

7 Sayana reads नि for न of the second line, and seems to explain the verse: "that enemy who was running forward and stayed not apart and did not hinder (अवावरीत्) you, Indra has thrown (अपीपतत्—नितरां अपातयत) his belt in the vitals of that enemy (वृत्रस्य मर्मणि)"

Wilson's rendering is thus:

"Haste now severally forward; he is not here who stopped your way,—has not Indra let fall his thunderbolt in the very vitals of that enemy?"

8. Again a reference to suparna (Gayatri) who brought soma from heaven.

10. When vac, (वाक्), speaking unknown words (अविचेतनानि) sat down as the charming queen (राष्ट्री), of the Gods, the four (चतस्र) milked (दुदुहे) food and milk, but where did her best portion go (क्व: स्विदस्या: परमं जगामेति)

When Vac, speaking unknown, i.e. unintelligible, words (अविचेतनानि अविज्ञातानि) sat down as the charming pleasing queen of the gods (राष्ट्री देवानां निषसाद मन्द्रा मदना), all the four quarters milked food and waters (चतस्रोऽनुदिश ऊर्जं दुदुहेपयांसि). But where did her best portion go? (क्व स्विदस्याः परमं जगामेति). It may be that which goes to the earth or that which is taken away by the rays of the sun (यत्पृथिवीं गच्छतीति वा । यदादित्यरश्मयो हरन्तीति वा)—Nir. XI.28.

11 The gods (देवाः) generated the divine speech (देवीं वाचं अजनयन्त). Animals (पशवः) of all shapes (विश्वरूपाः) speak it (वदन्ति). May that charming milch cow (सा नो मन्द्रा दुहाना धेनुः), in the form of speech (वाक्), bestowing on us strength-giving food (अस्मान् उप इषं ऊर्जं) easily (सुष्टुता) approach us (उप आस्तु).

The gods generated the goddess Vac; animals of all shape speak it, i e. the animals whose sounds are articulate and those whose sounds are inarticulate (देवीं वाचमजनयन्त देवाः । तां सर्वरूपाः पशवो वदन्ति । व्यक्तवाचश्चाव्यक्त-वाचश्च). May that pleasant milch cow, in the form of Vac bestowing food and juice on us, easily approach us (सा नो मदनान्न च रस च दुहाना धेनुर्वागस्मानुपैतु सुष्टुता)—Nir. XI.29.

Visvarupah, विश्वरूपाः, of all forms, shapes or kinds (Venkata and Sayana mean all the creatures speaking articulate or inarticulate sounds (सर्वा रूपा व्यक्तवाचश्चाव्यक्तवाचश्च, the idea taken from Yaska).

12. Dehi lokam vajraya viskambhe, देहि लोकं वज्राय विस्कम्भे, give room to contain the thunderbolt. The Bṛhad-devata gives a legend in this connection:

'Vṛtra had enveloped the three worlds and stood there in his fierce energy, Indra could not conquer him, and he went to Visnu and said, "I will smite Vṛtra; do thou stride forth and stand by my side, and let the heavens give room for my uplifted thunderbott, Visnu consented and did so and heavens gave an open space. All this is related in the verse" (Wilson). Obviously all this refers to clouds, the sun and lightning.

Hymn-101

Jamadagni of the family of Bhrgu is the seer of the hymn. For the word Jamadagni; see verse 8.

Jamadagni, जमदग्नि=jamat+agni (जमत्ऽअग्नि). see:

जमदग्निऽदत्ता —III.53.15

जमदग्निऽवत् —VIII.96 3; IX.97 51.

Jamadagni'datta, जमदग्नि दत्ता, cognized by eye: the self evident (जमदग्निदत्ता चक्षुषा प्रत्यक्षेण दत्ता; Jamadagni is eye, चक्षुर्वै जमदग्निर्ऋषिः —SBr. VIII.1.2.3 Daya. on III.53.15).

Jamadagnina, जमदग्निना, evidently cognized by eye (चक्षुषा प्रत्येक्षण — Daya. on III.62.18).

Jamadagnih, जमदग्निः=प्रज्वलिताग्नि =नयनम्, the eye (Daya on Yv. XIII.56, jamat=जमत्=synonym of jvalatah, Nigh I 17, a name concerning fire, flame, or ignition: We have in Nir. VII 24, जमत्ऽअग्निभिः आहुतः Asva-layana Srauta Sutra, VIII 9). i.e. sacrificed with blazing fires. Blazing fires, i e. profusely generated fires, or burning fires; it is with them that the sacrifice is made. (जमदग्नय: प्रजमिताग्नयो वा । प्रज्वलिताग्नयो वा).

1. Ittha, इत्था, truth, reality; in this way; (Nigh. III.10; the synonyms for truth, सत्य, are बट्, श्रत्, सत्रा, श्रद्धा इत्था and ऋत, (for ittha, see V 59 2, बट्+इत्था=बलित्था) (See Yv. XXXIII.87 for this verse).

Mitra, मित्र, light; in-breath.

Varuna, वरुण, bliss; up-breath.

Ṛdhak, ऋधक्, truth, truly, verily (य: संमृध्नोति स: —Daya.; संमृद्धियंथा स्यात् तथा—Daya. Yv. VIII.20; स्वीकारे, III.25.1; सत्ये VII.57.4; यथार्थम् VI.40.5.

Devatataye, for the good of every one; for the sacrifice; for a control on mind and sense organs. Also for attaining divine qualities (देवतातये दिव्यगुण प्राप्तये —Daya. III.26.2; देवेभ्य: विद्वद्भ्यो दिव्यगुणेभ्यो वा —Daya.)

"Verily that man who worships Mitra and Varuna (friend and venerable lord) for the attainment of his desires and the one who gives oblations, becomes thereby perfectly tranquil and able to perform the sacrifice (ऋधग् देवतातये)" (Mahidhara).

Havyadataye, हव्यदातये, to the offerer; to the Yajamana (हव्यदातये हव्यानामादातुमर्हणामादानाय —Daya.).

2. Bahutana, बाहुता न, like two arms (बाहुता भुजौ न इव —Venkata), that is, they obtain the sacrifice as the arms accomplish an object (यथा भुजौ स ह कर्म प्रविशत:, तद्वत् यज्ञं प्राप्नुत इति —Venkata).

3. Ayah'sirsa, अय:शीर्षा, iron (or golden) helmet (हिरण्यालङ्कृत शिरस्क: —Venkata).

5. Varuthyam, produced in the sacrificial chamber (वरूथ्यं यज्ञगृहभवम् —Venkata; यज्ञगृहे भवम् —Sayana).

Rajasu, to the kings (राजसु-मित्रादीन् राज्ञ:, i.e. Mitra, Varuna, Aryaman etc. —Venkata).

6. Jenyam, victory-giving; also what is to be conquered or won (जेन्यं जयसाधनम् —Venkata).

Vasu=vasum, the sun as one of the Vasus, "they send him for the dispelling of darkness of the three worlds." (ते प्रेरयन्ति अरुणवर्णं जयसाधनम् वसु इति । एतदेव आह एकम् पुत्रम् त्रिसृणाम् पृथिव्यादीनाम् आदित्यं प्रेरयन्ति —Venkata).

Vasu may also mean wealth or gold; then "it was these who sent the red gold victory—giving", or "the reward of victory." (Wilson)

10. Adhvaryuh veti, अध्वर्युः वेति, the priest comes; i.e. from the havirdhanam, a cart for the Soma (वेति गच्छति अध्वर्युः हविर्धानात् रजिष्ठैः ऋजुतमैः पथिभिः मार्गैः —Venkata).

Rajisthaih रजिष्ठैः, by the straight—most, or by the shortest path.

Niyutvah, O Lord of the vital world; O Lord of the Niyut steeds.

11. See Yv. XXXIII.39; Bat, बट्, synonym of truth, Nigh. III.10.

Panasyate addha, पनस्यते अद्धा, is praised rightly.

12. See Yv. XXXIII.40.

Asuryah, slayer of the asuras (असुर्यः असुराणां हन्ता —Venkata); also beneficient to living beings—Mahidhara. Also असुर्यः=असुभ्यः प्राणेभ्यो हितः परमेश्वरः —Daya. on Yv.XXXIII.40).

13 Dasasu bahusu, from the ten quarters or cardinal directions

(दशसु बाहुषु स्थानीयासु दिक्षु इति —Venkata).

In this verse, we have a praise of Usas or dawn or the light of the sun (उषसः स्तुतिः सूर्यप्रभाया वा —Sayana).

14 Haritah, the quarters (दिशो वै हरितस्ता ग्रयं पवमान ग्राविष्टः —Venkata).

To explain this verse, the Satapatha Brahmana (II.5.1.4; 5) gives a legend: Prajapati desired to create, and after intense penance, produced in succession three kinds of creatures (प्रजा हि तिस्रः)—birds, small snakes (Sarisrpa, सरीसृप), and serpents, but they all died. He then reflected on the cause of the failure; and perceiving it to be the want of nourishment, he caused milk to be produced in his own breasts. After this, he created a fourth kind, which were thus fed and lived. The other (ग्रन्याः) are those which thus survived.

Bṛhat, the great; this refers to the sun; and alternatively to Prajapati (बृहत् महान् ग्रसावादित्यः । प्रजापतिरित्येके—Sayana).

For the cretion, compare Ait. Br. II.1.1 and SBr, II.5.1.1-5 .

16. Vacovidam vacam ut' irayantim, (the cows) who herself utters speech and gives speech to others. So long as men are hungry, they remain silent, but when they have taken milk and are thus fed, they start talking (क्षुधितो हि न वाचम् उदीरयति, पयः पीत्वा पश्चात् उदीरयति —Venkata).

Martyah dabhracetah, man who does not possess sense; the one who is a fool (मर्त्यः मनुष्यः दभ्रचेताः ग्रल्पचेताः —Venkata).

Hymn-102

For verses 11 and 21, see Nir. IV.14 and III.20 respectively.

The Ṛsi of the hymn is Prayoga of the family of Bhṛgu; or Agnirbarhaspatya or Pavaka or one or both of the two Agnis, the sons of Sahas; called Grhapati, and Yavistha

4 Aurva Bhṛgu vat, like और्वभृगु ; it may be the dvandva compound और्व+भृगु, like Aurva and Bhṛgu (Benfey) Aurva is sometimes called the son, sometimes the grandson, and sometimes only a descendent of Bhrgu.

Aurva, inside the earth.

Bhṛgu, shining, glorious.

The compound of the two may mean the sun; or the austere-sage.

Apnovanavat, like a honest toiler.

Samudravasasam, the one existing in waters, the submarine fire (समुद्रवाससम् वाडवम् —Venkata; or Omnipresent in the entire space of the firmament.

7. Adhvaranam, अध्वराणाम्, of the inviolable rites; pertaining to the rites free from violence.

8. Tvasta, त्वष्टा, creator.

Taksya, carpenter (तक्ष्या विकर्तव्यानि रूपेव त्वष्टा रूपाणि वर्धकिरिव, may deal with us as a carpenter deals with the timber he has to cut—Sayana).

11 Siram pavaka-socisam, शीरं पावकशोचिषम् (praise) Agni of purifying flames, i.e. of pure light (पावक दीप्तिम्); it rests through all or pervades all (अनुशायिनमिति वा । आशिनमिति वा —Nir. IV.14).

14. Tridhatu-avrtam barhih, triple-uncovered (त्रिधातु अनावृतम् बर्हिः —Venkata: त्रिधातु त्रिः अवृतं अनावृत च असन्दिनं अबद्धं च । स्तरण काले हि बर्हिरबद्धं भवति — Sayana).

Apah cit ni dadha padam, the waters find their place in him (आपः अपि पदं निदधति अन्तरिक्ष्या माध्यमिके —Venkata, Sayana).

Barhih, बर्हिः, firmament.

Asam'dinam; असम्दिनम्, united, unbound.

15. Anadhrstabhih utibhih, अनाधृष्टाभिः ऊतिभिः, with inviolable protections.

Midhusah, the bestower of happiness, auspicious.

17. Angirah, fire divine.

21. Yat atti upajihvika yat vamrah ati'sarpati, when the emmet eats, when the pismire crawls (यत् अत्ति उपजिह्विका यदा वम्रः अतिसर्पति), vamribhih and upajihvikah are synonymous of emmets (वम्रीभिरुपजिह्विका इति सीमिकानाम)

Vamryah, (emmets) are so called from vomiting (वम्र्या वमनात्).

Simika, (emmet) is so called from crawling (सीमिका स्यमनात्);

Upajihvikah, smellers. (उपजिह्विका उपजिघ्रय:). See also वम्रीभि: पुत्रमग्रुवो अदानम् —IV.19.9.

[unmarried maidens (have taken) the undivided son from the emmets.] —Nir. III 20.

22. Vivasvibhih, विवस्विभि: , priests.

Hymn-103

Sobhari of the family of Kanva is the Ṛsi of this hymn.

2. Daivah'dasah, invoked by Divodasa according to the traditionalists. Here it, however, means sunshine or enlightenment. The term दैव:ऽदास: occurs nowhere else in the Ṛgveda.

Divodasam, दिवोदासम्, the giver of light; ('दिवश्च दास उपसंख्यानम् —Astadhyayi VI.3.21; विज्ञानमयस्य प्रकाशस्यदातारम् —Daya. on IV.26.3; दिवोदासस्य =प्रकाशदातु: (सूर्यस्य) —Daya. on VI.16.19; दिवोदासेभि: प्रकाशस्य दातृभि: —Daya. on I.130.10.

Majmana, मज्मना, with speed or force (मज्मना बलेन —Venkata शुद्धिकारण-क्षेपणाऽऽख्येन बलेन —Daya. on I.64.3; अनन्तेन बलेन on I. 143.4; मज्मना= बलनाम Nigh. II.9).

3. Rejanta, tremble (रेजन्त कम्पन्ते —Venkata).

Sahasra'sam, सहस्रसाम्, thousand of blessings; giver of thousands (सहस्रसाम् सहस्रस्य दातारम्).

5. Dṛdhe cit, strong; stronghold of enemies (स दृढे चित् अपि शत्रुपुरे स्थितम्).

Abhi-tṛṇatti, spoils, wastes, destroys, defeats (अभि-तृणत्ति हिनस्ति —Sayana).

He (who is devoted to you) by his own strength and power destroys or defeats the enemy in a battle, and attains immense inexhaustible wealth, food or prosperity.

Vamani, wealth, treasure (वामानि धनानि —Venkata).

Alternatively, he (thy worshipper) spoils with his steed food laid up even in strongholds, he possesses imperishable wealth. (Wilson)

Puruvaso, O Lord of vast wealth (पुरूवसो ! हे बहुधन ! — Venkata).

7. Deva-yavah, Yajamanas, worshippers or householders, (देवयवः यजमानाः —Venkata).

Gibhih, गीर्भिः , by songs.

Sudanavah, liberal givers (सुदानवः शोभनदाना —Venkata).

Dasma, O graceful Lord (दस्म ! दर्शनीय ! —Venkata).

8. Ṛtavne, ऋतावने=ऋतऽवने, observant of truth (ऋतावने=यज्ञवते —Venkata; यज्ञवते सत्यव्रते वा —Sayana).

9. Vira vat, with children (वीरवत् पुत्रवत् —Venkata).

Maghava, wealthy (मघवा धनवान्).

Yasah, यशः , fame, i.e. fame-giving food (यशः यशस्करं अन्नम्—Sayana).

Dyumni, one possessing food; famous; glorious (द्युम्नी अन्नवान् यशस्वी वा । 'द्युम्नं द्योततेर्यशो वान्नं वा" —Nir. V.5. dyumnam is derived from the root √द्युत्, to shine and means glory or food. See VII.25.3 for dyumnam).

14. Svah'nare, स्वर्नरे=स्व:ऽनरे; in the yajna-performance (यजनि लक्षणे कर्मणि —Sayana)

Sobharyah. सोभर्यः, of sobhari; of the virtuous devotee=सोभरेः.

For sobhari, see :

IN MEMORY OF

VED RATAN MOHAN

Ved Ratan Mohan

The Vedas celebrate the vac whose array of thousand syllables and thousand postures of consciousness manifested in a thousand ways appear as flame-songs of the earth and the empyrean. In their innermost recesses are embedded the eternal and cosmic powers of illumination. The Vedic words rising from the oceanic depths of creative consciousness provide a panoramic vision and a thousand vignettes of that real inner illumination, svar, reached by dhi, the two facets of which are karma (action) and prajna (knowledge). In that realm of invocation and sacrifice, faith (sraddha) converges with reason (tarka); intuition assimilates perception; light combines with vigour; wisdom coalesces with valour; speech and action become one. The science of Vedas seeks that true synthesis of faith and reason, and in that pursuit, its prayer is that we may be blessed with "faith" that has not degenerated into the somnolence of the spirit and that we may be endowed with "reason" that has not, in the words of Gurudeva Tagore, lost "its way into the dreary desert sand of dead habit" and which has its habitation in the meandering maze of pointless prolixity:

त्रातारो देवा अधिवोचता नो मा नो निद्रा ईशत मोत जल्पिः ।
वयं सोमस्य विश्वह प्रियासः सुवीरासो विदथमावदेम ॥ ऋक्. 8.48.14.

The true Vedic faith does not countenance dogma; the Vedic reason is not a euphemism for sophistry; the Vedic word is not a victim of verbiage. The essential perception of the Vedas is not a prisoner of perversions. The humanism of Vedas is not a hypocrisy and the Vedic teaching of tolerance is not a transient contrivance. The core commitment of Vedas is to truth and dharma, to harmony and happiness, to freedom and justice. The soulful Vedic voyage in ceaseless quest of the experience of inner illumination and with its rich symbolism and manifold meanings is perhaps the oldest and the most magnificent and many-splendoured pilgrimage of the human spirit.

The Vedas gave the Magna Carta of Human Brotherhood and Universal Goodwill and proclaimed a noble prayerful Preamble to the humanitarian Constitution of One World based on friendship, fellow-feeling, freedom and fearlessness in words which are immortal and ever inspiring and which are central to the basic teleology and technology of building impregnable defences of peace in the minds of men. The Vedic seers who viewed the world of perception and the world of thought as a continuum prayed for the composite benediction of hearing noble thoughts and seeing noble deeds: भद्रं कर्णेभिः शृणुयाम देवा भद्रं पश्येमाक्षभिर्यजत्राः । यजु. 25.21

In that endeavour of building a universe of noble thoughts and noble deeds, the Vedic seers convened a cosmic convocation based on the fundamental human quest for truth and the acceptance of its many facets (एकं सद् विप्रा: बहुधा वदन्ति):

आ नो भद्रा: क्रतवो यन्तु विश्वतोऽदब्धासो अपरीतास उद्भिद: ।
देवा नो यथा सदमिद् वृधे असन्नप्रायुवो रक्षितारो दिवे दिवे ॥ ऋक्. 1.89.1.

In the Vedic vision of human society, man in his relation to man was not predatory, aggressive and oppressive as in the Hobbesian nightmare which conjured up homo homini lupus. The Vedic ideal was that Man was under an obligation to protect and preserve and to aid and comfort mankind everywhere: पुमान् पुमांसं परिपातु विश्वत: । ऋक्. 6.75.14.

The Vedic philosophy of freedom and fearlessness reached a credal and climactic crescendo in the earthy yet ethereal invocations:

अभयं मित्रादभयममित्रादभयं ज्ञातादभयं परोक्षात् ।
अभयं नक्तमभयं दिवा न: सर्वा आशा मम मित्रं भवन्तु ॥ अथर्व. 19.15.7

Equally, the Vedic hymn of togetherness remains a refreshing reminder and a beacon light to the fractured and fragmented world out of whose womb the new world order is struggling to be born:

सङ्गच्छध्वं संवदध्वं सं वो मनांसि जानताम् ।
देवा भागं यथा पूर्वे सञ्जानाना उपासते ॥ ऋक्. 10.191.2.

These noble thoughts made the culture of the Vedas the first and foremost foundation of the edifice of universal values: सा प्रथमा संस्कृतिर्विश्ववारा: । यजु. 7.14.

These enduring verities of the Vedas are not a relic of the past, nor are they the exclusive preserve or the sole inheritance of Indians and Indo-Aryans. They belong to the common heritage of humanity and are relevant in our contemporary world and in our age. We owe it to ourselves and to the peoples and the nations of the world to share this precious heritage and to disseminate its message and meaning.

It is the proud privilege of Veda Pratisthana to be the chosen instrument of the monumental project for preparing and presenting a readable and systematic modern translation of all the four Vedas. The Veda Pratisthana has had the credentials and the capacity to attempt this ambitious task because it was founded on the deep understanding and encyclopaedic erudition of Swami Satya Prakashji, an eminent scientist and a distinguished professor before he became a parivrajaka, the firm financial support and the bounteous benefaction of Narendra Mohan Foundation, an eloquent and tangible testament of the Mohan family's liberal and public-spirited disposition, and of the intrepid faith, fortitude, vision and dedication of the late Shri Prakash Vir Shastri.

The munificence of Major Kapil Mohan and his family and their deep devotion to the cause of Vedic learning enabled the Veda Pratisthana to embark on this noble enterprise. It was Major Kapil Mohan's resolve to raise a truly meaningful memorial in the form of a new edition of the Vedas in remembrance of his elder brother, the late Col. Ved Ratan Mohan that led the Narendra Mohan Foundation to offer its generous and unsparing financial assistance for this project. We acknowledge our debt of gratitude to Major Kapil Mohan and to Narendra Mohan Foundation. We also take this opportunity to pay our tribute to the memory of Col. Ved Ratan Mohan whose life was a superb saga of service and an inexhaustible treasury of goodwill.

The late Shri Prakash Vir Shastri was the main architect of Veda Pratisthana. It was to him that we owed the initial organization, the basic conception and the purposeful momentum of the project. Indeed, we are only trying to translate his dream into a reality. An eminent and gifted parliamentarian, whose cascading eloquence, sparkling wit, mature wisdom and intrinsic goodness had a singular charm, Parkash Vir Shastri was an articulate exponent and a selfless missionary of the fundamental values of India's creative and spiritual culture. Spun and woven with the warp and woof of Indian sensitivity and perception, the tapestry of his life and work was as authentic as it was inspiring. He shunned the pettiness and parochialism of politics and strove to reinforce our national life with the tensile strength of our quintessential heritage. He lived and worked for national goals. In national politics he was the ambassador of the larger cultural claims on life. In his tragic and untimely death, Mother India lost an illustrious son who distinguished himself not by the office he held, nor by his wealth or material acquisitions, but by his dedicated and singleminded service to the cause of the nation. In his death, Veda Pratisthana lost its moving spirit, regained mainly because his memory is a motive force. We savour the exhilarating fragrance and see the inspiring and exhorting presence of his personality, pervasive, permeating and perdurable, in the fruition of this project and pay our affectionate homage to his everlasting memory.

Deepavali, 1978.

Preface

The Vedas are the Word of God. At the very beginning of the C eation, man received knowledge of the Vedas. The Ṛgveda is the most ancient of all the holy scriptures in the world.

Knowledge of the Vedas is not intended for a particular race or country. God revealed this knowledge for the greatest good of mankind. This noble objective is reflected in the following words of the Vedic sages :

May all be happy and rid of diseases,
May all have a happy and harmonious life,
May nobody ever be afflicted with suffering.

The Vedas have been translated into several languages. Scholars like Griffith, Wilson and Max Müller have written commentaries on the Vedas in English. But the need for bringing out an unconventional and standard translation of the Vedas has been felt for quite sometime. The task, however, involved dedication, hard work and considerable financial resources.

Col. Ved Ratna Mohan, ex-M.P., was a promising youngman, the scion of a family which had implicit faith in the Vedas. His brilliant career was cut short by untimely death in 1973. His father, late Shri Narendra Mohan, was a leading industrialist of India. Devoted to social service, he took keen interest in the dissemination and distribution of religious literature. He had unshakable faith in God. Daily he would perform yajna and once in a year he would perform this on a big scale when all the mantras of one of the four Vedas would be recited. He had named his eldest son Ved Ratna (Jewel of the Vedas). He had desired the late Ved Ratna to do some service to the Vedas. But fate had willed otherwise. Col. Ved Ratna died before he could fulfil his father's wish.

His younger brother Major Kapil Mohan, who has great reverence for the Vedas like his father, made the noble resolve to get all the four Vedas translated into English and publish them on behalf of the Narendra Mohan Foundation in the sacred memory of his elder brother. This Foundation was endowed by the sons of the late Shri Narendra Mohan, the founder of the Mohan Industries, in accordance with the wishes of their father. A hospital, a college, and several other charitable institutions devoted to public service are being run by the Foundation.

The task of rendering the four Vedas into English was entrusted to the Veda Pratishthana by the Foundation. Dr. Govardhan Lal Dutta, a famous educationist and Head of the Pratishthana, requested the Vedic scholar Svami Satya Prakash Sarasvati to undertake the highly onerous responsibility. Indeed one could think of no other scholar better qualified than Svami Satya Prakashji to accomplish this task. I am happy that Svamiji was kind enough to accede to the request. He is devoting most of his time to the translation work though he is a parivrajaka, a peripatetic monk. In this task, he is collaborating with Pandit Satyakam Vidyalankar.

Thanks are particularly due to Shri Vishwanath for his unstinted cooperation in the excellent printing of this work. No words would be adequate to express my warm appreciation and grateful thanks to Major Kapil Mohan, Svami Satya Prakashji and other colleagues and co-workers of the Veda Pratisthana who have generally helped in the accomplishment of this sacred task.

Our labours would be fully rewarded if through this English translation of the four Vedas, attempted for the first time in India, the divine message enshrined in the Vedas impregnates human consciousness everywhere.

O elixir of divine love, may you flow in the sweetest and most exhilarating stream, expressed for the acceptance of the aspirant, the resplendent self. 1

It is all-beholding, and a destroyer of the wicked, when collected, it occupies the assigned position in the wooden cask, made strong by fixing iron nails. 2

May you be the lavish giver of wealth, most bounteous, the subduer of enemies and may you bestow on us the riches of the affluent. 3

Flow onward to the sacrifice with Nature's bounties and flow here for our strength and fame. 4

O dropping divine elixir, we come to you only; this divine worship, offered day by day, is for you only; our invocations are to you alone, and to none else. 5

May the dawn, the daughter of the sun, purify this elixir; your elixir of divine love is gushing in streams through the eternally outstretched ultra-psychic fleecy filter. 6

The ten sister-fingers seize you in the sacrifice (for cleansing the stems of plant with water and squeezing out the sap) on the auspicious day. 7

The fingers carry the plant of the elixir. They, the enlightened priests, crush it and squeeze out the glittering sap on the water skin. The sweet sap is imbibed with three qualities (of invigorating body, mind and intellect), and is enemy-averting. 8

The inviolable kine mingle this fresh celestial elixir with their milk for the enjoyment of the aspirant, the resplendent self. 9

In the exhilaration of this devotional elixir, the aspirant self smites all evil tendencies and bestows prosperity (on the devotees). 10

O elixir of joy-divine, dear to Nature's bounties (or sense organs), may you hasten on in your purifying course. O blissful, may you satisfy the resplendent self, the showerer. 1

O blissful elixir, the mighty showerer (of blessings) and the most glorious upholder, may you give us food and strength; may you occupy your assigned position. 2

The stream of the effused creative juice of bliss furnishes the joy-giving milk. Rich in qualities and reactions, it is mingled with waters. 3

When you, O elixir, the mighty, are mixed with milk, the forceful streaming waters flow to you. 4

The divine elixir is the sustainer (of all of us); it is the supporter of heaven and is purified in the waters. For our sake, (it is poured) into the straining cloth (the ultra-psychic fleecy filter). 5

This mighty showerer of blessings gives out a thrilling sound as it drops (on the strainer). It is beautiful as a friend; it shines (in heaven) with the sun. 6

O love divine, the divine words of praise (chanted on the occasion of your effusion) increase our vigour and encourage us for the right conduct. They cleanse (our hearts), and they add to our exhilaration. 7

We pray to secure exhilaration from you; you are the giver of the highest joy to your worshipper, eager to crush evils. Verily, you are worthy of the loftiest adoration. 8

O love divine, you are dear to the resplendent self. May you shower upon us streams of ambrosia, like a raining cloud. 9

O love divine, you are the giver of milch-kine, of children, of horses, and of food; you are the primeval soul of the cosmic sacrifice. 10

This divine immortal bliss flies like a bird upon her wings to settle on the sacrificial vessels 1

This divine elixir which has been squeezed out from plants by fingers, is inviolable. It rushes forward against all obstacles and oppositions. 2

This divine ambrosia, while flowing, is adorned (with hymns by the devout and skilled priests), as a horse for battle. 3

This strong one, as it flows along, seems to encompass all sorts of desirable wealth with its power and seeks to bestow it upon us. 4

This love divine, as it drops, hastens, as if a horse to its chariot and bestows rich gifts upon the worshipper. (During its motion), it discovers for itself new ever-thrilling sounds. 5

This divine sap, praised by the priests, gives precious wealth to the worshipper. It is mingled with waters. 6

Away it rushes with its stream across the high regions into heaven and roars as it flows on. 7

Having completed the sacrificial rites, it goes to heaven across the inviolable regions. 8

The green-tinted divine elixir of ancient birth flows across the ultra-psychic fleecy filter for the enjoyment of Nature's bounties. 9

This elixir ot love divine, multi-functional, produces abundant food, while it flows onward in a stream in the process of purifiaction. 10

O love divine, most nourishing, may you welcome (enligtened persons in the holy rites); win over (the enemies) and make us happy and prosperous. 1

O lord of love divine, give us light, heavenly light, give us good fortune, and make us happy and prosperous. 2

O divine bliss, give us strength, give us wisdom, drive away our adversities and make us happy and prosperous. 3

(The elixir), the enkindled, the sovereign Lord of all, the showerer of blessings, the rejoicer, flows forth, pure in form, and in joy utters a thrilling sound. (Idhma=Samiddha=Agni=enkindled) 1

(The elixir), pure-flowing, with body never-decaying, rushes onwards; sharpening its splendour in the height and glittering across the firmament, (it falls into the receptacle). (Tanunpat—with body never decaying) 2

Worthy of all praises, pure-flowing, bright, the bounteous giver (elixir of bliss) shines forth in its might with the sweet streams of water. (Idyah=worthy of praises) 3

The bright green-hued (or of golden colour), pure-flowing (elixir of bliss) rushes in its might. It occupies its seat (on sacred grass) pointing towards the east. (Barhih =seat on sacred grass) 4

The divine golden doors, praised by the priests together with the bliss are thrown open from the vast heaven. (Devir-dvarah=divine door) 5

The pure-flowing love divine, eagerly waits for the handsomely built, lofty and charming pair of night and dawn, not yet visible. (Nakta-usasa=pair of night and dawn) 6

I invoke the two celestial divine priests, the two deities who always behold men. (The bliss divine) is pure-flowing. (Daivyau hotarau=two celestial divine priests) 7

Flow hitherward to us, and pour forth through the strainer that eternal exhilarating stream of celestial nectar which grants strength and food. 3

The sparkling stream of elixir flows in course of filtration with a speed and moves towards the resplendent soul like waters along a slope. 4

Far from the place of effusion and filtration, the plant of this elixir sportingly grows in forests. The ten fingers pluck it and cleanse, just as (men rub down) a strong horse. 5

May you, after effusion, pour forth this elixir in milk and mix to be enjoyed by Nature's bounties and for our exhilaration. 6

The milk of divine love, when effused, flows to the receptacle in streams for the enjoyment of the aspirant. It sustains and strengthens the self. 7

The expressed sap of divine love is the soul of the cosmic sacrifice. It flows with speed bringing blessings. It maintains its ancient regards and seerhood. 8

This most delightful exhilarating divine sap is offered to the resplendent self for his acceptance. It resounds with a thrill (when it flows from the filters) in the ceremonial hall. 9

The excellent streams of divine love, knowing that they have a relation with the resplendent self, flow forth during this sacrifice along the path of the eternal truth. 1

Among all oblations, the oblation of this divine elixir is superb; after effusion, the elixir is mixed with holy waters; the streams of this sweet bliss flow forth pre-eminent. 2

The pre-eminent divine love is the showerer of benefits, ever-true and imperishable. It flows to the sacrificial hall, mixed with waters, uttering continuous thrilling sounds. 3

When the seer, the love divine, full of ample treasures, goes round in the midst of the recitations (by devotees), then the mighty resplendent self seated in the heaven (of heart) rejoices and accepts the invocations. 4

When it (the love divine) is invoked by devotees, the effused elixir, like a king, destroys the malignant persons (the inner wicked tendencies) as well as those who oppose. 5

The green-tinted (love divine), dear to the cosmic forces (or spiritual instincts), blends with the water, and then moves forward for filtration on the ultra-psychic woollen seive in the midst of the thrilling chants by the welcoming priests. 6

He, the householder, who is assiduous in the technique of effusion and filtration of the divine elixir, is blessed by bounties like wind, fire and the twin divines. 7

The stream of sweet divine love flows to the Lord of light and bliss and to the gracious Lord. The worshippers who accept the virtues of this elixir are rewarded with happiness. 8

O resplendent Lord, at your worship, they (the ten fingers) provide the ever-lasting and ever-youthful joy (the divine elixir) for your solemn service. 5

(The divine elixir) is an immortal bearer (of oblations to Nature's bounties); it beholds the seven rivers (of enlightenment), i.e. the elixir is mixed with water, full as a well; he quenches the thirst of the divine elements. 6

Protect us, O lord of bliss, manly in functions, during our undertaking and destroy that power of darkness against which we must contend (unitedly). 7

(O love divine), may you without delay speed on the road for our new praiseworthy hymns; as of old, please continue to display your radiance. 8

O purifier (love divine), you are always good to grant us abundant food, brave offsprings, cattle and horses. May you give us the discriminating wisdom, and also all that we need and cherish. 9

The elixirs of bliss, longing for food and strength, uttering a sound like chariots, or like horses, have come here for the sake of excellence and prosperity. 1

Coming like chariots (to the place of work and worship), they (the stems of the plant of divine juices) are upheld in the arms (of the priests) or as a load in the arms of a toiler. 2

The libations (of the herbal juices) are anointed with milk (of devotion) as kings with praises and tended as a worship by seven priests. 3

The blissful elixirs are effused and poured forth, in the midst of loud chants (of verses), and they proceed in a stream to excite exhilaration. 4

The elixirs of cosmic brilliance generate the glory, as if of the dawn and whilst they issue forth, and spread, they do so with a thrilling sound. 5

The ancient singers of hymns and the offerers of divine love throw open the doors of cosmic sacrifice. 6

The seven associated ministers (the sense organs) like so many kinsmen. participate with delight in the sacrifice, and with single devotion, bring success to the objective. 7

I take into my navel the navel of the cosmic sacrifice, my eyes become associated with the sun and I effuse out the offspring (i.e. the juice) of the parent sage (i.e. of stems of the plant). 8

Sing, O leaders of ceremonies, to the glory of this pure-flowing drop of divine love. It is keen to offer worship to Nature's bounties (the verses are chanted whilst the juice is extracted). 1

To the exhilarating juice, the celebrated sages mix the sweet milk which is divine and favourite of all divinties. 2

O radiant divine love, may you grant health and happiness to our people, happiness to our cattle and horses and long life to our herbal plants. 3

May you recite praises to the bright and brown, self-vigorous, and heaven-touching divine elixir. 4

Purify the divine elixir, which has been crushed between stones, whirled by the hands and squeezed. May you mix the sweet milk of devotion in the inebriating elixir. 5

O elixir of divine love, cognizant of the mind, and its controller as well, you are poured forth as a drink for the exhilaration of the resplendent self. 8

O joy-bestowing effused elixir, may you give us by the grace of the resplendent Lord, such wealth of prosperity, as increases our vigour. 9

12

The sweetest and most flavoured juices of divine elixir (the spiritual love) are effused and poured forth for the acceptance of the resplendent self in the hall of this eternal sacrifice. 1

The wise men call upon the resplendent self to enjoy the divine elixir, as the mother kine low to their calves. 2

The exhilarating elixir, the wise, dwells in its own station; it is further mixed with waters taken from rivers. At the place of sacrifice, it remains under the control of speech (or chants in the middle tone). 3

The elixir of bliss, the keen observant, the wise seer, is worshipped in the navel of the sky, and is purified by filtering it through a fleecy filter. 4

The one collected in the vats or pots, has now been filtered through the ultra-psychic fleecy filters, and the filtrates are all mixed together. 5

The drops of elixir, abiding in the firmament of the sky, as they fall and flow, make a sound, that delights the nectar-shedding cloud. 6

The praise of the elixir of love is eternal; the plant is known as the lord of forests; and is the shedder of nectar. It inspires many generations of men. Such an elixir enlightens the intellects to their core. 7

The sagacious elixir has been brought from heaven; it flows in a stream to the happy and fortunate houses of the devouts. 8

O purifying divine elixir, may you shower upon us wealth of a thousand radiances, excellent in all respects. 9

13

The purifying love divine, flowing in a thousand streams and passing through the celestial fleecy filters, proceeds to Nature's bounties, such as the wind and the solar rays. 1

The elixir of divine love flows for the attainment of nourishment, giving strength in thousands. It secures affection from Nature's bounties when glorified through sacred hymns. 3

O divine love, may you pour forth abundant streams and splendid and excellent vigour for our attainment of food. 4

May those divine libations of spiritual elixir, when effused, bring to us thousand-fold wealth and excellent vigour. 5

Like horses urged to battle by their drivers, the swift-flowing elixir of divine love, hastens through the texture of the cosmic fleecy filter. 6

While flowing, the drops of elixir of divine love make thrilling sounds as if cows lowing to their calves. They are welcome to priests (as guests) received in arms. 7

O pure blissful love divine, you are acceptable and pleasing to the resplendent self. While uttering thrilling sound, may you destroy all our adversaries. 8

May you (O love divine), the beholder of the path of enlightenment, purifying our mind and destroying the infidels who refuse to offer worship, come and stay in the prime position of the eternal sacrifice. 9

The divine elixir of penetrating insight, when effused, flows widely round and is taken to the waves of a river (i.e. it is mixed with water), and with a thrilling sound pleasing to all, (it comes to a receptacle). 1

All the five types of men, full of zeal and faith, and desirous of accomplishing sacred acts, honour the sustaining love divine with their chants of praises. 2

At that time, all Nature's bounties rejoice in expectation of getting their share of elixir, now enveloped (i.e. mixed) with milk and curds. 3

Descending from the cosmic (or ultra-psychic) filters, it hastens and passes through the interstices of the woollen cloth. Finally, it imparts the ecstatic feeling of unity with its friend, the resplendent self. 4

The divine extract is squeezed and cleansed by the fingers of the sacrificer, and it looks fresh and bright like a handsome young (horse). It makes the milk as one's own abode (i.e. it is mixed with milk and curds). 5

Expressed by the fingers, it proceeds obliquely to the produce of the cow (i.e. it is mixed with milk); it utters a thrilling sound which is familiar to the worshipper. 6

The fingers express the juice from the plant which is the lord of nourishment. They, the fingers, come close to each other at the time of cleansing, and hold vigorously the plant of the elixir. 7

O divine love, may you, holding all the treasures of heaven and earth, come favourably disposed to us. 8

This love divine is heroic. Expressed intelligently by fingers, it proceeds further and hastens as if on a swift chariot to the abode of the resplendent self. 1.

This love divine engages in many sacred performances and promotes divine virtues, which adorn the men of immortal fame. 2

The effused elixir is brought to the place of sacrifice by a path that shines with brilliant light; then the priests offer it (to the resplendent self and to Nature's bounties). 3

He (the divine elixir) tosses his horn, and whets on high like a bull; the lord of the herd thus manifests his might, and thereby brings for us his treasures. 4

Becoming the lord of streams, he (the divine elixir) proceeds along with enthusiasm and vigour (to the place of sacrifice), adorned with brilliant golden rays. 5

At the right time, he overpowers the discomfited concealers of wealth, destroys them and moves to the side of those who abide by his discipline. 6

The priests express the sap of the divine plant into the vessels, which is thereafter purified. The sap is the provider of abundant food. 7

The ten fingers, the seven priests, effuse out this well-weaponed divine elixir which yields great exhilaration. 8

O elixir of divine love, the persons who extract and effuse you out, do it for an exhilaration that is capable of destroying evils. You are a sap that pervades the entire space existing between heaven and earth. May your flow flash like a swift horse. 1

This (elixir) provides strength and speed. In sacred rites, it is mingled with food and water and mixed with milk of cow by our fingers. 2

This unassailable, invincible divine love abides in the cosmic vapours of firmament. May you pour it and purify on the ultra-psychic filter for the enjoyment of the resplendent self. 3

The loving elixir of that devotee who is purified by worship flows upon the ultra-psychic filter and settles at a worthy place, duly assigned in the ceremony. 4

O resplended self, these drops of love divine flow to you with praises and give you vigour for the impending great struggle of life. 5

Purified through the ultra-psychic woollen filter, the divine elixir attains all honours. It stands as if it is a hero in the midst of kine. 6

Nutritious stream of the invigorating love divine falls easily upon the straining cloth as the lofty rain from heaven. 7

O bliss divine, most wise, may you extend your grace and purify men. May your stream of love divine flow unceasingly through the ultra-psychic woollen filters. 8

Like rivers flowing along a steep descent, the rapid streams of divine love flow with full zeal (through the strainers). They are the destroyers of dark forces. 1

The drops of love divine, as they are expressed, flow to the resplendent self like the rains falling upon the ground. 2

The elixir of divine love flows across the strainer with swelling waves. It is exhilarating, inebriating and it destroys the wicked. It is ever keen to go to the divine. 3

It flows to the receptacles of hearts, is strained through the ultra-psychic filters, and is glorified at worship by praises. 4

The divine love, mounting beyond the three worlds, illumines heaven and it voluntarily provides impulsion to the sun as well. 5

The enlightened performers of pious ceremonies glorify it (the elixir) at the time of worship, entertaining affection for the one all-beholding. 6

The sages, leaders of sacred rites, desirous of sustenance, filter and purify you, to be used in the sacred performances; you are the giver of strengthening food. 7

May you flow onward to pour forth streams of the sweet elixir of divine love. May you stay in your receptacle, O sharp-flavoured, for the fulfilment of the eternal rites and for enjoyment. 8

O elixir of bliss, with your habitat on hill-tops, when effused, you flow on the ultra-psychic woollen strainers. You, O nectar, are the supreme sustaining among those who give us ecstatic delight. 1

You are wise; you are a seer; you bestow the sweet honey as if produced from food (herbal plants). You are the supreme sustainer among those who give us ecstatic delight. 2

All divines (the organs of senses and actions) together are pleased to enjoy the drinking of this embrosia. You are the supreme sustainer among those who give us ecstatic delight. 3

You are the one who places in the hands of the worshipper all desirable riches; you are the supreme sustainer among those who give us ecstatic delight. 4

You are the one who milks this great heaven and earth, like two mothers; you are the supreme sustainer among those who give us ecstatic delight. 5

You are the one who in no time goes around and serves both heaven and earth with viands; you are the supreme sustainer among those who give us ecstatic delight. 6

This vigorous nectar of love divine, stocked in vessels, gives thrilling sounds while proceeding for purification; you are the supreme sustainer among those who give us ecstatic delight. 7

Whatever wonderful wealth of glory there be in heaven or on earth, may you, O nectar of bliss, being purified, bring it to us. 1

O nectar of bliss, you and resplendent self both are the lords of everyone; also the lords of our organs of senses; may you, O master, bless us in our intellectual assignments. 2

The celestial elixir, the showerer (of benefit), is purified in the midst of chants of men (the priests), uttering thrilling noise. It lies green-tinted, on its assigned seat. 3

Like the mothers of the born children, the fingers cleanse (the stems of the plant) under waters and crave for the invigorating and strength-giving (elixir of bliss). 4

For purification, the plant of the mighty elixir is washed with waters; the effused elixir stays under water and implants numerous germs (ferments) of activity, and finally the effused elixir after purification is mixed with bright water and milk. 5

May you bring near to us those who stand aloof; may you strike terror into our foes; O pure-flowing elixir, please transfer their riches to us. 6

O lord of bliss, destroy the vigour, the energy, the vital power of our enemy, whether he be close by or at a distance. 7

The ambrosia passes through the texture of the ultra-psychic fleecy sieve to become the beverage of the organs of senses and actions, triumphing over all our adversaries. 1

Verily, it, the pure-flowing ambrosia, bestows upon its praisers thousandfold treasure in the shape of cattle, cow-products and food. 2

You give us all kinds of wealth with your intuition; you flow for us at our praises; as such, O elixir of bliss, grant us sustenance. 3

Bestow upon us great glory; grant durable riches to those who are rich and prosperous; bring food to your praisers. 4

O elixir of divine bliss, the purified and the one pledged for noble deeds, O wonderful bearer of our offerings, may you listen to our praises as a king. 5

O nectar of divine bliss, the bearer of oblations, you abide in the vapours of the firmament; you are difficult to be surpassed by any; we cleanse you by our hands. May you repose in the receptacles of our hearts. 6

O ambrosia, you proceed to the filtering ultra-psychic sieve sportingly; like a chief, you are liberal and generous, and give excellent vigour to him who praises you. 7

These flowing, encouraging (for contest), exhilarating, heaven-conferring streams of ambrosia rush toward the resplendent self. 1

(These elixirs are) graceful in awarding favours, useful in numerous ways, and are the givers of wealth to him, who rightly effuse them. They spontaneously bestow food and nourishment on their praisers. 2

The effused streams of ambrosia come sporting and are finally received in a common receptacle containing water of rivers. 3

Like horses harnessed to a car, these pure streams of nectar bring all desirable blessings to us. 4

O effused streams of love divine, bestow at our indication manifold blessings on pious devotees who may not have given us anything presently. 5

As a great man appoints a commendable charioteer, so may you grant knowledge to our superior and flow glistening with water. 6

These effused streams of joy have been keen at the sacrifice; powerful, they have made for themselves an abiding place; they have animated the intellect of the pious institutor of the sacrificial rite. 7

22

These streams of ambrosia when let out (for filtration), give a thrilling sound as they pass (through the ultra-psychic sieve). (In their movements, they resemble) chariots or the swift horses let loose. 1

Like the gushing winds, like the rain-storms or like the swift whirling flames of fire,— 2

—these pure streams of divine love, sagacious, and mixed with milk and curds, easily participate in our ceremonies performed with intelligence. 3

These elixirs, when purified, come down from the filters to the receptacles; thence they traverse along their assigned paths. They never get exhausted (in their incessant sojourn). 4

Spreading in various directions, they pervade the entire space, from earth to heaven. They extend to all the regions, the highest and the supreme ones. 5

Descending rivers follow this excellent ambrosia as it spreads out to our sacred works; these accomplishments are glorified thereby. 6

O elixir of bliss, you hold the wealth of kine which you win from the greedy persons; you are the force behind the extended thread (of creation). 7

The swift-flowing ambrosia issues forth in a stream, sweet and exhilarating, whilst the chanting of numerous praises by the sages goes on. 1

These swift-going cosmic horses (of the sun) have been traversing a new field since the eternal past; they as if, impel the sun to give light. 2

O purifier, acquire for us the property and possessions of such a miser landlord as is not liberal in munificience. May you bestow upon us progeny-abounding food. 3

The swift-flowing streams of divine love effuse exhilarating juices; they flow (after filtration) to the honey-storing receptacle. 4

The divine love, the sustainer (of the world), the giver of the sap of life to organs of senses and actions, heroic, a protector against calumny, flows forth (to the receptacles). 5

O nectar of divine love, worthy of worship, you flow forth for the sake of the resplendent soul and for the sake of sense organs (divines); O drop of ambrosia, you vouchsafe to give us food. 6

Having drunk of this divine supreme exhilarating draught, the soul, the irresistible, has been subduing the opponents; may he ever subdue them. 7

The purified streams of effused elixirs flow downwards through the ultra-psychic filters, mixed with water, milk and curds. 1

The flowing juices of ambrosia rush like waters flowing down a declivity; filtered and purified, they proceed to the resplendent self. 2

O filtrable ambrosia, you proceed to the resplendent self for his enjoyment. By the priests, you have been prepared and conveyed by them (to the self). 3

O ambrosia of divine love, you are the exhilarator of men; may you flow to the resplendent soul, who is the conqueror of adversaries. You (O elixir) are pure and worthy of adoration. 4

O nectar, when you are effused by crushing under stones, you hasten to the ultra-psychic sieve; verily, you are pure and of worth acceptance (or enjoyment) by the resplendent self. 5

Flow on, best destroyer of evils, to be propitiated by praises. Verily, you are pure, purifying and wonderful. 6

The ambrosia is said to be the yielder of the exhilarating effusion; it is known to be pure, shining and purifier, the gratifier of the enlightened persons and a dertroyer of the wicked. 7

O purifying ambrosia, suitably placed by sacred rites, may you roaring enter the receiving pot, and come in contact with the wind by your natural rights. 2

This ambrosia, the showerer of benefits, the seer, the beloved, the destroyer of foes, most favourite among the divines, shines in its own home. 3

Pervading all beauteous forms, the pure, the desirable (elixir) goes to the place where the immortal ones abide. 4

Endowed with wisdom of the past, the brilliant nectar of divine love, generating sounds, flows forth continually, and finally it proceeds to the resplendent soul. 5

Most exhilarating and sagacious (elixir) flows through the filter in a stream, and attains its seat in the proximity of the adorable (resplendent soul). 6

They elevate to heaven by their keen intellect that creative (ambrosia), the purifier, the sustainer and the upholder of all. 3

The worshippers elevate by the fingers (by their arms) that unconquerable (ambrosia), the Lord of praise abiding (in receptacles). 4

The fingers effuse (from the plant) that green-tinted, desirable and far-beholding sap, after having crushed with stones the plant stems placed at a high level. 5

Men of intelligence invoke you, O pure and refined elixir; you provide exhilaration to the resplendent self, and all these praises are addressed to you. 6

27

This purifying ambrosia of divine love, lauded as if it is a sage, passes through the ultra-psychic fleecy filter. It drives away all the opponents. 1

This showerer of blessings, cleansed and squeezed by ten fingers hastens uttering a sound to the receiving pots. 4

This purified (sap), all-contemplating and all-knowing, gives radiance to the sun and all the spots of the sacred performances. 5

This powerful, invincible, purifying ambrosia which is protector of divine functional organs and the destroyer of the wicked, proceeds to receptacles after purification and filtration. 6

29

The streams of this effused ambrosia of love divine, the showerer of blessings, flow forth with speed and force. (The elixir) seeks to surpass all other divine powers in strength. 1

The pious performers and priests praise it with their songs and offer laudations while filtering and purifying this radiant nectar. It becomes worthy of adoration immediately after its generation. 2

O Lord of love divine, you are the distributor of abundant wealth. When you are purified, you look radiant. May you therefore fill the praise-deserving ocean (i.e. the pitcher containing water) to the brim. 3

O ambrosia, flow in a full stream, conquering for us all treasures. May you drive away all our enemies (to great distances). 4

O Lord of ambrosia, may you pour in streams the terrestrial and celestial riches and bring to us brilliant vigour. 6

30

The streams of the effused divine elixir, active and strong, flow without any effort through the ultra-psychic fleecy filter. During filtration, the elixir is, as if, gladdened to listen to the chants of praise. 1

Urged by the workers who press it out, the divine elixir during purification, filtration, and flow utters a characteristic voice of thrill and impels the organs of sense and action (for their right functions). 2

O divine elixir, may you flow forth for us in a stream, and bestow on us the foe-dispelling strength, and herioc progeny, coveted by so many of us. 3

This purified elixir of love flows out in a stream and is received in the pitchers of the innermost consciousness. 4

32

May the elixirs of love divine, full of exhilaration, be effused during all sacred performances. They rush forth for our sustenance—for us who are the organizers of sacrifice. 1

And now, the stems of the plant are crushed under stones, and the fingers of the triply-enlightened priest effuse out the green-tinted elixir for the enjoyment of the resplendent self. 2

And like a swan entering its own flock, this divine ambrosia excites everyone and captures his thoughts. Like a horse bathed with water, the divine elixir is covered with the milk of devotion (i.e. is mixed with water, milk and curds).

O elixir, you behold both the worlds, run like a speedy deer; come along with milk and take a seat of honour in the sacred performances. 4

The songs of praises commend you as å beloved praises her lover; as a hero, you hasten to a joyful contest. 5

May you bestow illustrious fame on us,—both on our rich participants and me (the poor). Grant us wealth, intelligence and glory. 6

The conscientious drops of divine love rush along like waves of water or like buffaloes to forests. 1

The brown bright drops flow with strength to the pitchers with a stream of divine ambrosia; they pour forth food accompanied with kine (or milk products). 2

The effused elixir of divine love proceeds to Nature's bounties such as the sun, the wind, the ocean, the moving clouds and to the cosmos. 3

The priests utter the three sacred texts (the Ṛk, the Yajus and the Samans); the milch kine low on being milked, while the green–tinted elixir flows with roaring sound (to the collecting vessel). 4

While they purify and decorate the child of heaven (the elixir of love divine), the priests utter words of praises through the divine texts pertaining to holy rites, supreme and sacred. 5

From every side, O Lord of love and joy, pour upon us oceans of riches; from all the four quarters, fulfil our thousands of aspirations. 6

34

The elixir of divine love when effused and expressed, flows in a stream to the filter, breaking down strong fortresses of opposition by its strength. 1

On the worship of whom, all men set their hearts—the Lord of virtuous acts, the purified and the possessor of abundant wealth. 6

This elixir when effused enters the ultra-psychic filter with force, sending forth its light and beholding all illuminated things. 3

Such is this divine elixir that it mounts to regions beyond heaven, and thence it descends in a short while through the ultra-psychic filter in streams like the river-waves. 4

The effused elixir is meant for all divines, whether far off or nigh. It is poured forth, sweet as honey, for the enjoyment of the resplendent soul. 5

In a group they sing hymns of praise; they crush the green (plants of the elixir) with stones. May you sit down at the place of sacrifice. 6

The pure, all-seeing (divine elixir) overcomes all evils; may you honour this sage, the elixir, with holy songs. 1

This refulgent (elixir), showerer of benefits, when effused, enters the heart of the devotee; it moves to the proximity of the resplendent soul and stays there with permanence in its super-psychic abode. 2

O Lord of purity and love divine, quickly pour upon us from all quarters vast and thousandfold treasures. 3

O Lord of purity and love divine, bring all sorts of wealth and provide food to us in thousand measures. 4

O lord of love divine, pure and dignified, bring us, your worshippers, wealth with offsprings. May you recompense the praises of him who glorifies you. 5

O lord of bliss and love, pure and graceful, bring us wealth (of joy and wisdom) from both worlds; O showerer of benefits, bring us glorious wealth. 6

41

It descends like streams of waters; it is swift, brilliant, rapid and drives off the dark evils. 1

We praise this auspicious elixir which acts as a bridge to carry us across to the region of excellence and bliss and which leaves the regions of woe behind. With its assistance, we triumph over hostile people who do not submit to the virtuous disciplines. 2

The sound of this effused and purified elixir is heard like that of rainfall and in its flashes it is like the lightnings running across the sky. 3

When effused, this elixir bestows abundant prosperity of cows, gold (or goat and sheep), horse and food (strength). 4

Flow on. O all-beholding elixir, fill to the full the vast heaven and earth as the sun fills space after the dawn with his beams. 5

Flow round us, O elixir of love divine, on all sides in a bliss—bestowing stream, like a river down a plateau. 6

42

This green-tinted splendorous ambrosia, generating the luminaries of heaven and generating the sun in the firmament, keeps clothing himself with the descending waters and milk—

It, when effused with holy hymns, flows in a stream; it is divine in its own nature and flows for the divine forces. 2

The elixirs of divine love flow with unbounded vigour for the rapid and ever—increasing acquisition of food. 3

Milking forth the eternal fluid, this elixir is poured into the ultra-psychic filter and there with a roar, it generates divine virtues. 4

This love divine, when purified, hastens towards all desirable prosperity and towards divine men who adhere to eternal truth. 5

May this elixir, when effused, pour down treasures upon us consisting of kine, children vigour, strength and abundant food. 6

43

We glorify with praises that loving elixir for our spiritual joy which, like a horse, is cleansed. The purified extract is finally mixed with cow's milk and curds. 1

All our invocations, desiring grace and protection, beautify this elixir now as of old, so that our resplendent soul may enjoy it. 2

This elixir of love divine flows on when beautified at the sacrifices, conducted by the respectable medicants. 3

44

O love divine, you flow to us to bestow abundance. The internal organ bears the thrills of your waves and conveys them in turn to gods (the sense organs). 1

The sage-like love divine, gratified by the praise of the pious worshipper and effused forth for the worship, flows forward in a stream to long distances. 2

This vigilant elixir of love divine, after effusion, proceeds onwards to the ultra-psychic filter; and there-after in the purified form, it, the all-beholding, goes to the sense organs. 3

May you flow for us, who are desirous of obtaining food of wisdom, and make our worship auspicious. (O elixir,) the devotees enshrine you in their hearts. 4

May the elixir which is pressed forth by the seers for obtaining grace and vitality make us ever-prospering. May the elixir grant us wealth of wisdom to be conveyed to gods (i.e. to all the faculties of the humam complex). 5

Flow for functioning as the messenger for us; may you (O elixir) appear for the joy of the resplendent soul. May you flow forth for the award of our friends, the sense organs. 2

We invoke you, O purple elixir, for the purpose of exhilaration and mix you with cow's milk and curds; may you throw open the doors for our riches. 3

The ambrosia passes through the ultra-psychic sieve as a horse passes the shafts (of the chariot) for driving. The elixir conveys the exhilaration to the sense organs. 4

His associates praise the elixir as it sports in waters and passes through the ultra-psychic fleecy filter. The hymns (of priests) glorify the drops of divine elixir. 5

Flow forth, O elixir of love divine, with that stream, wherewith, when drunk, you instil wonderful vigour in the hearts of your discerning offerers of praise. 6

The plants of divine elixir grow on the lofty mountains; the saps obtained from them flow with a speed as of the swift moving courser to the recaptacles for sustaining the sense organs. 1

The juices of love divine pressed and adorned like a bride of the one who has a father, flow to the breathing organs of the human body. 2

These brilliant elixirs, bestowing pleasant nourishment, expressed into the receptacle of the heart gratify resplendent soul with sacred works. 3

May the dextrous priests hasten to me with their attrition apparatus (for producing sacrificial fire) and accept (from me) the brillant elixir. May they mix it with cow's milk and curds. 4

O elixir of divine love, the conqueror of wealth, and the knower of the paths (of virtuous prosperity), may you, the bestower of the vast wealth, flow forth for our sake. 5

Flow in such a stream that even the cattle belonging to strangers (or opponents) may come to our home. 2

Since you are very loving to Nature's bounties at the cosmic sacrifice, may you shower down water in a stream; may pour down on us floods of rain (i.e. of blessings). 3

May you for our sustenance run through the ultra-psychic fleecy filter with your stream; may our organs of senses hear your sound. 4

This purified elixir flows forth to the receptacle, destroying our wicked tendencies and flashing out splendour as of old. 5

50

Your mighty streams flow forth upwards like the roaring waves of a sea; may you provide impulsion to your sound like that of a rushing arrow. 1

At your effusion, the priests engaged in sacrifice utter the three voices (of Ṛk, Yajuh and Saman), full of joy, when you proceed to the ultra-psychic fleecy filter. 2

They filter out the charming green-tinted, honey-dropping elixir, through the ultra-psychic fleecy filter, after crushing (the plant) with adamantine stones (of will power). 3

O most exhilarating sage-like elixir of penetrating wisdom, flow through the ultra-psychic filter in streams to the receptacle to be co-seated in the innermost cavity along with the resplendent soul. 4

O most exhilarating elixir, anointed with milk (of enlightenment) as a soothing balm, flow forth for the joy of resplendent soul. 5

May you, O sagacious elixir, when effused in a stream, flow on to give us strength and fame. 5

52

May the glittering elixir of devotion, the acquirer of wealth, bestow upon us strength along with food; may it when effused, hasten to the receptacles through the filters. 1

Your elixir of devotion, dear to the divine powers, flows in a thousand streams, and along the traditional paths, it passes through the ultra-psychic woollen filters. 2

O elixir of bliss, send him to us who has been like a pot; send us now gifts of wealth; may you come to us in swift-flowing streams; may you come to us, whose plants have been crushed with the blows of the stones. 3

O drops of blissful elixir, invoked by all, may you overthrow the strength of those people who challenge us. 4

O drops of spiritual bliss, may you, who are the distributor of riches, pour forth for our protection hundreds and thousands of the pure streams. 5

53

(O divine elixir,) crushed through stones, your powerful (streams), having scattered and subdued the wicked, are stationed high. May you drive away those adversities which envelop us. 1

By this strength, you become conqueror (of our enemies); I praise you with a fearless heart for the sake of progress of our array of chariots ranged against our opponents and for the sake of gaining wealth. 2

No one with evil thoughts can assail your inviolable prowess whilst you flow forth; you destroy the malignant who defies you in the struggle of life. 3

They, the wise devotees, plunge (the stems of the plants of) the love divine under water (to squeeze out the sap) which is green-tinted, strength-conferring, and exhilarating for the resplendent soul. 4

54

According to the traditional reputation, the invokers effuse this brilliant and pure fluid, the giver of penetrating insight that grants a thousand gifts. 1

Like the sun, it (the divine elixir) is the supervisor of all acts; it hastens to the lakes (of the brain), and unites with the seven down-descending currents from the region of enlightenment. 2

After filtration and purification, the spiritual elixir of divine love shines in its splendour and stands high over all things in the celestial region like the sun. 3

O filtered and purified elixir, always devoted to the resplendent soul, you pour down for the dedicated divine purposes food with milk and curds. 4

55

O elixir of divine love, may you flow forth with your juices of all kinds of food grains for every sort of nourishment and with all felicities. 1

O drops of spiritual bliss, since all these nourishing praises are addressed to you and the way you are born and the way the things are born of you, may you come and be seated in the innermost cavity of our hearts. 2

Flow forth, O conqueror of thousands; flow as one who ever conquers and is never conquered, and who attacks with dreadful weapons and destroys evils. 4

56

The sweet elixir of love divine devoted to Nature's bounties flows to the ultra-psychic sieve, destroying the wicked spirits. It is the bestower of eternal enlightenment. 1

Hundreds of ever-active streams of the spiritual elixir pour the strengthening food, while establishing friendship with the resplendent soul. 2

The ten fingers greet you, O elixir, as a maiden greets her lover; thereby, you are cleansed to our advantage. 3

Flow hitherward, O sweet-flavoured elixir of spiritual love; flow for the sake of the resplendent soul and under the blessings of the all-pervading Lord. May you preserve the worshippers, your praisers, from every sort of sin. 4

Sing forth the spiritual hymn, the GAYATRI, to adore the Lord, who is our purifier and who sees us all with thousand eyes. 1

O thousand-eyed, and the sustainer of thousands, the pious devotees make you, O elixir, flow through the ultra-psychic filter. 2

The purifier (the love divine) trickles through the fleecy ultra-psychic filter and hastens to the receptacles of the heart and then passes on to the resplendent soul. 3

The all-beholding divine bliss flows pleasantly for the delight of our soul and nourishment with progeny. 4

61

O love divine, may you flow with that nourshing spirituality which enables the resplendent self to subdue ninety and nine strongholds of nescience in the battle of life; 1 —

—which conquers the strongholds in an instant, in the interests of the seeker of truth, the devout, and subdues the malicious, obstinate and quarrelsome tendencies. 2

O love divine, the knower of the secrets of energy, may you shower forth vigour and wisdom, riches of gold and food in boundless measures. 3

Delight us, O divine love, with those of your undulations which flow over the ultra-psychic sieve in a stream. 5

O divine love, lord over all, the purifier, bring us riches, food and heroic progeny. 6

The ten fingers cleanse and beautify this divine elixir; the cosmic oceans are the mother of this newborn babe, which along with other children is born of the mother Eternity. 7

When effused, it proceeds to the cleansing sieve with the lightning and the wind along the path of the sun's rays. 8

May you, O sweet-flavoured and beautiful nectar, flow for our splendour, for our virile strength, for our sustenance, for our friendship and venerability. 9

High is the birth of this sap of life; though set in heaven, it has come down to the earth with strong sheltering power renown and sustenance. 10

With the aid of this (divine elixir) alone, may we procure all the wealth that belongs to men, and enjoy it not alone but distributing it judiciously among ourselves. 11

O divine elixir, the possessor of wealth as you are, may you flow from all sides for our resplendence, for our venerability and for our humanitarian character. 12

Sent forth by sacred waters, Nature's bounties approach this divine elixir, which is born with fullness, and is the demolisher (of evils)—the one adorned with milk and curds. 13

May our praises foster him who wins the heart of the resplendent self, as the milch cows foster their young calf. 14

O elixir of divine love, pour prosperity upon our cattle, milk forth (for us) nutritious food and augment water that merits laudation. 15

The pure elixir generates in heaven the great light, the guide of all men, as it were the marvellous thunder. 16

O bright-shining elixir, as you flow, the juice of yours enters the cosmic woollen sieve, exhilarating and free from evil. 17

O purified elixir, your juice as it collects, shines bright; it makes the pervading universal light visible. 18

Flow onward with such of your juice as is exhilarating, most excellent, dear to Nature's bounties and slayer of wicked people. 19

You are the destroyer of the hostile nescience, the enjoyer of battle day by day, the giver of wisdom and the giver of vigour. 20

Flow onward, as you have been flowing, to help the resplendent self in slaying nescience, which obstructs the flow of the great streams of pious thoughts. 22

O divine elixir of bliss, showerer of blessings and purifier, may we win wealth, beget heroic children and may you augment and accept our praises. 23

Protected by you, through your grace may we be victorious over our adversaries. O blissful Lord, may you be vigilant at our worship. 24

The elixir of divine love flows onward, chasing the malignant, and driving off the withholders of wealth and thus it proceeds to the holy abode of the resplendent Lord. 25

O drops of ambrosia, the purifier, bring to us plenty of wealth; conquer our foes; grant us fame and brave offspring. 26

O love divine, none of the hundreds of hurdles can harm you when you, pure and neat, propose to give wealth to us, benevolently inclined. 27

Then the ministering priests in the ceremony adorn this juice of the exhilarating (ambrosia) for gaining immortality, as if they are decking a horse. 6

Settle down, O elixir of divine love, on the cosmic filter with those of your streams that shower sweetness and which are poured forth for our protection. 7

Staying for some time in the wooden vessels, may you pass obliquely through the filter of woollen hairs, and hasten (O divine sap) for the enjoyment of the resplendent self. 8

O elixir of divine love, sweet and flavoured, you are the bestower of riches. We mix you with butter and milk to be offered to the fire-technicians. 9

This all-seeing flowing divine elixir, deposited on the sides of the container, furnishes us with abundant food. As a product of waters, it is known by all. 10

The flowing divine elixir, the showerer of benefits, when engaged in showering, becomes the destroyer of the obstacles and bestows riches upon the offerer of worship. 11

Pour forth thousand-fold much desired and exceedingly glorious and gladdening wealth, both of cattle and steeds. 12

This divine elixir worthy of many praises and of wise designs is effused and beautified by men. 13

This sagacious exhilarating elixir, offering thousand-fold protections and having hundred-fold wealth, is the measure of all the regions. It flows for the resplendent Lord. 14

This divine elixir is generated and glorified by praises at this sacrifice. It is deposited in its abode, for the resplendent Lord like a bird on its sheltering nest. 15

The pure elixir expressed by the priests speedily alights upon the sacrificial ladles, as of to battle. 16

O devotees, yoke him to the three-benched, triple-seated sacrificial chariot of the seven sages to go to Nature's divine forces. 17

O effusers, urge forward that wealth-bestowing rapid vigorous steed-like divine elixir to go to the sacrificial battle-field. 18

This elixir while effused enters into the cosmic pitcher, brings us all success and stands like a hero amidst the kine. 19

O divine elixir, the devout priests milk out your sweet juice for Nature's bounties for the purpose of exhilaration. 20

May you pour upon the cosmic filter for us and for the sake of the divine forces the most sweet-flavoured elixir of devotion, which the divine forces hear and respond to most gladly. 21

These much-lauded divine elixirs are let flow in the most exhilarating stream for the sake of obtaining abundant food. 22

In the course of purification, you hasten to cherish the treasures of kine (of wisdom); may you flow hitherward to grant us nourishment. 23

O foremost leader, may your divine love flow with your marvellous protections towards our praises, towards all our hymns of praise. 25

May you, as a leading inspirer of the lyrics, raising your voice, pour forth the waters of the firmament. 26

O poet of penetrating vision, in your might, these worlds stand firm; and the cosmic rivers flow to pay homage to you. 27

Your streams perpetually flow like showers of rain that fall from heaven upon the white fleece spread under them. 28

May you purify the strong and effectual elixir, the lord of treasures, the giver of enjoyment to the person of resplendence. 29

The flowing divine love, the truth personified and of penetrating vision, is spread all over the cosmic filter, giving great vigour to the worshipper. 30

O Lord of divine bliss, pour upon us thousand-fold wealth; grant excellent progeny and secure ample food for us. 1

You are most exhilarating, and effuse out nourishment and vigour for the resplendent self. You have your seat in the cups (of the worldly regions). 2

The elixir of divine love is effused for the sake of resplendence and omnipresence, as well as for superactivity; it drops into the cosmic pitcher in the most sweet-flavoured form. 3

These swift—flowing saps of elixir, brown in hue, associated with a stream of water, have been flowing ahead incessantly through obstinate channels. 4

Augmenting the strength of respledent self, urging the waters and rejuvenating all noble acts and destroying the infidels— 5

—the effused richly-coloured cosmic divine elixirs flow to the resplendent self and then hasten back to their place of origin. 6

O Lord of divine elixir, may your blessings flow with that stream wherewith you lighten up the sun and urge on the waters beneficial to man. 7

The purified elixir harnesses the courser of the sun to travel through the firmament, and reach man. 8

O worshippers, pour the divine exhilarating elixir of devotion, effused althrough in all directions, upon the cosmic woollen filter for the sake of superactivity and resplendence. 10

O purified elixir, grant us unassailable wealth, not to be destroyed by our foes. 11

With your stream bring to us thousand-fold wealth of kine and steeds; bring us vigour and renown. 12

This divine elixir when effused flows on his way like the radiant sun pouring its divine essence in the cosmic bowl of universe. 13

These brilliant divine drops have poured for us the eternal truths in a stream of solemn sacrifice assuring for us the prosperity of food and cattle. 14

The divine elixir mixed with curds flows through the cosmic filter and is dedicated to the resplendent Lord, the wielder of the thunderbolt. 15

O Lord of divine elixir, pour into the cosmic filter (the sap of spirituality) to bring us wealth which is most sweet-flavoured, exhilarating and most desired by Nature's bounties. 16

The priests cleanse in the cosmic sacred waters the green-tinted, powerful, exhilarating elixir in dedication to the resplendent Lord. 17

Sprinkle and filter the sweetest elixir upon the cosmic woollen sieve for the resplendent self, seeking success in a battle and the succeeding battles. 19

The worshippers desiring protection cleanse with their fingers and adorn the purifiable divine elixir of penetrating vision, and then, with characteristic sounds, the elixir, the showerer of blessings flows onwards. 20

The wise priests with their fingers cleanse under a stream of water (the stems of the elixir plant) and proceed further for the effusion of the sap with hymns of praise and the juice comes out with a roar. 21

Flow, O brilliant elixir; let your exhilarating juice proceed intermittently to the resplendent Lord and rise with your supporting juice to superactivity. 22

O purified divine elixir, you squeeze forth the celebrated riches of the enemy; may you, O beloved, enter the ocean. 23

O divine elixir, you who are exhilarating, flow onwards and defeat the enemies. Please bestow knowledge on us; may you drive off the people who do not respond to Nature's bounties (i. e. to law and order). 24

whilst the swift elixir gladly accepts a place on the golden seat of the sacrificer devoted to truth, it leaves far away the foolish, the infidel. 20

Devoted worshippers glorify the divine elixir; the prudent persons cherish to perform the sacrifice; down sinks the one, mentally-perverted. 21

Flow, O drops of elixir, sweet-flavoured, for the resplendent self. Flow for men in general. Take your proper place in the spiritual sacrifice. 22

The wise performers of pious acts, well-acquainted with the holy love, adorn you; may men skilled in the art, consecrate you. 23

The supra-instincts of friendliness, justice, venerability and humanity, enjoy the holy spiritual sap whilst it drops. 24

Brilliant elixir of bliss, while being filtered and purified, you have been uttering words feeding thousands. 25

O brilliant elixir, when purified bring for our guidance a clear voice of conscience that may feed thousands craving for prosperity. 26

O elixir, invoked by many, you have been purified and are now cherished by these your worshippers; may you enter the firmament (of their hearts). 27

The bright holy juices with their shining radiance and resounding stream are blended with the milk and curds. 28

The powerful elixir urged by the enthusiast devotees goes collected to the battle like warriors as they stand arrayed. 29

O divine elixir of bliss, mighty and prospering, come like a sagacious blessing from heaven for our prosperity, like the sun for our vision. 30

65

The glittering-maidens, the (ten) sister-fingers, of close-birth work side by side for the effusion of bliss-giving elixir,—the impeller and invigorator, mighty and Lord of all. 1

O filtered and purified elixir, shining with reiterated radiance at the top of Nature's all bounties, may you enter into all blessings of prosperity. 2

O purified and filtered elixir, pour on us a well-praised shower in dedication to Nature's bounties: pour a continual shower for our nourishment. 3

We, the performers of noble selfless works, praise you, O purified elixir, brilliant with radiance. Verily, you are the showerer of blessings. 4

May you, O nobly-armed, pour upon us creative virility. O divine elixir, may you come to us with your favours. 5

When rubbed and cleansed by the hands, you are blended with consecrated waters; you find your abode in the wooden vats in which you are collected. 6

May you like previous holy chanters sing to the glory of the supreme Lord of divine elixir, the Lord who is great, and all-beholding with his thousands of eyes— 7

—the elixir, honey-dropping, foe-repelling and of pleasing colour. Whom they squeeze out with stones (of hard work and perseverance) for the sake of the resplendent self. 8

We solicit the friendly love of you, O strong, mighty and winner of all the riches. 9

May you, O showerer of benefits, flow in a stream for inspiring mortal men in general and grant us riches by your superior might. 10

You are the sustainer of heaven and earth; O all pure and sanctified, you are the beholder of heaven and extremely powerful. I impel you to participate in our battle (against all odds of life). 11

Cleansed, effused and expressed by my tender fingers, you come out fresh and pleasing in colour, flow forth in a stream and impel (the resplendent self), our ally, for success in life's struggle. 12

The radiant elixir purified at the place of worship is implored with holy songs by the priests to pass through the firmament (of inner consciousness). 16

O divine elixir, bring to us for our protection increase of kine with hundreds of other cattle including beautiful horses and a gift of prosperity. 17

O divine elixir, expressed for the banquet of our organs of sensation, bestow on us strength, speed and a form for brilliance. 18

Hasten, most radiant divine elixir, with a roar to the ultra-psychic receptacles, as a hawk flying to its nest. 19

The divine elixir, the enjoyer of the water, hastens to the ultra-psychic containers for resplendence, activity, venerability, for human characteristics, and for pervasiveness. 20

The delightful elixir of pleasing colour, admired by organs of eye, is impelled to flow on cow-hide filter to the receptacles. 25

The bright herbal plants of divine elixirs are the dispensers of food. They are cleansed under the waters iike horses urged by the charioteers, and the filtered juice is then mixed with the milk and curds for consecration. 26

The priests who are present send you forth at the rites at which you are effused for the entire divine forces; may you flow with this splendour. 27

We depend on your strength today and ever; you are the source of happiness, the bearer of good things, the defender (against evils) and evokedby many; — 28

—exhilarating, worthy of choice, the wise, the intelligent, the defender, and coveted by all—; 29

O all-beholding, you are adorable; a friend to be sought by friends; may you flow for all, our holy love. 1

O blissful Lord of purified elixir, rule over the universe by those two halves (the northern and southern solstices) which stand facing you. 2

O wise and pure lord of immortality, with your all-round splendour, you encompass on every side and everywhere with the seasons. 3

O blissful, you are a friend; may you for the sake of granting all precious boons of every kind flow onward, generating food for your friends and giving support to us all. 4

O blissful lord, your shining rays accompanied by brilliance, spread the purifying glory over the lofty ridge of heaven. 5

O blissful Lord, the seven rivers, as being yours, flow at your command; the milch-kine hasten to you. 6

Proceed, O Lord of blissful elixir, in a stream when effused; exhilarate the resplendent self and bestow upon us inexhaustible store of sustenance. 7

You, O sage, are invoked by the seven kindred (metres of divine speech) which utter the songs of praises at the worship. 8

The fingers cleanse (the stems squeeze out the juice and filter it) in quickly improvised loud sounding supra-psychic (woollen) filter, when with a noise you are sprinkled with water. 9

O sage of supra-psychic bliss, possessor of food, when you are filtered your food-desiring streams are let loose like horses. 10

They are let loose in the supra-psychic woollen filters to go towards the honey-dropping receptacles. Our fingers have already treated and cleansed the plant. 11

The streams of the supra-psychic bliss go to the ocean, as milch kine to their stall; they go to the place of worship. 12

O divine elixir, at the sacrifice, the flowing waters hasten to cleanse the stems of plants, and subsequently after effusion, the sap is mixed with the curds and milk. 13

O Lord of divine bliss, we abide in your friendship at the hour of sacrifice; depending on your protection, we crave for your friendly love. 14

O divine elixir, flow on for the sake of the mighty wisdom-seeker, for the sake of the beholder of men; may you enter into the very core of the resplendence. 15

O divine elixir, you are great and most worthy of praises; you are most vigorous of the mighty; when engaged in the battle of life, you are always triumphant. 16

You are mightier than the mighty; braver than the brave, and more generous than the generous. 17

O Lord of divine love, you are a hero. Bestow upon us food; may you be the giver of sons; we crave for your friendship, and we cherish your companionship. 18

Adorable Lord, the penetrating seer, is just another form of the pure and flowing. He is the benefactor of all five types of men and is the preceder at sacrifices. Hymned by the great, we solicit His blessings. 20

O adorable Lord, the doer of good, may you bestow upon us brightness and brave offspring. May He grant me wealth in plenty for our nourishment. 21

Visible to all like the sun, the divine elixir hastens and proceeds ahead against all evil forces, whilst appropriate praises are offered by worshippers. 22

Repeatedly purified and adorned by the leading priests, the drops of elixir, rich in food, and meant for sustenance, flow on and on continuously; may it be the beholder of all. 23

The purified elixir generates the veracious, all-pervading, bright-shinning light and destroys the gloomy darkness. 24

Ever-flowing have been the gladsome swift-moving streams of the purifid elixir, brilliant and radiating; may the elixir be the destroyer of darkness. 25

The purified elixir, effusing in streams, riding over the best of the chariots, most radiant with beauteous splendours, green-tinted, invoked by the group of mortals— 26

—may the purified elixir, the most liberal dispenser of food, pervade the world with its rays, granting excellent progeny to the worshipper. 27

The cosmic elixir when effused drops through the fleecy supra-psychic filter, and as filtrate it passes on to the resplendent self. 28

These stems of the plants sport with the stones upon the cattle hide, while crushed and bruised, and the elixir is finally made available for self's exhilaration. 29

O all-pure blissful sap of life, bless us, so that, we may live long with that bright and nutritious milk of yours which has been brought from heaven. 30

67

You are, O Lord of elixir, most exhilarating, and most powerful; you have been ever kind to us when you shed your joyous stream of bliss, while we are engaged in our dedicated performances. May you, the bestower of wealth, continue to flow on and on as ever. 1

When effused, you are the giver of joy to our leading men. You are the bestower (of sustenance). You are ever the best joy giver. With all your nutrient juice, you are an intelligent associate of the resplendent self. 2

Crushed and effused by the pressing stones, you proceed with loud roar (to the receptacle) in a stream; may you grant us bright excellent strength. 3

Divine drops of elixir of spirituality, when effused, flow through the ultra-psychic woollen filter; (the filtrate) comes out (in a stream) with loud roar,—green-tinted and strength-giving. 4

O elixir of divine love, you hasten through the ultra-psychic woollen filter; you grant us food and riches. O blissful Lord, grant us strength and wealth of speech and wisdom. 5

O blissful Lord of divine elixir bring us thousand-fold wealth, consisting of hundreds of cows; grant us excellent wisdom and vigour. 6

The purified swift-flowing divine juices passing through the ultra-psychic filters reach the resplendent self by their own paths. 7

The sages from olden times have been pouring the excellent-sap of the bliss-plant into the ultra-psychic filter after expression, and the clarified juice goes to the resplendent self for whom it is actually meant. 8

The (ten) fingers express the purified honey-dropping heroic elixir; may you, the devotees, hail it with songs of praise. 9

May the automation-borne nourisher be our protector on all his paths. May He bestow charming virtues on us. 10

This divine elixir flows for the nourisher, decorated with a tiara, providing a sap like butter; may he grant charming virtues to us. 11

This divine elixir is poured forth for you, O shining (nourisher); it flows like clarified sacred butter, may you grant charming virtues to us. 12

O divine elixir, impeller of the poets, whilst they utter their words of praise, flow in a stream; you are the dispenser of treasure among Nature's bounties. 13

He hastens to the ultra-psychic receptacles as a falcon enters its nest and enters the receptacle with a screaming sound. 14

Your loving juice; O Lord of bliss, spreads around when effused into the receptacle as a swift falcon rushes along. 15

O divine elixir, super-sweet and flavoured, may you flow onward giving exhilaration to the resplendent self. 16

The elixir is let loose for the banquet of Nature's bounties, like chariots seeking wealth. 17

These effused elixirs, brilliant and extremely exhilarating, are let forth with the speed and sound of the wind for the sake of virile activity. 18

Bruised with the stones and effused, O divine elixir, you enter the ultra-psychic filter bestowing virility upon your praiser. 19

This elixir, bruised (with stones) and praised, the destroyer, plunges through the ultra-psychic woollen filter, and is the destroyer of evil hurdles. 20

Whatever fear seizes me, near at hand or far away, may you be pleased to dispel that. 21

May that divine elixir, the beholder of all, pure and purifier, purify us now by his purifying power. 22

O adorable Lord, with that lustre which is within you, may you purify us. May you purify us with your spiritual enlightenment. 23

Purify us, O adorable Lord, with that pure radiance which is yours; may you purify us with your divine love. 24

O impeller, O light, purify me by your processes of filtration and of effusion both; purify me from every side. 25
